As expected, the eight-headed monster came, stuck its eight heads into the eight jars and drunk the wine lustily until it became thoroughly intoxicated and slept on the spot. Whereupon Susano-no-Mikoto drew his sword and cut the serpent into pieces. While cutting the tail, he found the edge of his sword chipped. Upon inspection, he obtained a marvelous sword from inside the tail. He named the weapon as Murakumo-no-tsurugi, or Sword of Rising Clouds, because many-fold clouds were rising from the spot where the monster lay dead. As he believed that it did not belong to him, he offered it to the Sun Goddess. The sword was a rare article and his elder sister made it one of the three Imperial Regalia, the other two being the Mirror and the Jewel. The sacred sword is still preserved and enshrined in the Atsuta Shrine in Atsuta, near Nagoya, as the object of worship.

Married Couple's Daughter

Susano-no-Mikoto married the daughter of the old couple he saved and lived in Izumo. According to Nihongi, or Chronicle of Japan, compiled early in the eighth century, he composed a poem in praise of his wife, which reads;

Yakumo tatsu
Izumo yaegaki tsumagome ni
Yaegaki tsukuru
sono yaegaki o.

The poem perhaps means that "I live with my wife a happy home life in Izumo where eight-fold clouds are rising from the mountain."

By the way, Lafcadio Hearn married with a Japanese woman, assumed the Japanese name Koizumi Yakumo and lived in Matsue, a city near the Izumo Shrine, for many years. The name Koizumi is his wife's family name and Yakumo is taken from the first word of the poem, meaning eight-fold clouds, because he loved the atmosphere of Izumo so well.

Okuninushi-no-Mikoto was one of the children born to Susano-no-Mikoto and his consort. He was, therefore, a nephew of the Sun Goddess. He conquered and subjugated the northwestern district of the main island far and wide with Izumo as the center of his activities and became the virtual ruler of the district. It was about that time that Sun Goddess at the Takamagahara, the divine abode, who decided to unify the country, sent her representatives to Okuninushi-no-Mikoto to surrender the land he conquered.

After a series of negotiations, Okuninushi-no-Mikoto finally gave up the land he held to the Sun Goddess and resolved to live in the present site of the Izumo Shrine in retirement. The Sun Goddess, who was very much pleased with his proposal, immediately built a splendid residence for her nephew's abode.

This abode of Okuninushi-no-Mikoto is the prototype of the present Izumo Shrine. The shrine architecture, therefore, is most ancient in its style, known as Taisha style, with its entrance located in the same direction with the gable, while most of shrine buildings have their entrances on the side of the roof sweeping down to the eaves.

In this abode, Okuninushi-no-Mikoto lived all his life attended by Ame-no-hohi-no-Mikoto. Since that time, the head of the Baron Senge and Baron Kitajima families, both descendants of Ame-no-hohi-no-Mikoto, have been serving the Izumo Shrine alternately as the chief priests.

JAPAN'S ART HOLDS TRAITS OF COUNTRY

Ancient Work Preserves Intact Characteristics of Modern Nation

A unique character of Japanese art lies in the fact that it preserves all national traits in their original forms, and this is possible only for a country like Japan whose nation consists of one race, according to Nyozekan Hasegawa.

Mr. Hasegawa, a leading critic of this country, alleges in the Nichi Nichi that the proto-national traits of the Japanese have been transmitted from the days of the Gods as perfectly as if they were the traits seen in one person which goes on throughout his life. This is to say that Japan, unlike other countries, has been maintained by a single race from the time of national foundation. No other race has taken the place of the Yamato race, the only inhabitants of this country.

Another thing about Japanese art, or rather the literature of the country, to be specially noted in this connection is that literary criticism, generally alleged to be a very modern product of Europe, had its start as early as the 11th century. Lady Murasaki (d.1025 A.D.) in her noted work, "The Tale of Genji," says (if translated into the modern way of wording) that there are two kinds of fiction, one inclined to realism and the other to romanticism.

Appreciated Universally

Referring to the preservation of time-old traits in Japanese art, Mr. Hasegawa claims that all these traits are being readily appreciated by the average present-day Japanese, owing, he thinks, to a rare historical fact that the single-racedness of Japanese continues from time immemorial.

"What then are the general characteristics of Japanese art?" the critic asks himself. Then he goes on to analyze them from two standpoints of view, the form and the substance making up the art, especially the former. He says:

"From the angle of form, Japanese art, more particularly its literature may be described: (1) it is the phonetic expression of Japanese speech; (2) all forms of literature and other kinds of art, which have come and gone in their respective domains, have been preserved until the present day; and (3) every form of art has some direct connections with the life of the people at large.

"In Western countries, national languages were born in modern times. This is to be seen in the fact that the German people had been in the habit of using French up till around Emanuel Kant's time. Japan is quite different in this respect. We had no means of describing the language until we imported the Chinese characters, it is true. As to our language itself, however, it existed long before, which has been transmitted to our time without undergoing any remarkable change in its most fundamental phases. The borrowing of the Chinese character in a later period did not retard the growth of our literature.

"All the very best ancient classics in Japan had their start in memorizing facts by professional memorizing men. That made the wordings of books exceedingly phonetic. These books, although written in Chinese characters, carried the words as they were spoken, the characters serving merely as phonetic symbols. This, in my opinion, will not reduce the artistic values of the documents in any way, in view of the admitted fact talkies and gramophone records are becoming one of the fine artistic categories.

"As to the all-retaining characteristic of Japanese art, I would give our Court music as an instance. This music was born in China, but that country was lost to it long ago. The same music is being enjoyed in the same way it was presumably done by people a thousand years ago. Other examples are the Noh play, Kabuki and Joruri. The merits of these arts, though legitimately belonging to the ancient or the middle ages, are being appreciated as ever by the Japanese, which may be taken as a fine testimony to the fact that the Japanese nation never completely loses what their ancestors created at various stages of the national history.

With Daily Life

"The fact that all types of Japanese arts have been based on the daily life of the people will be agreed by any casual survey of Japanese history, or even of the everyday life of the Japanese at present. The Noh play, for example, was once regarded as one of the indispensable accomplishments of the Samurai classes during the Kamakura period. By learning the secrets of the Noh, the Samurai were expected to attain refinement of their manners and speech.

"The same is true with our present-day amusement arts. The 'rakugo' (the art of amusing people by the most humorous use of words), which apparently has nothing to do with the cultural growth of the average people, has actually many sides contributing to cultural and moral refinement. Indeed, it is far beyond the outsider to correctly imagine the hard training every 'rakugo' speaker undergoes to have the real secret of the art."

Mr. Hasegawa, referring lastly to the alleged Westernization encroaching upon these species of Japanese art, said that this tendency is true to some extent but that it would not go so far as to uproot the racial characters roughly mentioned above.

Y.C.A.C. BALL PRACTICE ON THURSDAY AFTERNOON

Captain Requests All Members To Turn Out for First Meeting

The Yokohama Country and Athletic Club baseball team will hold its first practice of the season on Thursday from 5 p.m. on at the club grounds. Captain "Bucky" Harriss has requested all members interested to turn out for this initial gathering, especially as arrangements are now being made to hold the premier game of the year on Saturday afternoon.

With the Kobe Regatta and Athletic Club nine already playing this season, an interport contest this fall is practically assured, and the resumption of this annual fixture is expected to add considerably to the interest in the sport at the Negishi club this year.

The following are being asked to make a special effort to attend Thursday's practice:

F. R. Harriss, P. H. Kipp, W. Blamey, S. G. Bielous, N. Bond, G. E. Beatty, L. A. M. Frank, C. Fernandes, J. da Costa, F. R. Devin, E. Eastlake and F. da Silva.

POPULATION GROWTH IS TO BE FOSTERED

Government Planning All Possible Measures to Maintain Historic Increase

That the rise and fall of nations follow the rise and fall of populations has been proved since the days of the ancient Greeks and Romans. It is with this in view that the Japanese Government is now planning every possible measure to keep up Japan's historical increase of population, the Social Affairs Bureau of the Welfare Ministry announces in the May 7 issue of the Weekly Report published by the Information Board.

As indicated in the Life of Crown Prince Shotoku, the population of this country in 589 A.D., during the reign of the Emperor Sushun, totalled 3,931,151. In 1572-86, the population increased to about 18,000,000, according to the late Dr. Togo Yoshida. Around 1846 about 26,000,000 population was registered officially, which increased to 73,000,000 last year as shown by the census taken that year. These records all tell the healthy and rapid growth of the Yamato race.

Regrettable Tendency

Lately, however, a regrettable tendency is revealed by the population records. The peak of population increase in modern days was reached in 1920 when the increase per 1,000 was 36.1, since when the rate has shown a gradual decrease. The increase per 1,000 fell off to 25.7 in 1938. Especially remarkable in this connection is the death rate of infants.

A few years ago, the Weekly Report explains, the Government established an institute for research in population problems, through which varied data have been obtained to aid the Government in planning the best policy for the healthy growth of the population. As a result an outline was formed by the present Cabinet of its population policy on January 22 this year. The outline provides that the whole nation should be fully awakened to the urgent need of increasing the population. The public should completely abandon the retrogressive attitude of evading pregnancy. Instead, they ought to closely cooperate with the Government in its move to raise the birth rate of the nation.

Concrete Measures

The Welfare Ministry, meantime, had been contemplating some concrete measures to effect realization of this national objective. On November 3, last year, on the auspicious occasion of Meiji-Setsu, anniversary of the Great Emperor Meiji, 10,622 couples were commended by the Welfare Minister for their many offspring. A similar event is now being arranged by the Ministry for Meiji-Setsu this year.

On the coming occasion, the Welfare Ministry states, one thing which was not realized previously will be added to the official commendation. Of those to be honored, the parents who cannot afford to pay education costs for their children in middle and higher schools will be partly or fully aided by the Government. This new development in the national policy for the increase of population is anticipated by the Government to bring in a vigorous tendency throughout the nation toward a rapid increase in the number of children.

Among qualifications to be selected for commendation are: (1) Each couple must have more than 10 children of the same parentage, and the children must be more than six years old; (2) these children must not have dead brothers or sisters, except those killed in warfare or in natural calamities; (3) all the children must be healthy in body and mind, injuries sustained in warfare or natural calamities excepted; and (4) parents and children must be well bred.

Method of Selection

Last year, according to the above-mentioned stipulations, the first candidates were selected throughout the country on May 31 by the authorities of towns and villages, who recommended their selections to the prefectural governors, who, in turn, reported to the Welfare Minister those selected from among the recommended ones. The final selection was made of 10,622 couples, each of whom were given on Emperor Meiji's Day a prize and commendation by the Minister through the prefectural governors.

Looking over the list of those commended on the last occasion, the Weekly Report says, one notices that the commended couple were found more in villages than in large towns. More than 65 per cent of the couples were among the farming population. Then, nearly 65 per cent of them were in the middle strata in social standing and fewest were among the upper classes. From the angle of parents' ages, most commended couples had their first children at ages between 20 and 25 years, the total number of whom reached nearly half of the entire group.

In consideration of these facts, the Welfare Ministry decided to grant schooling expenses to prolific families who cannot afford to educate their children in the middle and higher schools. The new measure will operate as follows:

Of those commended for prolificity by the Welfare Ministry, the couples will be provided with education expenses by the Government on condition that: (1) they are going to educate their children at their own discretion; (2) their financial ability is not enough to educate their children in middle or higher schools; (3) they have no other source from which to obtain funds for their children's education; (4) the children to be schooled are both physically and mentally sound; and (5) the children's scholastic records so far promise a bright future for them.

The Government's grant in each case will not exceed ¥200 a year for children attending middle schools and ¥500 a year for those attending colleges and universities.

FULL HOUSE ENJOYS GORO'S PLAYS DAILY

Dramatic Episode of Russo-Japanese War Staged in Connection With Navy Day

Soganoya-no-Goro and his dramatic troupe again did not fail the expectation of large audiences packing the vast Shinbashi Embujo during the June performance when laughters and tears freely flowed through their skillful acting of the four plays of the month's repertory.

"Enemy Squadron, Ahoy," the first play on the program, is based on the historical background of the Russo-Japanese War of 1904-5. The play, constituting three scenes, opens on a small island off the southernmost tip of the Japanese archipelago. The raised curtain reveals a number of aged people, women and children of a fishing village gathered about, expressing their fears regarding the news of the approaching Russian Baltic Squadron toward the Japanese waters.

Soon after a group of fishermen led by their leader, Zengyu Okihana, the role acted by Goro, appears exhausted and hungry after their thrilling escape from the hands of a Russian warship. Okihana describes their adventure as follows. When they were fishing in their boat on seas far off the island, a warship followed by another and another appeared suddenly on the horizon. It was too late when the fishermen discerned that the warships were those of the Russian Baltic Squadron. They were captured and examined. A fisherman among them, whose features bore striking resemblance to that of the Chinese, succeeded in convincing the Russians with bits of Chinese words which he knew, that they were Chinese fishermen and not Japanese. After being liberated, the fishermen rowed for their dear lives back to the island.

To Nearest Station

After describing their thrilling escape, Okinaha persuaded the Governor of the island to let him and some of his comrades to go and notify the wireless station on an island about two days of hard rowing away, of the news that the long-awaited Russian fleet was approaching Japan. Okinaha and his four comrades rowed for full 19 hours through lashing stormy waves toward the island where the wireless station was located. The stage representation of waves, wind and the stormy conditions is very realistic and excellent. They succeeded in reaching the station half-dead from exhaustion only to find out that the news of the approaching Russian Fleet had been known to the Japanese Navy about an hour before. Disappointed but with satisfaction of knowing that they had tried their best in the cause of their country, the fishermen return to their lonely island.

"Kyo Ningyo" or the "Doll of Kyoto" is the second play constituting four scenes. Goro appears as Hidari Jingoro, the doll maker. He is seen admiring a beautiful life-size doll which he created. It is known through the conversation exchanged between him and his apprentice that the doll was modelled after the beautiful well-known Oiran, Koguruma Daiyu, whom he happened to see one day and whose beauty he could not forget. His wife had returned to her home, leaving Jingoro, envious of the attention paid by her husband to the beautiful doll. A friend comes in a role of a mediator and succeeds in convincing Jingoro that his wife would return if he destroyed the doll.

Explains Situation

After much hesitation and hard thinking, Jingoro consents to the destruction of his masterpiece. Midst tears he destroys the doll with an ax and burns the remains. Hidecho, who acted the role of the doll, appears as the Koguruma Daiyu with her attendance at the home of Hidari Jingoro. She had been attracted by rumors of the beautiful doll said to have been modelled after her. She asks Jingoro to allow her to see the doll. Perplexed and regretting his rashness, Jingoro tells her that he had destroyed it so as to be on good terms with her wife again.

At that moment his wife accompanied with her father comes to the house. Not knowing what to do, Jingoro asks Koguruma Daiyu to impersonate as the doll which he just destroyed, and hides her in a big box. He does this because he did not know what would happen if his wife, who was jealous enough of the doll modelled after Koguruma Daiyu, finds the beautiful Oiran in person at her home. Showing the ashes of the destroyed doll, Jingoro convinces his wife and his step-father that there is no more cause for controversy between him and his wife.

His step-father, however, becomes suspicious of the inside of the large box herein Koguruma Daiyu is hidden. While Jingoro is trying to stop his step-father from looking inside the box, Koguruma Daiyu comes out as a living doll. The curtain draws with Jingoro's wife and step-father astonished and afraid of the doll who can move and speak as a human being as they still believed that Koguruma Daiyu was the doll which Jingoro said he had destroyed.

The following third play, "Blue Sky," is based or modern times. Goro appears as a ragwoman pulling her cart and ringing her bell crying "Any rags to sell? Any rags to sell?" The curtain rises on the first scene showing the ragwoman and her cart in front of a rich home. The neighbors are attracted by the comical song of the ragwoman which she sings with the accompaniment of her bell in an attempt to buy rags, old newspapers and other junk. When she makes a mistake in weighing newspapers which the housewife of a foreman of coolies had sold her, she is hit on the head by the foreman. The housewife sells her the newspapers and a bundle of magazines after her hubsand had gone away as she was touched by the story of the ragwoman who is having a difficult time in sending her daughter to girls' high school after her husband's death.

When the foreman returns he suddenly flies into a rage when he learns that his wife had sold the bundle of magazines that was in his room. He goes after in search of the ragwoman. The following scene shows the poor house of the ragwoman. Her daughter is preparing dinner while waiting for her mother's return. She becomes very happy when her mother returns with some magazines along with other junk as she likes to read although not possessing sufficient means to purchase books and magazines. To her great surprise and her mother's astonishment which turned later into joy she discovers a ¥100 bill hidden in one of the magazines.

A controversy occurs between the daughter and her mother over the discovery. The mother insists on keeping the ¥100 bill in order to pay the doctor's bills for her daughter who was inflicted with bad lungs while the daughter tells her mother that it is wrong to keep it and should be returned to the person who sold the magazines. The daughter finally succeeds in convincing her mother to return the bill and goes herself to the place of the person who sold the magazines.

The foreman comes later to the ragwoman's home and is overjoyed at finding the magazines which his wife had sold. He discovers four of the five ¥100 bills which he hid in the magazine but could not find the missing bill. When the ragwoman tells him that her daughter went to his home to return the ¥100 bill, he becomes perplexed as he had purposely hidden the money away from his wife in order to use it as funds for betting on horseraces. He decides, however, that he could explain the things over about the ¥100 bill to his wife and tries to bribe the ragwoman not to tell his wife that there were five ¥100 bills hidden in the magazine. The ragwoman refuses on the grounds that telling lies is not a right thing to do in the current times. The foreman is convinced of his wrong intentions and resolves to quit betting on horses and lead an understanding happy life with his wife, who is in poor health, in order to make her well again.

Tribute to Goto on Port's Opening

Upon the occasion of the coming formal opening of Keihin port on May 20, Mayor Tomejiro Okubo of Tokyo Wednesday reported the auspicious event to the spirit of the late Count Shimpei Goto, who for many years entertained an ideal that such a port might some day be opened. He is shown in the picture reverently pausing before the grave of the peer at Aoyama cemetery.

NEW DEFENSE PLANS DATE BACK TO SATO

Pre-Meiji Economist Proposed Wartime Unification System Years Ago

Japan's epochal plan for State Planning with particular reference to the establishment of a high-geared defense State, which has been studied by the Cabinet Planning Board since its founding several years ago and made one of the serious national policies, is nothing new to this country. The plan is not in imitation of any other country, but with Japan, which remained inactive like an oyster in its shell through its seclusion policy for more than two centuries, this was initiated by Nobuhiro Sato, probably the greatest economist before the Meiji Era, according to an article run by the Kokumin.

The high-tension defense State plan is gradually gaining way, as the Government is putting it into practice, taking advantage of the present wartime structure. Sato died in 1840, just a century and one year ago, at the advanced age of 82 after publishing a great number of books mainly related to practical economy. He was one of Japan's most versatile and progressive scholars of the Tokugawa, Shogunate days, learning Western science through the Dutch language. Sato came from a family of progressive-minded scholars who were for two generations in the Tohoku. Japan today still learns considerable from suggestions and ideas based on experiences from Sato's valuable books. The Kokumin article runs substantially as follows:

His grandfather, popularly known by the name Fumaiken, was an authority on mining and was also an agronomical expect. His father, Nobuhide, was a scholar of economics and agricultural problems. Sato himself was not only a scholar of astronomy, geography, industrial science, military strategy and gunnery as well as agricultural policies etc., but he was a progressive-minded patriot and politician whose theories on State land planning are comparable to those which are being seriously considered by the Konoye Cabinet.

He emphasized the necessity of establishing a firm national defense State by making a thorough renovation of the political structure of the nation. He even went so far as to point out the necessity of checking the southward advance of Russia by taking the northern district of Vladivostok and also taking possession of the South Sea Islands to check Great Britain's northward pressure.

Aided by Father

The political theories which Sato proposed were influenced a great deal by the research on natural resources relating to armament productions compiled by his father. His father's publications on national defense were a great source of information for the progressive-minded scholar.

Among his theories, however, what is most attractive at the present time is his ideas on State land planning, a topic of discussion in the government regarding the reorganization of the structure of prefectural government.

He advocated the necessity of dividing the land into sections according to geographical, political, economic and national defense purposes so as to consolidate the nation into one unit which could be mobilized at any time in an emergency. Tokyo, then called Yedo, would be the center of the State, according to his plan, and the whole nation would be divided into two prefectures and 14 provinces. Each province would have a governor and in several provinces of strategic importance, a supreme governor would be installed to guard against invasion. Furthermore, according to his new structure in State planning, different regions of commercial and industrial as well as cultural importance would be established, thus making the entire nation a unified territory of various blocs.

At a time when the nation is being consolidated into a new structure to meet demands of war-time conditions, the theories of Sato are exceedingly interesting to recall.

ST. JOSEPH'S HOLDS TRACK, FIELD MEET

200 Students Compete in 40th Annual Meet—No Records Broken

St. Joseph's College held its 40th annual field day Wednesday on the school grounds, 85 Bluff, Yokohama, with practically all of the more than two hundred students participating in some of the numerous events.

Although no records were broken, most of the track and field competitions were keenly contested, and the large number of parents, relatives, alumni and friends who attended considered it one of the most successful in the school's history. The field day had originally been scheduled for Tuesday, but was postponed a day on account of rain.

The program commenced at 9:30 a.m., and after a luncheon intermission from noon to 1:30 p.m., it was concluded at 6 o'clock with the presentation of prizes by Angelo Ferrari, Panamanian Minister to Tokyo.

Yoshiyasu Kiyono won the senior championship by obtaining 20 points out of a possible 25, each student being permitted to enter five events, and five points being given for a first place. John Kranz was runner-up with 19 points, and Hans Wolschke was tied with Dimitry Vorobiov for third place with 15 points apiece.

Kiyono Wins Cup

Kiyono won the school's senior championship cup and also the President of Panama Challenge Cup, a gift of Mr. Ferrari. Permanent possession of the latter trophy will be gained by the student who wins the school's senior championship three times in succession.

Nickita Petroff was the victor in the first junior division with 20 points. In second place was William Gordes, who had 19.

Min Chew gained top honors in the second junior division with a total of 22 points. Besides winning a silver cup presented by the school, he also gained the Yokohama Sports Club Challenge Shield awarded annually to the student obtaining the highest score in the meet. Alfred Sikos was runner-up in this group with 12 points.

In the third junior division Lachman Daswani was the winner with 20 points. Next in line was Pou Shou with 15.

The minims had a number of events in age groups from six to 12 under the supervision of A. Higli who has been in charge of the youngest boys' races for more than 30 years.

The program got under way with the students lining up for the opening parade. Led by the school's Boy Scout drum and bugle corps, they marched around the field to the flag poles for the hoisting of the Japanese and school flags. Each class had several huge posters picturing some athletic event and bearing slogans to spur their classmates on to victory. After the flag raising the school director, William Ambrose, addressed the student body, recalling the achievements of former students and the characteristic track and field day spirit.

After the regular events were concluded, a mirth-provoking obstacle race, in which four teams competed, was held. Students crawled under carpets, through ladders, rolled the heavy iron balls used for shot putting with their feet and ran in sacks to provide a lot of fun for the spectators.

The competitors then lined up again, and led by the Boy Scout drum and bugle corps marched to the flag poles as the band played lively marches. After the flags had been lowered to the strains of Retreat, the students marched to the presentation stand for the awarding of prizes.

Thanks Spectators

The school director thanked the spectators for having supported the meet, especially those who had given their assistance in many ways. He mentioned in particular C. T. Mayes, general supervisor and M. V. Fachtmann, starter, who have acted in these capacities for many years. Mr. Mayes has been an official at these meets for nearly 40 years.

Mr. Ambrose then introduced Mr. Ferrari, Minister for Panama at Tokyo. After presenting the prizes Mr. Ferrari made a short speech in which he mentioned the importance of sport in building up sound bodies and the development of sportsmanship.

The school awarded 36 prizes to the winners in the four older groups, and these included sliver cups, ornaments, buckles, buttons and tie clasps. The minims had all received gifts after their events were concluded earlier in the day.

Thursday was declared a holiday in order to permit the students to get over their strenuous endeavors and the excitement of the meet.

Th officials were as follows:

W. Ambrose, president; A. Higli, C. Imhoff and J. Brandmeier, faculty supervisors; M. V. Fachtmann, starter; A. Haegli, E. Assel and H. Gerard, timers and judges; F. Sauer, scorer, and C. T. Mayes, general supervisor.

The student committee consisted of D. Vorobiov, chairman, R. Lew, secretary, and K. Balabushkin, D. de Britto, K. Chikamoto, E. Eymard, E. Gordes, B. Ogorodnikov, S. Petroff and H. Wolschke.

POTATOES ROTTING ON KYUSHU FARMS

New Laws and Farmers' Attempt at Profiteering Held Responsible

More than 33,000 tons of sweet potatoes are simply being left to rot in Kyushu and in the neighboring prefectures of Tokyo on account of the clumsy prefectural decrees checking the interprefectural commerce of food stuffs.

Housewives in this city or in any other urban districts in Japan who haven't seen their beloved food, raw or baked, in grocery stores for a long time, would not believe this story. But this is no joke, says the Asahi.

The enforcement of the chit-book system for the distribution of rice on April 1 pushed sweet potatoes up to national prominence from obscurity, the Government shouting at the top of its voice, "Eat potatoes, and save rice."

Having noted the hey day for this precious substitute for rice shortly ahead, farmers tried to get smart and suddenly became reluctant to sell their potatoes to the visiting buyers from large cities. Easy money by hoarding potatoes; This is what the farmers aimed at.

But things did not drift in the direction they had hoped. They know that they can't keep them in store too long and that they have to plant new potatoes before the summer.

Before hills of potatoes piled up in the backyards of their homes, they stood with folded arms, and heaved long sighs. "Something has to be done quick, otherwise we might lose all," they thought and finally issued an S.O.S. to the green markets in large cities.

Approximately 24,000 tons of sweet potatoes are just piled up for nothing in Kumamoto, Oita and Saga Prefectures in Kyushu today. Ibaragi Prefecture has an excess of some 1,700 tons while the surplus of potatoes in Tochigi Prefecture is estimated at about 1,300 tons. Not falling far behind them, Shizuoka keeps in store some 800 tons.

Farmers Share Guilt

What has made the farmers to build such magnificent pyramids of sweet potatoes, anyway? Apparently the clamoring for easy money by hoarding them on the part of the farmers is one thing. But the more direct and important cause for the bottleneck in the flow of potatoes in this country is, according to the paper, the large gap between the official prices fixed for potatoes for alcohol manufacturing purposes and potatoes for eating purposes.

Another potential reason for that is the prefectural decrees checking the interprefectural commerce of food stuffs, says the paper.

Again and again, the Agriculture and Forestry Ministry, anxious to improve the demand and supply conditions of the goods in urban areas, asked the governors of large potato growing prefectures to ship potatoes to cities in great quantities.

The governors of these prefectures, however, only made elusive replies to the Ministry each time and failed to comply with the ardent wishes of it. As the governors insisted on declaring that the supply of potatoes in their prefectures was by no means surplus, the Ministry could not press them any harder.

These governors were wrong in their estimation, and the farmers in these prefectures were also wrong in their guess.

Things went from bad to worse as time sped on until they were compelled to issue an S.O.S. to the Sweet Potato Wholesalers' Association here and other similar organizations in other large cities for the immediate purchase of their surplus potatoes which are now giving a strong headache to all of their possessors.

2 FOOTBALL FINALS END IN SAME MANNER

Leading Games in England Finish With One Goal-All Draws

Reuters

LONDON, May 14.—The two national Association Football finals ended in one goal-all draws yesterday, when the Arsenal-Preston game ended in this way, as also did the Rangers-Heart of Midlothian encounter at Glasgow.

Both games drew capacity crowds of the maximum wartime size, 75,000 watching the game at Ibrox Park and 50,000 the Cup Final at Wembley.

The Wembley game was contested with all the grimness and vigor of prewar encounters, and it is generally agreed to have been one of the best finals ever seen at this venue.

After a thrilling opening, when Leslie Compton, the Arsenal inside-left, failed with a penalty in the second minute of the game, the Preston goalkeeper Fairbrother making a brilliant full-length save, the game remained close and thrilling to the end, which was surprising in view of the lack of training facilities.

Receive Small Pay

Although the players are only receiving a fraction of their peace-time wages, they practically played themselves to a standstill. Preston, with a fine blending of youth and experience, were superior in all phases of the game during the first half, the clever, nippy forwards, with their more direct methods, worrying the stolid Arsenal defense.

After the five first minutes of thrills, Preston took the lead, McLaren scoring with a splendid shot. Arsenal gradually overcame their initial nervousness and uncertainty, and began to master their opponents and harass their defense, when Fairbrother repeatedly saved the situation.

Six minutes from half-time, the Arsenal pressure was rewarded, when the left-winger, Denis Compton, atoned for his brother's earlier mistake and equalized.

Ding-dong play featured the second half, with Arsenal repeatedly swarming round the Preston goal, but there was no further score. The replay will probably take place at Manchester, this being the first time in the history of the Wembley cup finals that the game has been left undecided.

At Glasgow, the Hearts often threatened during the opening half, but it was not until eight minutes from the interval that they took the lead, when Walker scored from a melee.

The Rangers tried their hardest to get on terms, and when the teams changed ends they gradually forced the Hearts on to the defensive, and were rewarded when Marshall broke through to tie the scores and force a replay, which will take place next Saturday.

Police Confer on Means Of Keeping Order When Waseda and Keio Clash

Most of the 74,000 admission tickets to the traditional baseball games between Waseda and Keio Universities to be held at the Meiji Shrine Field Saturday and Sunday have been sold out. Means of maintaining order and discipline among the huge crowds of spectators on the two days were decided on by the Yotsuya and Aoyama police stations and the management of the Outer Gardens of the Shrine at their meeting Wednesday, says Domei. Persons in possession of tickets will all be able to have seats. About 100 plainclothesmen from the above two stations will be stationed at the Shinanomachi Station entrance, at points at 4-chome, 1-chome Aoyama, the Outer Gardens and the Gondawara entrance. They will maintain order among spectators arriving at the above points in automobiles. Long queues of persons waiting all night to get good seats in the stands will be prohibited. Spectators will be admitted to the field at 5 a.m., an hour earlier than the customary time. They are cautioned not to walk on the lawn of the Outer Gardens or to ruin the shrubbery there. The police are requesting the spectators to set an example of model traffic morals and also not to come and see the games in their private automobiles.

Y.C.A.C. NINE MEETING ST. JOSEPH'S SATURDAY

Opening Game of Season for Both Clubs in Yokohama

The Yokohama Country and Athletic Club's baseball team will play against the St. Joseph's College nine on Saturday at 3 p.m. on the former's grounds. It will be the first appearance of both teams this season.

The Negishi club players have been weakened considerably by the loss of a number of last year's regulars, but it is reported that there will be some new additions to the Y.C. and A.C. roster this season which may strengthen it to some extent.

The students also have lost some of their players through graduation, but from advance reports, they have some good material, and it is expected that the S.J.C. nine will develop well as the season gets under way.

The Y.C. and A.C. line-up on Saturday will probably include the following and perhaps some others:

F. R. Harriss (captain), P. H. Kipp vice-captain), L. N. Haum, (manager), W. Blamey, G. E. Beatty, S. G. Bielous, N. Bond, J. da Costa, F. R. Devin, C. Fernandes, I. A. M. Frank, E. Eastlake and F. da Silva.

WASEDA AND KEIO SERIES ON TODAY

Traditional Baseball Rivalry Renewed at Meiji Stadium As Teams Clash

The oldest baseball rivalry in collegiate circles will be resumed this afternoon and Sunday when Waseda and Keio meet in this semi-annual two game series starting at 1:30 p.m. at the Meiji Shrine stadium.

The Blue Ribbon event of the Tokyo Intercollegiate Baseball League, the games are expected to be witnessed by an over-flowing crowd of 70,000 both days. To add further to the attractiveness of the event, the outcome of the clashes will count heavily in the final league standings, of the fast closing spring season.

Waseda, tied with Meiji for the league-leadership, with four victories and a defeat can, by sweeping both games, take the favorite spot to dethrone last fall's champion, Meiji. A split will assure them temporary leadership, but with the Meiji series coming up next Saturday and Sunday, a defeat will hurt.

Keio on the other hand, is hot on the heels of the co-leaders in second place, with 3 victories a tie and a defeat. If the Mita nine can score a win today or tomorrow, the pennant race promises to be a grand scramble, with each of the "big three" Meiji, Waseda and Keio in the picture to the final week. However, two defeats this week-end will practically throw Keio out of the spring honors.

Little pre-game dope is to be had on these games today and tomorrow. This situation, no doubt, comes about since the series is being played much earlier than at any time in the last several years.

While neither team has come up with any crushing attack, Keio, with a trio of steady pitchers, can be said to have an edge on Waseda, which must depend on its only first line pitcher, Ishiguro. Then again, the Mita nine appears to have an infield second to none in the league. However, the record places Weseda on a slight advantage against the same opponents and as such may be the steadier outfit.

For Keio, tall southpaw Takatsuka is expected to start on the mound opposing Ishiguro, a right hander. Takatsuka this season has already chucked a no-run no-hitter against Imperial, while Ishiguro has worked in every game, suffering but a 1-0 loss to the unpredictable Hosei nine. Backing up Takatsuka will be Shiraki, who has hurled two wins in league play.

district on their right and the historic Sumida River, in which the golden image of Goddess of Mercy was found, on their left. The point at which the three fishermen brothers are said to have landed with the golden image is marked with the Komagata-do, a small temple, near the Komagata Bridge across the Sumida River.

The Komagata-do is intimately associated with a famous Hokku, 17 syllable verse, which was composed by Takao, a beautiful and accomplished inmate of the Miuraya-house in the compound of the Yoshiwara, who was patronized by the feudal lord of Sendai. The verse reads: "Kimi wa ima Komagata atari hototogisu," suggesting she was thinking of him that "It is about the time my lord is passing near the Komagata Temple on the bank as he is floating down stream of the Sumida in his barge, listening to the song of cuckoo. The name of this small temple would never have been so deeply impressed upon the minds of the Tokyo people had it not been for this Hokku.

The accomplished Takao must have been leaning on the railing of the balcony on the second floor of the Miura-house, and contemplating the stream of the beautiful Sumida River when she composed that famous verse, thinking lovingly of her lord,—or possibly deriding him—who had just departed in a barge for home. Whether she really loved the feudal lord or not is another story; she sent the verse to him, perhaps trying to make him believe that she was thus prey to the thought of him after he left her, that he was the ruler of her heart.

Loach Soup House

Not far from the Komagata Temple is the famous Komagata-no-dojo-jiru, or Loach-soup-house-of-Komagata, which links modern Tokyo with Yedo with a history of more than 140 years. The name is familiar to any Tokyoite even if he has never eaten the soup. It was first established at the present site early in the 19th century. The establishment catered to commoners of the Yedo period, whose pleasures in life outside the home precinct was limited chiefly to flower viewing, temple and shrine festivals and the Yoshiwara going. It was famous for its delicious food at a remarkable low price, and was one of the popular haunts for Yoshiwara goers, who stopping there early in the morning on their way home from the gay quarter.

Shokusanjin Ota, one of the literary lights of the early 19th century, observed the growing popularity of this eating shop, and a cynic as he was, tinkered with Takao's famous hokku, replacing the word "cuckoo" in her verse with the two words "loach soup" to please the pleasure loving plebeians of his time and made it mean: "It is about the time my lord is passing near the Komagata Temple on the bank of the Sumida River afoot, sniffing the smell of the dear old loach soup." So this "cuckoolessness" in the verse makes the loach soup house all the more interesting and charming to literary students of modern Tokyo.

This reminds us of the famous Hyakka-en, or One Hundred Flower Garden, in Mukojima on the opposite bank of the Sumida River from the point where the Yoshiwara is situated, which was established by literary lights of early 19th century including Shokusanjin Ota. The garden now belongs to the Tokyo Municipality as a historic spot and is open to the public. With this garden as their rendezvous, the pleasure loving literary men and watercolor artists and their kin in the realm of gentle art early in the 19th century frequented the Yoshiwara and fashionable restaurants in the neighborhood of the Asakusa Kannon Temple by means of barges.

Whether beautiful and designing Takao of the Miuraya-house was really in love with the lord of Sendai or not is a question. One version says that when he found that she was secretly in love with a handsome young man by the name of Shimada, he took her out on the Sumida River in his barge and tortured and finally killed her out of indignation over her for having pretended that she was deeply in love with him. Another story has it that the couple were profoundly in love with each other, and the feudal lord, after redeeming her from the Miuraya-house keeper by paying an enormous sum of money, took her home to his clan in Sendai and there they lived happily thereafter.

Both Shimada and the feudal lord, who were confident that Takao loved them as much as they did her, must have gasped if they learned that she in reality was in love with a young priest by the name of Dotetsu and died a few days after his death. Takao left a will requesting that she be buried close by her lover's burial spot in the cemetery of the Saihoji Temple in Asakusa. Whatever may be the case, when the Saihoji Temple moved to the district near the Koshinzuka stop on the suburban electric railway in Sugamo after the earthquake and fire of 1923, the authorities of the temple discovered two jars containing ashes underneath the tombstone of Dotetsu. The grave of Dotetsu now stands in the cemetery of the Saihoji Temple with that of Takao behind it. Both tombstones are the old ones.

TWIN SOFTBALL BILL SCHEDULED SUNDAY

League Standings Due for Reshuffle After Weekend Contests

The Pirates will meet the Cardinals, and the Ancient Mariners will face the Solons on Sunday afternoon at the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club grounds in another of the popular mixed softball doubleheaders being held there each weekend.

The Pirates-Cardinals contest is scheduled for two o'clock, and the losers will become sole occupants of the cellar position. The Ancient Mariners-Solons game will follow, and the winners will be assured of at least temporary possession of first place in the four-team league.

Five of the six games played to date have been very close, and it is expected that the two contests on Sunday will prove to be no exceptions to this rule. The large number of fans are hoping they will be as hardfought as the previous tilts, as close games always add zest to the program.

Four of the six games have been won by one run. Two of them required extra innings to decide. Another was taken by a two-run margin. The only exception to the rule was due in large part to one of the mainstays of the losers being absent.

Both the Pirates and Cardinals will be fighting for all they are worth to avoid the ignominy of the tail-end berth. The latter took a bad beating from the former in the season's opener, but with Captain Pete Kipp in the line-up this time the Cards expect they will be able to settle their account with the Pirates. Although the Cards lost to the Pirates, the latter lost to the Solons who were beaten by the Cards a week ago.

On the other hand, the Pirates figure that they beat the Cards once by a lobsided score and can do it again, even if Pete Kipp decides to stay in town this weekend in an effort to defeat them. Besides, the Pirates attribute their loss to the Solons to fifth columnist activities by the opposition, and Captain "Bucky" Harriss intends to make sure there will be no more Samson and Delilah episodes to undermine his squad.

Leadership at Stake

With the league leadership at stake, the Ancient Mariners and Solons are expected to wage a bitter battle in the nightcap. The former lost a heated and much debated 7 to 6 decision to the latter in their previous encounter, and they hope to prove that they are without doubt the better squad. The Solons are the only team to have beaten the Ancient Mariners, and the latter will undoubtedly do their best to humble their opponents.

The Solons received their first and sole setback last week when they lost by only one run after an 11-inning battle to the Cardinals. They intend to regain prestige by resuming their winning ways against the Ancient Mariners and, incidentally, to prove to the seafarers that the result of the first tilt between the two squads was not due just to luck.

All in all, with all four teams keyed up for Sunday's contests the prospects of an interesting afternoon are promising. It also looks as if Umpires George Edmondson and B. G. Ryan have another hard day's work ahead of them.

The probable line-ups follows:

Pirates: Miss V. Albeck, Miss H. Darbier, Miss P. Rau, Miss L. Salter, F. R. Harriss (captain), E. Eastlake, F. Eastlake, L. A. M. Frank, W. Blamey, C. Meyers, G. W. Gorman, P. O'Neill and J. da Silva.

Cardinals: Miss M. da Costa, Miss H. Lord, Miss J. Darbier, Miss G. Andreis, P. H. Kipp (captain), J. Dynan, M. L. Russell, E. I. da Silva, V. Levy and R. Child.

Ancient Mariners: Miss T. Planas, Miss L. Andreis, Mrs. E. Tanner, Mrs. M. L. Russell, C. Heseltine (captain), M. C. Cooke (coach), G. E. Beatty, H. A. Bird, J. da Costa, D. Dentici, D. Harvey, P. H. Lord and H. Schoene.

Solons: Miss W. Dunning, Miss M. Prohaska, Miss M. Stevens, Miss E. Papendieck, F. R. Devin (captain), S. G. Bielous, F. Rodriguez, W. A. Tomlinson, G. da Silva, C. T. Jones, C. da Souza and L. Dance.

HSINKING MANLY CITY

Manchoukuo Capital Now Ranks Third in Population

Hsinking, the capital of Manchoukuo, is remarkably masculine as far as its population is concerned, it has been found through the census of the nation taken on October 1 last year, says a Nichi Nichi dispatch from the city.

According to the official count, the total population of the capital reaches 555,009, showing that the city ranks third, after Harbin and Mukden, the largest city in the country. Of the total population of the city, Japan is represented by 126,909 while the number of native Manchoukuoans amounts to 426,789. The foreign residents, excepting Japanese, total 315 and those possessing no nationality total 996.

The remarkable thing about the capital city is that far more men than women are found in it. Against every 100 women, there are 166 men, it has been revealed.

POLICE TO GET EXTRA PAY

It has been agreed that the new system will be regarded as effective from last month.

The new allowance, Domei reports, will be given to all police officials who are paid ¥150 or less monthly, on condition that the extra payment ranges from ¥7 to ¥15. As far as Tokyo policemen are concerned, about 20,200 are expected to be favored by the new system.

HITACHIYAMA RATED GREATEST IN SUMO

Wrestler Who Withstood 'Teppo' Attacks of Tachiyama Called All-time Champion

Who was the strongest and mightiest sumo wrestler in Japan throughout the Meiji and Taisho eras? This is the favorite topic of conversation among sumo fans, and it especially offers a favorite topic to them at a time when Grand Champion Futabayama was miserably defeated by Sakuranishiki, ninth in the "maegashira" rank, and Champion Akinoumi, predestined to be a grand champion in the near future, was vanquished by Futasegawa, seventh in the "maegashira" rank, on Friday, the middle day of the present 15-day semi-annual wrestling tournament at the Kokugikan Amphitheater at Ryogoku. Nobody has ever been able to say who was the strongest champion in comparison with Futabayama. No. 1 present-day champion, because the time separating wrestlers during these eras from the present defies such a comparison.

Hitachiyama, grand champion, on general consent, was the strongest in the opinion of Kosho Ikoma, noted commentator on sumo wrestling in his article printed in the Hochi. After making an elaborate study and careful scrutiny of the wrestling art and technique characteristic of great wrestlers during Meiji and Taisho and at present, Ikoma comes to this conclusion. Why was Hitachiyama so great? The commentator puts down his decision on the basis of Hitachiyama's strength and mastery in defying the 'invincible' Tachiyama, second strongest, whose notorious art known as "teppo," or gun charge, was so formidable that no wrestler of those days could withstand it. Tachiyama, also grand champion, comes second. Umegatani II, another grand champion, and Futabayama, the present champion and center of popularity, are both of third rank, judging from comments of most experts on the wrestling art. Both Tachiyama and Umegatani were equally popular with Hitachiyama at the time wrestling was at the height of glory during the Meiji Era. Just below them come Araiwa, Kunimiyama, Komagatake, all champions, and Nishinoumi II, grand champion, all of the Meiji Era and Onishiki, Tochigiyama, Odori, all grand champions, Tsushimanada, Kyushuzan, both champions, and others, during the Taisho Era. Tachiyama, the invincible, died about a month ago, and Onishiki also passed away recently. Except Araiwa, who is a retired wrestler, no sumo champion of the Meiji Era above mentioned survives.

Tachiyama, during his heyday, was a terror to his opponents. His "gun charge" with two hands against the breast of his opponent knew no defeat. Nobody except Hitachiyama could bear his furious onset. Finally, his favorite technique was prohibited by the Japan Wrestling Association, but still he was insurmountable.

If Tachiyama were on the ring today to be matched with Futabayama, Ikoma asserts, the latter could hardly withstand the former's one shot of gun charge fired against the breast, although Futabayama's lower back and hip construction is as solid as iron. Futabayama might bear the first shot of "teppo," but it would be absolutely impossible to withstand a series of gun charges one after the other. Futabayama would defeat Tachiyama by other tactics.

Tachiyama became a professional sumo wrestler at the age of 24 and rose to the pinnacle 11 years later when he won the position of grand champion. He stood six feet two and weighed 296 pounds in 1916 when he was 40 years old. In that year, he was defeated by Tochigiyama, and in the following year was beaten by Onishiki. Knowing his honor, he retired from his profession, closing his chapter of sumo wrestling for 17 years.

Hitachiyama stood five feet seven and weighed 336 pounds. He had a splendid construction rarely excelled by any other wrestler and, when he went into the ring, there was something really attractive to the spectators. After overriding the ring for 16 years, Hitachiyama retired in 1913 to become the managing director of the wrestling association. In character and strength, he was second to none, and in this respect he was the greatest wrestler in history. Tachiyama, the greatest rival of Hitachiyama, really admired the immeasurable strength of Hitachiyama and said that when Hitachiyama remained solid in the ring, an opponent would be exhausted when the former thrust his strong left arms under his opponent's right hand and grasped his waist band. The enemy, however strong, could hardly withstand his belly strength. Tanikaze, the first sumo grand champion before the Meiji Era, is venerated by the name "god of sumo," but even Tanikaze might not have been able to overmatch Hitachiyama.

Generally speaking, Futabayama would not be an equal rival to Hitachiyama, Ikoma says, but the former might be able to defeat the latter by his skilful foot work.

Turning to Umegatani, Ikoma says he was one of the most grotesque-looking sumo champions, weighing 336 pounds while standing only five feet four. However, his wrestling technique was in strict conformity with prescribed form of sumo wrestling, and in this respect his wrestling was ideal.

Rice Export Difficult

Domei

BANGKOK, May 16.—With the enforcement by the Thai Government of the rice export licensing system it has become practically impossible for Chinese rice dealers in Thailand to export rice. It is said that these Chinese merchants continue to apply for export licenses persistently. A survey by a local newspaper reveals that of 35 rice mills here 15 thus far have been closed.

GERMAN STRUCTURE FINANCIALLY SOUND

Nazis Place Patriotic Labor Above Greedy Endeavors of Other Countries

D.N.B.

BERLIN, May 17.—A bewildered world has often asked how it came about that Germany, until comparatively recently believed still hampered by the stipulations of the Treaty of Versailles, could, overnight, as it were, achieve such tremendous success in the field of economy. This success, it is clearly recognized, made the German successes on all other fields possible.

In a recent publication of the Voelkischer Beobachter, the question is answered by a number of Germany's foremost experts. One of them, Secretary of State Keppler, Chancellor Hitler's former economic adviser who is now entrusted with a special mission and attached to the Foreign Office, states that one of the main sources of the country's energy was obtained when the principle of the priority of profits was supplanted by that of service and sacrifice.

Instead of the former ideal of money and gold, there has been set up the conception of the value of labor by the people exclusively for the people as an entity. Upton this was built the German economic organization. And the European developments of the last few years have amply indicated how correct the German conception is.

Dr. Todt, famous constructor of the Siegfried Line and of the German Motor Highways, concurrently Minister for Armaments, writes that the German armaments industry has been made mobile. Instead of the former freedom in the choice of work, the German Government has instituted a farsighted policy of state control, which made German economy stronger, more efficient and independent of local influences. As the most important additional development, there has been achieved a smooth cooperation between the Armed Forces and the country's economy. Regarding the stocks of munitions, armaments and war important materials, Dr. Todt says that they are so large that they have no parallel in history.

Germany Independent

On "motorization of the war," Major-General von Schell, in charge of motorization, recalls the statements made in London and Paris before Germany's first offensive in 1940, that the allies would be carried to victory "on a wave of oil." In contrast to this over-optimistic belief, Germany had succeeded in building more and more plants for the production of fuel, making Germany practically independent of imports.

Speaking of the reorganization in this field, the general emphasizes that the different number of types of lorries had been decreased from 113 to 19. This fact, it is stressed, has been of very great advantage for the conversion of lorries for the use of the army during the war.

Dr. Backe, Secretary of State in the Ministry of Food, writes on the Reich's supplies, stressing that there can be no question of surrender because of starvation. Two factors, he says, are mainly responsible for this. The first is the guarantee of continued agricultural production, and the second is the masterly discipline maintained in the country. Not the military failures, but the fact that the year 1940 brought about the final stabilization of Germany's food supply was the most painful shock to Great Britain, Dr. Backe emphasizes.

Dr. Burgdoerfer, well-known authority on biology, draws attention to the fact that eight years ago, together wtih the evolution of the Reich's political structure, there also occurred a biological regeneration. This regeneration, it is pointed out, has continued in spite of the war during 1939 and 1940. Births, Dr. Burgdoerfer reveals, were 14.7 per 1,000 of the population in 1939, and they rose to 18.9 in 1935 and to 20.3 in 1939.

Music Notes

large blue label discs. Three magnificent tartists have done the playing: Myra Hess, English pianist, Jelly D'Aranyi, French violinist, and Gaspar Cassado, Spanish cellist. This is an array of international talent of very high artistic merit.

The Trio is in four movements: Allegro, Andante con moto, Scherzo-presto, and Allegro Giocoso.

This Trio seems for a long period to have been neglected, but it is a very fine bit of Brahms, is very tuneful and contains obvious sincerity and musical sensibility. The first movement is full of energy and is a display of the composer's keen intelligence. In the second movement the theme resembles a Hungarian folksong, and has variations delightfully wrought if rather difficult to digest by others than the true Brahmsian. The Scherzo is of a somewhat grotesque character but is full of meat for the musical thinker. The last movement is robust and very gay in character and sweeps right along in a great movement.

The three performers give the work excellent treatment, are well-balanced, good tone, and have fused in a good way not only tonally but also in spirit and interpretation. The recording is very good.

A tiny Sonata in A Major by Cimarosa, Italian of the 18th century, and a Gavotte of the 17th century by the French composer Rameau, are played as guitar solos by Julio Martinez Gyanguren, on a Columbia small blue label record. The miniature Sonata has three very brief movements, not much contrasted, but is so charming that one would enjoy hearing it on the piano. The Gavotte has typical French period grace and is a lovely bit of music. The guitarist is an excellent artist and will certainly delight followers of the guitar. Good and clear recording.

A menuet by Bach arranged by Egon Petri, and Sgambati's arrangement of a Melody from Gluck's Orfeo, are recorded on a Columbia large blue label disc by Egon Petri, a brilliant pianist. You may not particularly enjoy this this Bach arrangement: it may be too Frenchy-fied, or perhaps too "Polish-ed" to suit the lover of clear and clean-cut Bach playing. The piano tone may have something to do with this feeling. Certainly just a trifle less of the sustaining pedal would have aided clarity. The Gluck Melody is most delightful, and the pianist makes the melody in the right hand sing enchantingly, almost too romantically. It is a good disc and the recording is satisfactory.

Jane Bathori, French mezzo-soprano, is heard in Three Melodies by Erik Satie (French 1866-1925) on the first side of a Columbia large blue label record. Darius Milhaud is at the piano. The first song is Daphenéo; second, La statue de Bronze; third, Le Chapelier. On the second side of the record the singer renders Three Poems by Milhaud, with the composer at the piano. The first number is entitled Fumee; the second, Fete de Bordeaux, and the last one, Fete de Montmartre.

The singer has an excellent voice though slightly inclined to a tremolo and a tendency to shout as evidenced on the high notes of the third number by Satie. However, it is very artistic and intelligent vocalism, quite worth hearing. The language used is of course French.

Satie was the forerunner of the French atonalists and was the center of the later very modern French composers to which group Milhaud belonged. These little songs are something for the lover of the unusual and no doubt his musical appetite will be whetted. At the piano Milhaud is excellent, and the recording is very good.

Joe Bund and His Orchestra, with a vocalist, have recorded Nachts ging das Telefon, tango, and Wonderschoen ist es Verliebt zu Sein, waltz, on a Columbia dance disc. Both dances are taken at slow pace and are good numbers. Both are full of melody, very harmonious and there is quite a lot of instrumental variety. The pianist and the subdued accordionist are excellent soloists. The pleasing singing is in German and the voice is good.

Two vocal dance songs, Bandneon Arrabalero, tango, and Mascotita de Mareil, waltz, are sung in Spanish on a Columbia dance disc by Carlos Gardel with an accompaniment of guitars. The tango piece is danceable but the waltz is not satisfactory rhythmically, and the guitars make thin dance music. The vocalist is the type suited to this kind of song but there is a bit too much of voice and not enough instrumental.

Milonguita, tango, and Etincelles, valse, are recorded on a Columbia disc by the Orquesta Tipica Francesco Canaro. The tempo, rhythm, and rendition of the tango is good but there is rather too much vocal to the fore in the number is wanted for dancing. The valse is in quick tempo and is very danceable music the modified waltz steps. The recording good.

The Song of the Covered Wagon (minus the song) and Language of the Flowers are rendered by Orchestre Danse Alexander with Alexander as the accordion soloist on a Columbia small black label disc. Both are in waltz tempo, and while the record is not marked as dance music, yet both numbers are danceable. The first is the gypsy covered wagon, certainly not American. The themes of both are simple song themes with much repetition depending on instrumental variety for effects. The result is pleasing, and recording good.

Japanese Endurance

It is a common saying, even among the Japanese themselves that power of endurance or perseverance is not mentioned in the catalog of national virtues. In saying this it is customary to compare themselves to an iron kettle which is quickly heated and almost as quickly cooled. The same idea pervades their view as they go to China and stand in admiration of its boundless plains or gargantuan streams. They see how Chinese families, living on rafts, float down the Yangtze leisurely and peacefully as if they had become part of nature itself. Their life is in striking contrast to the life commonly seen in the island Empire. The first feeling which strikes the Japanese observer in China is one of vastness and of the people's calm acceptance of time and space.

In speaking of China's "continental character" it is common to contrast it with the faster tempo with which life in Japan moves and with which its people's minds work and turn. Those who would see the seamy side of our national life say that this nation without perseverance would seldom achieve great things. In this connection, the unruffled Chinese and the bulldog-like Britons are held up as exemplars.

Apart from the justice of such an estimation of Japanese character, there seems more to be said in favor of the Japanese. Clio herself may be called in their defense. It is to be wondered that this particular aspect of national character has escaped the attention of those historians, nationalists, moralists, philosophers, who stand in the forefront of the current "return to the foundation of the Empire" movement of these latter days. For it is somewhat surprising that any feature of national value should have been overlooked when all would have been grist that came to their mill.

The most outstanding monument to Japanese perseverance can be seen in the "Honki Retsuden Shihyo," a history of the Japanese nation in biographical records. This voluminous historical work consumed two and a half centuries to complete. In the third year of the Meireki era, corresponding to the year 1657 of the Christian era, Lord Mitsukuni, of the Mito branch of the Tokugawa family, established a learned institution named Shokokan with the object of writing and compiling the history of the country.

Under him were assembled a number of scholars to devote themselves to this literary undertaking. The work thus started by Lord Mitsukuni was carried on by his descendants. Under the patronage of each of the successive lords of Mito, the learned effort was continued. Shoguns came and went; their fortunes waned and waxed; the country itself seemed at times to be uncertain of its own soul; its shores were menaced by the growing shadow of foreign Imperialism; but the historians at Mito stuck to their work, unraveling the thread of history often intricately knotted and twisted, always guiding woof and weft straight in order to weave out the pattern of national history which the first sponsor believed correct and true. The history, with all additions, revisions and supplements, was completed in 1906. The entire work runs into 397 volumes.

The scholarly achievements with the name of Nobuhiro Sato (1768-1850) is identified really represent a no less notable instance of persevering effort, and that without official patronage or support, as was seen in the case of the Mito historians. The Sato family living in Ugo Province had practiced medicine. Nobuhiro's great, great grandfather, appalled by the devastation wrought by the famine that swept through the northern provinces took up the study of agricultural economy for the improvement of life of the countryside, but died without attaining his object.

His son took up the study where it had been left by his father but with scarcely better result. It was only in the time of his son, Nobukage, that the Sato family began to be looked up as guide and leader in agricultural administration. But Nobukage had given 40 long years to his arduous pursuit before he was able to administer relief. While he was absorbed in his study he lost all his property even including his family homestead. In spite of all financial and other handicaps, his son forged his way, improving on what his ancestors had accomplished. And in the time of his son, Nobuhiro, the undertaking of the Sato family was crowned with the fame and success it well deserved. The achievements based on the family effort continued for more than two centuries.

Toward the close of the 18th century a commoner of Tokyo (then Yedo) by the name of Sachio Saito, on his own account and as a hobby, began to write an illustrated guide book of the Shogunate capital. In 1790 he completed the main part of the book but died without completing it. His son took it up but failed to carry it on very much further. Next the burden of the work fell on his son, Yukitaka, who set about block-printing the book in 1820 and completed it 15 years later. This guide book of historical importance, consisting of seven volumes, took half a century to complete. The earlier portion of the illustrations was by Settan Hasegawa, one of the most illustrious of the Hasegawa school of painting, and the latter part by his son Settei. The undertaking is remarkable because it was conceived and prosecuted without any commercial motive.

In a Chinese book entitled "Hao Lin Yu Lu" (Crane Forest and Jewel Dew) written by Lo Ta Ching, a scholarly writer of the Sung dynasty, mention is made of a Japanese Buddhist monk, whose power of endurance must have been a matter of surprise and amazement even to the patient sons of Cathay. For the author says that this Japanese monk whose name was Ankaku had been in China for a decade and in the meantime committed to memory a large part of the complete collection of the Buddhist sutras known by the title of "Daizo Kyo." He spent days and nights in memorizing the scriptures, struggling with what he considered a treacherous memory. This monk must eventually have succeeded in memorizing the huge collection of Buddhist lore because he returned to Japan and set down the secret writings from his memory, while he held office at a monastery named Koshoji, in the province of Chikuzen, Kyushu. It is matter of historical fact that he completed his laborious task in December, 1207. It took him 30 odd years to copy the whole work. This collection, consisting of 638 sections and 2,745 volumes, is extant in the country. What took the monk more than a full generation to copy could hardly have been committed to memory in less than a score of years.

Coming down to more recent times, Norinaga Motoori, a well-known authority on Japanese classicism and literature, gave 35 years of his life to writing a commentary on the Kojiki, the earliest chronicle of the Japanese nation. Bakin, one of the brightest luminaries of the Japanese literature of the Tokugawa period, is credited with no less than 300 stories and novels. Prolific writer as he was, he consumed 28 years in writing his masterpiece, "Hakkenden." Hogan Kano, one of the best known painters of the early Meiji era, had a lifelong ambition to paint the female deity Kannon. The last piece he drew of the subject fails to bear his name, showing he was dissatisfied with the piece of work he had executed after his lifelong study.

Thus with the aid of history do we show that Japan is capable of remarkable feats of endurance and perseverance.

Late!

He was a golfer who always played in his oldest clothes. One day he set out for the course, his clubs slung over his shoulder.

Walking down a street he saw a woman leaning over her garden gate, eyeing his approach angrily.

"You're very late," she said, sharply, as he drew level.

"Late?" echoed the astonished golfer.

"Yes, late! You promised to sweep my chimneys at eight, and it's past nine o'clock now."—Tit-Bits.

JAPAN TIMES HEAD DISSECTS TENSE TRANS-PACIFIC STATUS

Remedy of Prevailing Unfavorable Situation Largely Depends Upon Policy of U.S. Government

By TOSHI GO
Special to Japan Times and Advertiser

Toshi Go, President of Japan Times and Advertiser, contributed an article, "The Japanese Attitude Toward America," to a recent number of the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, at Philadelphia, U.S.A. A brief outline of the article was published in this paper (Page 2, morning edition, May 15), and the following is the full text.—Ed.

Part II

Mr. Matsuoka has fitted the phrase "Co-prosperity Sphere" to this south ward and westward march of Japan, but an incorrect construction has been placed on it by America. There the belief persists in the idea of Japanese conquest. The Foreign Minister has very clearly enunciated the real meaning. He said at a press interview:

"Japan has no territorial ambition. Japan is helping its neighbors in Greater East Asia so that all the peoples in this part of the world have their own place, with freedom secured to determine their own destinies. We are against the conquest and exploitation of East Asiatic countries by Japan as well as by any other nation."

This assurance is clear and emphatic enough. It implies a departure from narrow nationalistic confines, opening the Pacific and the world by inference to a broader order of intercommunication, freer trade, and lower barriers all round. One of the necessary ambitions of all these East Asian countries is access to natural resources needed in their defense and development. Separately, none of these Pacific states, including Japan, is independent. Together, they are self-sufficient.

Japan needs the oil, the rubber, and the tin of the Pacific islands, including the low-grade nickel ore of New Caledonia, while those states can use efficiently the cheap manufactures of Japan. The United States would keep Japan from fully enjoying the fruits of free commercial intercourse with the Netherlands Indies at the same time as American insists upon control of resources in the New World for American success.

Unequal Competition

What is good for America should be rightful for Japan. America is exceptionally rich in many of these things, the excess being employed for the acquisition of rubber and tin from the Pacific regions in unequal competition with a poorer Japan. American money, into which its resources have been converted, is used as a weapon to buy up necessary supplies which Japan cannot buy except with its manufactures. On this point all Japanese are united, convinced that their destiny, or "cosmic urge," to recall John Hay's expression, requires consolidation of a large sphere or Japan must face the fate of a subservient nation.

Much has been made of the alleged exploitation by Japan of Manchuria and North China. Monopolies, embargoes, and restrictions are seen as deliberate machinations to expel Americans and their trade from the Chinese continent. True, there have been large trusts formed, exchange control applied, export of essential materials such as wool forbidden or restrained. These measures are not local, not permanent, certainly not confined to this part of the world. The United States itself has employed economic measures of a prohibitive nature. Where is the consistency of America's employing defense safeguards through economic restriction while forbidding an equal right to China and Manchuria under Japanese counsel for their own well-being?

These are extraordinary times when extraordinary steps are necessary. China and Manchuria need their resources and must make the best use of them through larger associations of business to meet similar temporary measures in other parts of the world. They must restrict the use of foreign exchange as long as foreign exchange is an essential part of a nation's financial defense. They must monopolize the distribution of oil, for instance, because oil is part of the Far Eastern defense mechanism which cannot be intrusted to foreign interests. Nevertheless, American trade continues unhampered in many other lines, as you will see by reference to the Shanghai trade figures.

Japan's Peaceable Desires

The Tripartite Pact has been assailed in America as an act of Japanese aggression toward the United States. We have seen one aspect of the case, the self-defense of Japan forced to make partnership with larger and friendly states. But the Foreign Minister has emphasized the peaceful character of the bond. To quote him:

"Internally, one benefit of the pact is the unification of public opinion in this country which was divided into pro and con groups about its policy toward the Axis Powers. The conclusion of the pact has fixed the way which Japan should follow. Close cooperation with the Axis has become the guiding principle of Japan's foreign policy. Externally, as enunciated by Premier Konoye, the treaty is a peace pact, intended to prevent a third Power or Powers from joining the European war or the China Affair. If this object is accomplished it will bring great benefit not only to Japan but to humanity at large."

The pact is, therefore, a restraining influence on America, and should keep the European conflict from assuming larger proportions. That principle is very popular in Japan, and Mr. Matsuoka has not been the only statesman to say that he hopes the intervention clause of the pact will never be invoked.

Deep down in this country exists a real friendly feeling for America and for Great Britain. Things have occurred to bruise this natural inclination, one of them being America's belief that its left flank of defense rests in China, a policy which your State Department insists on upholding despite the "dragon's teeth" lurking in such an imperial plan. There is room enough in America for American genius, and Japan asserts its right in strength to consolidate the peace and prosperity of the Far East and parts of the Pacific, naturally falling into a sphere of influence.

Reasons of a biological nature promote the welfare of the strong. Essential to the continuation of civilization is a strong and ardent race which will insure the continuation of mankind in its highest form. The Japanese are physically strong, and as long as they remain so by discipline and spiritual qualities, they must increase and multiply, helping in their way those who also desire to improve their corners of the earth. This may sound strange philosophy to bring into a political argument, but it is a reality which cannot be overlooked.

Outcome of American Policy

These notes would not be complete without reference to the outcome of the present inimical American policy. If the present situation continues unrelieved, there is obviously the great danger of war supervening, which the Japanese people don't want, and presumably the Americans don't either. For the sake of both countries, reasonable people in Japan are anxious, but without loss of dignity and honor, to reach a sound solution by the route of a common-sense adjustment.

Therefore there is need for some constructive policy averting a crisis. Every gesture to restore normal relations so far has been taken by Japan in various efforts to abate the American pressure. Recently these efforts have given way to a stronger policy. The United States now must take the peace initiative. How can this be done? I suggest by some such gesture as the restoration of the Commercial Treaty. If this is not immediately feasible, then a modus vivendi to fill the gap. From such a beginning, confidence in each other might be built up and the foundations laid for constructive policies. Unless we have such a start toward peace, the movement the other way will proceed to its logical and awful conclusion.

The End

Nature and the Classics

The ages that have loved the country have loved the classics, too. Or does it work the other way, perhaps? The classics, at any rate, have always taught ages of great sophistication and (literally) urbanity to love rural simplicities. At least, they have ever been an accompaniment to that change of tune that now and again turns human society from the artificiality, the formality, the inescapable self-indulgence of town and court life to real and affected rusticity. Horace, who seduced so many worldlings of his own time to pottering around on a farm, has gone on through the ages persuading citizens to scatter hayseed in their pomaded or powdered hair—or in permanent waves and on bald spots, for that matter.

The hermits of the eighteenth century reduced to a solitude of only four tables of 100 in Montmorency; the fine ladies whose foot-men carried garden tools for them into the chateau close; the Twickenham and Dawley gentlemen gardeners—Pope, Walpole, Bolingbroke; the Concord poets and philosophers; the Lake poets; even the genteel disciples of Andrew Jackson Downing in America's Gothic Age up the Hudson—all of them could quote Seneca, Hesiod, Horace, the Georgics at the drop of a hat. And that no one might suspect them of unfamiliarity with the classics, many of them posted Greek and Latin inscriptions in their parlors or grottoes; mostly sentiments in contempt of the world and the flight of time.

Are we once again in times when the classics, in cheap editions, begin to sell like hot cakes, not likely to leave Plutarch's Lives book-marked under the apple tree as we take up the hoe to smite the pusley out of the cauliflower; only to return to Suetonius under the apple tree . . . and a little Bourbon and plain water, please? "Hoc erat in votis"—"This is what I prayed for: a piece of land not so very large." . . . said Horace. If it is only another fad, after all, what could be more blameless?—N. Y. Herald Tribune.

A Duty for Teachers

With the publication of an eloquent and convicing 15,000-word set of charges by the executive council of the American Federation of Teachers in the April issue of "The American Teacher," the organ of the federation, teachers who are members of the A. F. of T. are now faced with a clear-cut obligation and duty: to vote for the revocation of the charters of the Teachers' Union and the College Teachers' Union. The council's statement leaves no room for doubt as to its necessity. Nor does it leave any doubt that the two locals are controlled by Communist party fractions within the union.

Witness the report of the 1931 convention of the Communist party of New York State, which refers glowingly and possessively to the Teachers' Union as "our local;" the affidavit of Manning Johnson, a former member of the central committee of the party, which specifically declares that the Teachers' Union and the College Teachers' Union are controlled by fractions, and the council's devastating analysis of "The New Teacher," monthly magazine of the Teachers' Union, illustrating the almost religious adherence of that publication to the Communist party line.

If teachers want to remain a part of the trade union movement, their first task is to obliterate the forces which jeopardize their chances, and that first task involves revoking the charters of the Teachers' Union and the College Teachers' Union.—N.Y. Herald Tribune.

'Modern Japan'

Newest book from the pen of a priest-observer in Japan, the Rev. Father H. J. J. M. van Straelen, S. V. D., has just arrived in Tokyo from Holland where it was published in Dutch by the Foreholte Press, most influential publishers in the Netherlands. "Modern Japan: Land of Strong Contrasts" was sent to Holland in manuscript just before the outbreak of the war and it appeared in print at The Hague in January or February of this year. Given most favorable and immediate reception the first edition was immediately sold out. Father van Straelen's first book, in English, "The Japanese Woman Looking Forward," which was published here, already has reached several editions.

"Modern Japan" throughout its seven chief chapters, deals with the vivid and evident fact that in this country there are growing up together, and in daily application, the native culture of the country and the adapted ideas of foreign countries. These the author proceeds to expound. First he goes into the history of the nation, pointing out the characteristics of the soul of Japan made manifest in all its past achievements. The life in the streets, the old culture and the new side by side, are displayed. The same idea is carried forward in the chapter dealing with country life. In both these chapters Father Straelen, besides his text and selected photographic illustrations, presents a number of humorous sketches. In sport the central theme also is strikingly described. For example, the newest athletics, football, baseball, tennis and the like, exist side by side with jujitsu and old-style fencing.

Much is done in the section on music, Japanese and foreign, to make known to the world modern composers like Saburo Morri, Midori Hasakawa, Matosaku Akiyoshi and Tajiro Goh. Alongside the western musical instruments are heard the samisen and the koto. Likewise in art, oil and water-colors on canvas endure with the Japanese kakemono styles.

An important chapter deals with the split personality or soul of Japan, the Nippon Seishin. Woman, the family system, the Japanese spirit and the future of the Empire all are examined in detail and in broad analysis.

The author has definitely contributed something of great importance in making known Japan of today in a sympathetic spirit which is bound to have warm response from people who read. It is evident that Father Straelen, a Japanese scholar, has devoted himself with great industry and understanding to the country of his adoption, and has proved himself a valuable asset to the cause of better relations. But apart from the policy of this publication, it is worthwhile reading all through, full of information, of extracts from poetical works, all richly illustrated on art paper.

Ambassador General J. C. Pabst contributes the preface.

ANCIENT MARINERS DEFEAT SOLONS, 18-8

Pirates Beat Cardinals, 10-9 In Opening Softball Game At Yokohama

Standing

	P	W	L	RF	RA	Ave.
A. Mariners	4	3	1	44	33	.750
Pirates	4	2	2	45	35	.500
Solons	4	2	2	47	55	.500
Cardinals	4	1	3	57	70	.250

The Ancient Mariners gained sole possession of first place in the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club mixed softball league by defeating the Solons, 18 to 8, in the nightcap of Sunday afternoon's doubleheader at the club grounds. The Pirates beat the Cardinals by 10 to 9 in the opening game to step into a tie for second place, and incidentally pushed their opponents back into the cellar berth.

By beating the Solons, the Ancient Mariners gained sweet revenge on the erstwhile league leaders who had handed them their only and much disputed defeat, and at the same time forced them down into a tie for second place after they had been out in front from the start of the season. The Pirates, rated by many as the pick of the four-team league, kept pace with the Ancient Mariners by their victory, and are only one game behind them in the standing.

The Pirates appeared to be heading for an easy victory over the Cardinals until midway through the sixth inning, for they had an 8 to 0 lead at that stage, but the latter staged a five-run rally in their half of the canto and scored another point in the seventh to reduce their deficit to only two points. After the Pirates had scored twice in the eighth the Cardinals made their usual ninth inning stand which almost tied the game at least. The Ancient Mariners gained a 13 to 5 advantage over the Solons by the end of the second inning, and the latter, who were handicapped by the absence of Captain Ray Devin, found this margin much too big to overcome.

Good Pirate Start

The Pirates started off nicely against the Cards by gaining a brace of runs in their first time at bat. Vera Albeck obtained a walk and took second on a passed ball. The next batter grounded out and then Ernest Eastlake's hard drive was bobbled by an infielder. A wild throw to first resulted in Miss Albeck crossing the plate. Eastlake then stole third and came in when the next batter rolled to second.

After holding the Cardinals scoreless, the Pirates boosted their total to four in the second canto. Johnny da Silva was safe at first on an infield error, and then stole second. The next two batters were retired and then Ludy Frank came through with a nice hit to score da Silva. After stealing second and reaching third on a passed ball, Frank scored on an error. The Pirates made it 5 to 0 in the third when "Bucky" Harriss singled, stole second and third, and then came home on Johnny da Silva's hit.

Neither side could score in the fourth but the Pirates counted again in the fifth. Eastlake was safe on an infield error, and then Harriss got a hit. Prima Rau grounded out but she advanced both runners. After the next batter had popped out to the pitcher, George Gorman's sizzler tunnelled through an infielder's legs and rolled into the outfield, which resulted in Eastlake and Harriss scoring. The Pirates made another point in the sixth, Bill Blamey getting a safety, stealing second and third, and then coming home after Harriss had flied out to leftfield.

Captain "Bucky" Harriss of the Pirates had the Cardinals eating out of his hand up to this stage, not only keeping them scoreless but holding them hitless at the same time. Things continued to go nicely as the latter part of the sixth got under way, Ernie da Silva flying out to centerfield. Then Victor Levy was safe at first on a miscue, but it still looked as if the Cardinals were a long way from scoring by the way the Pirates were playing.

Russell's Three-Bagger

Any dreams of a no-hit, no-run game were rudely shattered when "Abie" Russell, the next batter, drove out a three-bagger to bring in Levy. This seemed to upset the Pirates for Helen Lord's sharp grounder was bobbled, and Russell crossed the plate while the batter was safely perched on first. After Fred da Silva had flied out to make it two away, Chris Fernandes' roller was misjudged to leave runners on first and second. This apparently unnerved the pitcher for he walked Joe Dynan, filling the bases. With matters going from bad to worse the hurler lost his control and he issued another base on balls to Chi da Costa, and Helen Lord strolled home with the bases still loaded.

The Pirates seemed very much rattled by then for Pete Kipp's grounder was misjudged to bring in Fernandes. Then Juliette Darbier singled to score Dynan and give the Cardinals five runs, and the bases were still filled. However, the next batter fled out to end the rally. After that blow the Pirates were too dazed when they came to bat in the seventh and were retired in one-two-three order.

Heartened by their good showing in the sixth the Cardinals kept up their good work in the seventh, and the Pirates were obviously still feeling the effects of their opponents' uprising. Victory Levy, the first Cardinal up, was safe on another Pirate miscue. Then "Abie" Russell got a single, and Helen Lord's hit brought in Levy and sent Russell to third. The Cardinals supporters were cheering lustily for prospects of a victory were beginning to look bright, the Pirates' lead being reduced from eight to only two and a pair of runners were on the basepaths with none out.

However, Fred da Silva grounded to Harriss, and the latter threw to Catcher Gorman who tagged Russell out at the plate on a fielder's choice play. Fernandes also grounded out to the pitcher, but Joe Dynan got a walk to fill the bases with two out. The next batter had chance to be the hero of the game, but like Casey of the famous baseball ditty, was struck out and the side retired without further damage.

Pirates Regain Confidence

This put the Pirates in a better frame of mind for they regained some of their confidence. With two out Blamey reached first on an error. Then Eastlake poled out the only home run of the day to get two points for the Pirates, giving them a 10 to 6 lead.

Neither side could score in their next times at bat, but the Cardinals came up in the last half of the ninth with visions of tying the score in the final canto as they did in their last two games. They almost did!

Russell started off with a single, stole second and reached third as the next batter grounded out to the pitcher. He came home when Fred da Silva's drive was mishandled by an infielder. Da Silva stole second and then came home when Fernandes' smash to the outfield was misjudged, the latter taking second. Dynan was safe at first on another miscue and Fernandes crossed the plate. The score was now 10 to 9, there was a runner on first and only one out.

Prospects of a Cardinal victory loomed bigger and brighter, but Dynan was ruled out for starting toward second before the ball had crossed the plate. Then Chi da Costa got her third base on balls and with Captain Pete Kipp up to bat, hope surged anew through the Cardinals' veins. Kipp's lusty wallop was caught however to end the game.

The Pirates were held to six hits by pitchers Pete Kipp and Fred da Silva, two of which were obtained by "Bucky" Harriss. The Cardinals got five hits off Harriss, three by "Abie" Russell and one each by Helen Lord and Juliette Darbier.

The Ancient Mariners pounced on the Solons in the first inning of the nightcap to score seven runs on the base on balls, five hits and two errors. The Solons fought back valiantly and got four points in their half of the initial canto on two hits and two errors. Then the seafarers' heavy artillery got into action again in the next frame and another five hits and two errors brought in six more runs. The hapless Solons could only reply with one in their half and the score became 13 to 5 as the inning ended.

At this stage of the game, it looked as if some of the records set in last week's 25 to 24, Cardinals-Solons fracas might not stand for long, but both teams then settled down to stop the scoring sprees. The Ancient Mariners got one run in each of the third and fourth frames but were held scoreless by "Buck" Buckberrough in the fifth, sixth and seventh cantos. "Lefty" Beatty got sterling support from his teammates and blanked the Solons for six successive innings from the third on.

Mariners Got Three Runs

In the eighth, the Ancient Mariners got another three runs to make the score 18 to 5. Joe da Costa made a hit and Herbie Schoene followed suit, sending the former to third and then stealing second. Percy Lord was safe on an infield bobble and da Costa came in, Schoene making third. Then Louise Andreis came through with a hit to send Schoene and Lord scampering across the plate. The side was retired before any further damage was done.

Both teams were held scoreless in their next turns at bat, but the Solons started their last stand in the latter half of the ninth still hopeful, for the Ancient Mariners are notorious for weakening in the final inning. The first batter grounded out but Al Katz got a hit and then Serge Bielous was safe on a miscue, and it looked as if the seafarers were going to blow up again. Niles Bond smacked out a single to bring in Katz and send Bielous to third. Then Erica Papendieck grounded out but she brought in Bielous. With two away things still didn't look bad for the Ancient Mariners, but two more miscues in the succession resulted in Fernando Rodriguez, who was running for Bond, crossing the plate and leaving Gillie da Silva and Miss Dunning on the basepaths. However, Maria Prohaska's line drive was held to end the game.

The Ancient Mariners made 17 hits off two Solons' hurlers. Batting honors were divided by Joe da Costa and Herbie Schoene, with four each. Next in line were Louise Andreis and Professor Bird, both getting two safeties apiece. The Solons got six hits, Niles Bond and Fernando Rodriguez being responsible for two each.

Mariners Are Victorious

The three girls on the Ancient Mariners line-up played a prominent part in their team's victory. The shortstop-second base combination of Teresita Planas and Betty Russell again made some good catches and assists, while Louise Andreis came through with a couple of timely hits. Another highlight of the contest was Percy Lord's sparkling running catch of Gillie da Silva's long fly well inside the leftfield foul line.

As usual, the umpires, George Edmondson, B. G. Ryan and Pete Kipp, had plenty of close decisions protested, with numerous uncomplimentary remarks paid as to their eyesight, their knowledge of the rules and their mental equilibrium. On some of the verdicts the team that lost out even suggested that the arbiters come out in their true colors by admitting they were extra members on the opposition's line-up. However, they are used to it by now and took it all in good part, warding off the epithets like water rolls off a duck's back.

Another doubleheader will be played on next Sunday afternoon, the Pirates meeting the Solons in the opener and the Ancient Mariners facing the Cardinals in the nightcap.

The line-ups and positions were as follows:

BRITISH CHURCHMEN BACK VATICAN PEACE PROPOSAL

Pope's Five Points Are Endorsed by Representatives of All Christian Faiths

Reuters

LONDON, May 11.—A resolution endorsing the now famous ten-point letter to The Times signed by the Archbishops of York and Canterbury and Cardinal Hinsley, together with Walter Armstrong, Moderator of the Free Church Federal Council, which accepted in toto the five peace points laid down by the Pope December 21, was moved by Cardinal Hinsley and seconded by the Protestant Bishop of Chichester, Doctor G.K.A. Bell, at a vast meeting in London yesterday afternoon.

Dr. Bell suggested that the Christian leaders in Germany, Italy and America be approached to ascertain if they are in favor of the Pope's five peace points.

Cardinal Hinsley told the audience that the Pope had expressed his "lively satisfaction" at the acceptance in Britain of his statement on the foundations of peace.

"The moral force of Great Britain and the entire British Commonwealth stands four-square behind our fighting strength in defense of the liberties of mankind," stated Cardinal Hinsley. "We have one great purpose in which we are unshaken and undivided against the onslaught of brute force and against all attacks.

"We will uphold the fundamental principles of personal, national and international freedom to the last. As Christians, we proclaim that the real and lasting peace for which we work, fight and suffer should be founded on the triple basis of faith, hope and charity."

STUDENTS BEHAVE WELL

Police Squads After Keio-Waseda Game Report No Misconduct

Although an extra number of police were dispatched to Ginza, Shinjuku and other busy centers Sunday night in order to prevent possible street-brawls occurring between students of Waseda and Keio Universities following the traditional bassball game held in the afternoon, they did not find a single disorderly student among the fans.

Thirty police from Tsukiji, 20 from Kyobashi and 30 from Yodobashi stations were especially mobilized at Ginza and Shinjuku on Sunday night. They found the night very quiet, as there were no drunk students or those needing admonition. The police left for their respective quarters at 8:30 p.m. fully convinced of the effects of the university's new order on the students.

NO CONTENDERS UP FOR JOE LOUIS BELT

National Boxing Association Names Three as Outstanding, But Not Future Champions

The National Boxing Association announced recently that there are no logical contenders to the title of heavyweight champion Joe Louis.

Billy Conn, former light-heavyweight king scheduled to meet Louis in June, was rated no better than Max Baer and Lou Nova. The three were grouped as "outstanding."

Baer has been an "outstanding boxer" in NBA rating since he dropped the world's championship to Jimmy Braddock. Nova was promoted because of recent good showing.

Succeeding Conn at top of the lightweight division was Anton Christophordis, of Greece. Jimmy Webb, Melio Bettina, Jimmy Bivens, Gus Lesnevich and Len Harvey, the English fighter, were rated logical contenders in the division.

Other champions in the National Boxing Association were:

Middleweight: Tony Zale, Illinois.

Welterweight: Fritzie Zivic, Pennsylvania.

Lightweight: Sammy Angott, Kentucky.

Featherweight: Pete Scalzo, New York.

Bantamweight: Lou Salica, New York.

Flyweight: Little Dado, Philippines.

For the first time in years, the names of Henry Armstrong and Lou Ambers were missing. Both have retired after defeats.

In naming Zale and Angott in their respective classes, the NBA recognized the lack of unanimity in all states regarding the titlist.

"We are very interested in but one recognized champion in each division," the NBA said, "we would like to see other claimants settle their dispute outside of NBA territory."

Honorable mentions for heavyweights went to Abe Simon, 250-pound New York youth, for his 13-round battle with Louis at Detroit. Others mentioned were Arturo Godoy, Red Burman, Tony Galento, Bob Pastor all defeated by Louis, and Lem Franklin, Chicago Negro giant, Buddy Walker, Tony Schucco, Roscoe Toles, Pat Comiskey and Lee Savold.

Logical contenders in the various weights included: middleweight—Ken Overlin, Billy Soose, Tami Maurelli, Al Hostak and George Abrams; welterweight—Izzy Junazzo, Mike Kaplan, Charlie Burley, Holman Williams and Tony Marteliano; lightweight—Lew Jenkins, featherweight—Chalky Wright, Harry Jefre, Billy Speary and Pittsburgh Jackie Wilson; bantamweight—Tommy Porte, Tommy Olivern, Jimmy Branday, Louis Transparenti and Kui Kong Young and flyweight—Jackie Paterson, Manuel Ortiz and Little Pancho.

SOUTHWEST DRIVE NEW SOVIET GOAL

Numerous Events Indicate Russia Will Concentrate on South After Balkan Miscue

One of the noteworthy international movements that should not be lost to sight will be a southwestern advance of the Soviet Union, according to the Asahi, which, after surveying the present foreign policy of that country, comes to a conclusion that efforts are being made in Moscow to come much nearer the Axis Powers to participate in a world redistribution war and to make its policy steadily felt over the Near East.

Outwardly, the movement of the Soviet Union is not so spectacular as that of other countries, the journal goes on, but, in fact, its movement is unique at a time when the downfall of the British Empire is believed as not imaginary, but is predestined to be a reality under a rapid change of the world situation. The Asahi's analysis of the Soviet policy under the heading "Soviet Union Prepared to Thrust Southward, Forsaking the Balkans, Important Policies to Be Carried Out in the Near East" is substantially as follows:

"The Soviet Union has done many important things since April. It entered into a non-aggression pact with Jugoslavia on April 6. This was followed by a mineral oil acquisition agreement concluded with Germany on April 11. It was on April 13 that the epochal Japan-Soviet Neutrality Treaty was concluded. The assumption of chairmanship of the People's Commissariat by Josef Stalin, Secretary-General of the Russian Communist Party, took place on May 6. The Moscow Government on May 8 ordered the Norwegian, Belgian and Jugoslav legations to withdraw. Diplomatic relations were established between the Soviet Union and Iraq on May 12. Epoch-making developments of the Stalin policy and diplomatic measures of the Soviet Union have been steadily manifested throughout these events.

Stalin Comes Forward

"Slightly thrusting aside Viacheslav M. Molotov, Stalin entered the stage and took the chairmanship of the People's Commissariat, the position equal to Premiership of a Cabinet. Three reasons provide the background for this. First, the world situation does not allow the Soviet Union to follow a dual policy of party and Government, but prompts Moscow to adopt a unified policy. Second, the Soviet Union has recognized the need for strengthening its international confidence of its foreign policy to develop an expansion policy of its own and it has found that this can only be realized through appropriate steps of cooperation with the Axis Powers. Third, Stalin's prediction on the development of the present war situation has come out true, and this motivated him to steer politics at the helm of the State, thereby sharing much from a world redistribution war.

"The Soviet-Reich rapprochement of 1939, which has resulted in a great turn of the former's diplomatic policy, was effected through a change of diplomatic officials under Stalin's policy, but it was carried out on the dual basis of party and Government. This diplomatic orientation of the Soviet Union, however, was unfavorably received by other countries for the reason that its diplomatic policy was solely affected by the Soviet Communist Party behind the Government. In other words, its foreign policy was simply affected by Stalin. The subsequent situation has caused the Moscow Government to carry on important diplomatic negotiations or to exchange important diplomatic documents in the presence of Stalin beside 'Premier' Molotov. This was instanced in the cases of the Japan-Soviet Neutrality Treaty, the Soviet-Finland Peace Agreement and the Soviet-Jugoslav Non-Aggression Pact.

Wants World Confidence

"Stalin has begun to see a need of enlisting world confidence in Russia's foreign policy, thereby meeting a kaleidoscopic change of international situation. Herein lies the significance of his assumption of the 'Premiership' and of the Soviet Union's access to the Axis Powers.

"Turning to delicate Soviet-Reich relations, British or American tactics of alienating the two countries must not be ignored. The attitude of Germany and the Soviet Union to avoid war through conclusion of their non-aggression pact is infallible, but, as long as the latter maintains a strict neutrality and carries on its own policy, occasional friction with the former is unavoidable out of the spheres of influence. Their policies sometimes varied. Compromise was effected between them about their spheres of influence in Poland and the Baltic States, thereby removing the cause of friction. The Balkans was an exception. It is true that more or less friction occurred between them on Balkan issues. The Soviet Union's Balkan policy is based on a racial consideration more than a mere economic viewpoint. It pursues a policy of making the Balkans a neutral zone, thereby strengthening its defense policy through absorption of Bessarabia and Bukovina. The Soviet Union also understood that Germany was following the same policy of making the Balkans its neutral zone and economic hinterland.

"A change has come over the Balkan situation following the unfavorable position of Italy with the result that British and Greek influence began to assert itself. This motivated Germany to take a positive offensive against such an influence. Rumania, Bulgaria and Hungary joined the Axis camp one after the other and then a large number of German troops penetrated these countries. The Balkan policies of Germany and the Soviet Union went against each other. The Soviet Union stood against Bulgaria and Rumania against their entry into the Axis camp and, when a new Government was established in Jugoslavia, it entered into a friendly non-aggression pact. This, in a certain measure, meant the Soviet Union's restriction on the thrust of German influence into Turkey and the Near East.

Russia Guessed Wrong

"The thunderbolt unleashed by Germany went contrary to the expectations of the Soviet Union, as Jugoslavia and Greece were trampled by the German troops, and the Balkan policy of the Soviet Union failed to be realized. Surprised at the great military achievement of Germany, the Soviet Union abandoned its Balkan policy without reluctance. That the Soviet Government disavowed the sovereignty of Norway, Belgium and Jugoslavia bespeaks for this.

"It was immediately following the failure of the Soviet Union's Balkan policy that the Japan-Soviet Neutrality Treaty was concluded and the assumption of 'Premiership' by Stalin was realized. This indicates the fact that the Soviet Union is leaning to the Axis camp. The Soviet Union has learned a good lesson from its Balkan policy. It gained nothing from its anti-Axis policy, but it may possibly profit from expanding its sphere of influence by utilizing the Axis camp.

"The eyes of the Soviet Union are now focused on reaching the Persian Gulf through Afghanistan and Iran and also on British India, where no influence of the Axis Powers can be felt. The Soviet Union's southward policy has been traditional since the days of the Czarist regime, but it has been frustrated by British activities. Britain is now on the eve of collapse before the onset of the Axis Powers. The Soviet Union has seen it opportune to make the necessary preparations for its southward penetration policy before the Axis influence spreads to these regions. That the Moscow Government opened diplomatic relations with Iraq on May 12 is a proof of this.

"Stalin, in the course of his talks with Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka, said that he was an Asiatic, being born in the Caucasus, and that, although his policy might not be understood by Europeans, it would be understood by Asiatics. What he said is significant. This may be interpreted that 'Premier' Stalin is now thinking of a material policy for the southward drive and for Mohammedan races. How the spheres of influence of Germany and the Soviet Union in the Near East will develop and how far a greater East Asia Co-prosperity Sphere from the east will go are matters depending on the development of war situation. However, it should not be lost to sight that the Soviet Union is ready to penetrate southwestward under its fixed policy and to participate in a world redistribution war and that for this purpose it is steadily laying its groundwork in the Near East."

U.S. Seen Heading Toward World War As Britain's Ally

need for the United States to seize them.

Delays Convoy Question

President Franklin D. Roosevelt is now standing at a cross roads, obliged to decide which road to take, either to convey shipments of goods to Britain with American warships at the risk of firing, or to follow the past policy of "short of war" and thus maintain peace, says a special cable report from Washington to the Tokyo Nichi Nichi:

While President Roosevelt permitted Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Secretary of Navy Frank Knox, Secretary of War Henry Stimson, Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard and others to urge the American public to be prepared for the enforcement of the convoy system regardless of its consequences, he remained silent and postponed his fireside talk until May 27.

There is no doubt that the President has Constitutional authority to enforce the convoy system, and he will also approve it if it is demanded by Congress. But he does not desire to shoulder the responsibility for the convoy system, as he believes it will lead unavoidably to war. Thus, if he will enforce the convoy system, it will be when unanimously demanded by public opinion or when Congress adopts it through a majority note. The extended patrol system and the dispatch of American ships to the Red Sea have brought the United States nearer to involvement in the war.

President Roosevelt is now at a loss as to where he should lead the United States. To bring the country nearer to the danger of war will be against the public promises he made during the election campaign. Also, he publically declared that convoying means firing, and firing, war, weather declared or undeclared. He knows that if the United States is involved in firing in the Atlantic or the Red Sea, it will be extended also to the Pacific, and the United States has to confront not only Germany and Italy, but also Japan, France, Russia, Spain, and Turkey.

Never in her history, has the United States faced such a serious situation. President Roosevelt is enjoying the greatest popularity in the country, but he is hesitating to make any decision that might bring the United States into the blind alley of war.

Anti-War Feeling Grows

Within the past few weeks, the anti-war movement has been staged with much greater vigor that in the past and is gaining considerable influence. This situation is fully recognized by President Roosevelt, who has began to fear that the public may be leaving his policy of risking involving the country in war. Herein lies the reason for the postponement of his address scheduled for the last week.

What he will say on May 27 will be governed by the movement of the public mind up to that moment. Isolationists regard the undecided attitude of the President as a good opportunity for preventing the adoption of the convoy system and have commenced strenuous activities throughout the country.

The United States Navy is today overconfident and is not afraid of war on both the Atlantic and the Pacific. But neither President Roosevelt nor Secretary of State Hull does thinks so. The overwhelming majority of the American public are supporting aid to Britain short of war, but at the same time they are beginning to doubt whether that policy is really "short of war" or not. The American public is now in doubt, fear and anxiety as to where the President will lead them. President Roosevelt is finding himself in trouble as it is becoming more difficult every day to carry out the unlimited aid to Great Britain and the prevention of the United States from being involved in war, both of which he has promised publicly.

Dakar Seizure Urged

United Press

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Josh Lee, veteran Democratic Senator from Oklahoma, last night asserted that "now is the time" for the western democracies to seize Dakar and checkmate the Axis Powers from using the French West African colonial area against Britain and the Western Hemisphere.

Addressing the Senate, Mr. Lee declared that "our slogan should be 'keep Hitler out of West Africa,'" and asserted that "Dakar constitutes a gun aimed at South America which threatens the western world."

Mr. Lee refused to state whether he thought Britain or the United States should occupy Dakar.

"Whether we should take it over or make some agreement with the British to relieve them somewhere else—such as Singapore—and so release enough naval strength for them to take over Dakar, I would leave to the military authorities," Mr. Lee declared.

Closing his speech, the Oklahoma Senator asserted that "the billions we are spending for materials will be useless if we are out-maneuvered."

YOUTHFUL DOCTORS WILL AID VILLAGES

Even Women Physicians Rally To Duty by Volunteering for Service in Remote Areas

Exceeding the number of 180 commissioned students enlisted by the Sanitation Bureau of the Welfare Ministry to become public doctors in order to eradicate doctorless villages in the country, 235 applications were received before the closing period of application concluded on Thursday, says the Asahi.

As means of doing away with villages without any doctors in the country, the public doctor training system was established by the Sanitation Bureau. The first enlistment of applicants for public doctors was carried out by the bureau among students at medical colleges and universities. Following is the number of applicants received from each medical college and university.

Beginning with 24 applicants from the medical college attached to the Osaka Imperial University, 18 applicants arrived from the medical college attached to the Chiba Medical University, 15 from the medical college attached to the Tokyo Imperial University, 10 from Niigata Medical University, seven from Okayama Medical Universitl, six from Showa Medical College, five from Kumamoto Medical University, six from Showa Medical College, five from Kumamoto Medical University, seven from Tokyo Women's Medical College, five from Osaka Women's Pharmaceutical College, two from Imperial Women's Pharmaceutical College, etc.

The majority of the applicants were found to be those who, not depending on anticipated schooling expenses to be given from the Government, are willing to sacrifice their lives by looking after the welfare of people in agrarian districts. Some of them revealed their enthusiasm and determination to serve as medical servants of people at doctorless villages, by sending in their applications written in the ink of their blood. The received applications will be investigated by the medical section of the Welfare Ministry by the end of the month and the names of the qualified students will be announced during the first part of June. About 20 of the qualified students will be able to go out to doctorless villages in action in spring, two years hence.

The number of public doctors to be trained will be increased to twice the number than the present from next year. Besides students at medical colleges and universities, schooling expenses will be given to graduates of middle schools who wish to become public doctors. Those middle school students will be educated at medical colleges and universities.

As the number of young women applying to become public doctors is few, it is expected that the applicants will all be received. Determination of offering their career in the behalf of people in doctorless villages was revealed by a number of students at the Tokyo Women's Medical College, which sent out seven applicants, in an interview with the Asahi as follows:

"There are four doctorless villages in a row at Niigata Prefecture, my native province," said Miss Sadako Yamazaki. "When the necessity for calling a doctor occurs, the villagers must travel a distance of about 12 miles to the nearest doctor. One cannot know the number of lives lost in this respect which could have been saved if there was a doctor in the neighborhood. Ever since I had determined to become a doctor, I resolved myself to help the people in these districts. As male doctors must fufill the duty of working as military surgeons, the obligation of woman doctors becomes more and more weighty at home in wartime."

"It was my deceased father's wish to educate his eldest child as a doctor," said Miss Yoshiko Fukushima. "I am glad of the opportunity of being able to comply with my father's wish."

"I had entered this college when I was teaching at a primary school in the country, I took interest in studying the health as well as the spirit of my pupils," said Miss Atsuko Katsura. "I had applied to become a public doctor as I believed the best way of using myself as a doctor was to work for the common interest of the nation instead for personal matters."

Completely equipped hospitals will be constructed at five places in the country by the Sanitation Bureau of the Welfare Ministry this year, besides 100 village clinics as one of the means to eradicate doctorless villages. Expenditures of approximately ¥700,000 have been decided to be allotted for the purpose.

A sum of ¥200,000 will be needed to establish one completely equipped hospital, of which one-half will be allotted from the nation's coffers. The hospitals will be established at 500 places throughout the country of which five will be constructed this year.

I.N.S.

MOBILE, Alabama, May 20.—Attorney Harry Seale made a great sacrifice for a client and it proved to be in vain. Defending a beauty shop in a suit brought by a customer who claimed to have been burned while receiving a permanent wave, Seale had the waving machine brought into the courtroom and submitted himself to a wave in it. Nevertheless Seale's client was on the paying end of a $75 judgment.

Housemaids Shortage

I.N.S.

LONDON, May 20.—Owing to the shortage of maids resulting from women's call-up to factories one maid now often works in shifts for various employers. By thus sharing out their services maids earn up to $25 a week. Individual employers sometimes pay $5 or $6 a week for two hours work a day. Many maids have husbands in the forces and receive a government allowance in addition to their pay.

For Big Six Baseball Winner

Manchoukuo Ambassador Li Shao-keng, a rabid baseball fan, has donated the metal shield for the winner of the Big Six university baseball crown. The characters on the richly carved shield signify "Gallant Fighting," and they convey not only Ambassador Li's interest in baseball but also a tribute to the universities which are educating many Manchoukuo youths.

MADRID MILITARY CRITIC WRITES ABOUT GIBRALTAR

Salazar Opines British Fortress No Longer So Impregnable As of Yore

Transocean

MADRID, May 17.—Gibraltar's chances of withstanding an attack or a siege were discussed by the military correspondent of the newspaper Pueblo, Luis de Salazar, in an article appearing in yesterday's edition of the paper.

De Salazar declared that Gibraltar could no longer be regarded as a base of the first order under conditions of present warfare, since it could be effectively attacked by bombers and shelled by long-range guns. Thus Gibraltar is no longer the impregnable fortress it once used to be.

He then refers to an editorial which appeared in the London Daily Mail on April 24. It was stated therein that "Gibraltar must be held in any event." The appointment of Lord Gort as Military Governor of Gibraltar was therefore welcomed by the Daily Mail.

The Pueblo then sarcastically remarks that the appointment of specialists in retreating is hardly likely to strengthen the fortifications of Gibraltar, which apparently is still regarded as invulnerable by the British.

A further factor tending to weaken the defenses of this fortress is the circumstance that the British have no first class air base anywhere within a radius of several hundred kilometers. Gibraltar is nothing but a naval base so that effective defense against aerial attacks is practically impossible.

Even Gibraltar's value as a naval base is a matter of doubt, since a naval base where vessels are unable to anchor or safely undergo repairs could only nominally be called a naval base.

PEACE RUMORS HIT BY MILITARY HEAD

Army Spokesman Ridicules Talk Of American Negotiation of China Conflict

Domei

NANKING, May 20.—Indicating the firm attitude of the Japanese Army, the press section chief of the Japanese Expeditionary Forces in China today flatly denied the rumor circulating here to the effect that Japan is negotiating peace with Chungking through the United States.

"A Tass message from New York as well as United Press messages from Moscow and Washington yesterday stated allegedly on good authority that Japan is negotiating peace with Chungking with the United States acting as a intermediary. Little did we dream of such an action, however. This is really inconceivable," the Army spokesman said in a statement.

He expressed surprise at the "play up" which Shanghai newspapers are giving to such reports and regretted that some of the newspapers associated with the peace movement also are carrying them.

"Such subversive propaganda is aimed at alienating Japan, Germany and Italy from one another, disturbing healthy growth of the Wang regime and dividing public opinion in Japan and occupied China with regard to disposal of the China affair.

"The Japanese now are active on various fronts in China, and the collapse of the Chungking regime is imminent. In these circumstances, it is clear that any such propaganda will prove useless.

"With regard to the fact that such fabricated international and subversive propaganda has been circulated at a stretch, we acknowledge the need of greater caution."

The Army spokesman concluded by saying that any propaganda work however wily and skillful, would not in the least affect the firm stand of the Japanese Army, which, he stated, would proceed with disposal of the China affair with firm determination.

Both groups are active promoting social movements, a spirit of public service, defense knowledge, public service knowledge, practice military drill and the promotion of industrial cooperation.

Kansas City Asks Houston for Help But Assistance Is Requested

I.N.S.

HOUSTON, Texas, May 10.—Kansas City found it was making an annual profit of only $12,000 on its dog license law and city dog pound.

That didn't seem very efficient. So Roy W. Wilson, administrative assistant to the city manager of Kansas City, wrote to City Controller W. H. Maunsell of Houston. Wilson pointed out that it cost them about $14,000 yearly to run the Kansas City dog pound, and they took in about $26,000 a year from dog licenses. That left a profit of only $12,000. Could Houston offer any suggestions?

Maunsell's answer was that it cost Houston $16,000 to run its pound; Houston got only $3,000 from license fees; and therefore had a net loss, not a profit, of $13,000. Could Kansas City offer Houston any suggestions?

MEIJI BALL TEAM WINS HAWAII TRIP

16 Boys Due to Leave Here After Season—Big Six Schedule Revised

At the invitation of the Asahi baseball team of Hawaii, the Meiji University nine will leave for the Hawaiian Islands next month to engage in 14 or 15 games, during a two-month tour it was recently announced by the university.

Accompanied by a manager and 16 players, the Meiji nine will depart on the N.Y.K. Yawata Maru from Yokohama, June 19 and are scheduled to return to Yokohama August 15 on the Arama Maru.

The Asahi a Japanese club team, last fall participated in the Meiji Shrine National Athletic Meet here in Tokyo and further toured many cities in Japan and Manchoukuo. Last summer the Keio University nine visited Hawaii, where they left a good record.

New Schedule Ready

The second game of the Waseda-Keio spring baseball series to be played on Saturday, June 14 at the Meiji Shrine stadium will officially bring to a close the spring season of the Tokyo Intercollegiate Baseball League, according to the revised schedule just released by the officials of the League. The change in schedule was necessary as several of the games previously were washed out by rain.

The revised schedule of the Big Six follows:

May 24: St. Paul's vs. Hosei; Waseda vs. Meiji.
May 25: Waseda vs. Meiji; St. Paul's vs. Hosei.
May 31: St. Paul's vs. Meiji; Keio vs. Hosei.
June 1: Waseda vs. St. Paul's.
June 7: Hosei vs. Imperial; Keio vs. Meiji.
June 8: Meiji vs. Keio; Hosei vs. Imperial.

Pros After Cup

With the close of the spring season in the Nippon Professional League this month, the eight member teams will compete in the 5th professional baseball tourney for the Daimai Cup, to be held for four days, beginning June 1, at the Nishinomiya stadium, Osaka.

The eight contesting teams will be; Asahi, Hankyu, Hanshin, Nagoya, Kurowashi, Nankai, Kyojin and Taiyo.

The pairings in the first round of the tourney will be decided by dividing the eight teams into two groups, East and West, and taking into consideration their standings in the spring series.

The East group will be composed of Kyojin, Taiyo, Kurowashi, and Nagoya. The West, Hanshin, Hankyu, Nankai and Asahi. The Kyojin club has been the consecutive winner since the first tourney.

The schedule of the tourney follows:

June 1—Opening ceremony and two games of the first round.
June 2—Remaining two games of the first round.
June 3—Semi-finals.
June 4—Championship game and tilt for third place.

Kawakami of the Kyojin nine, with a .337 continued to maintain leadership in the batting race of the professional baseball league, according to up-to-date figures.

With the spring season coming to a close this month, it appears that Kawakami will be the sole batter in the .300 class. Nakajima and Uyeda, with a .297 and .291 respectively, however, may end up to enter the charmed .300 circle.

The averages:

	Games	AB	H	Percent
Kawakami, Kyojin	24	95	32	.337
Nakajima, Kyojin	24	101	30	.297
Uyeda, Hankyu	23	79	23	.291

NETHERLANDS EAST INDIES BEARS HEAVY TAXATION

Surplus Government Revenues Has Been Used to Reinforce Islands' Defenses

Reuters

BATAVIA, May 20.—The population of the Netherlands East Indies is not only bearing up under the strain of the additional taxation recently imposed, but manages to obtain a certain enjoyment from the steadily rising figures of government revenues. For they all know that the surplus revenue has been used to reinforce the Netherlands East Indies defenses.

In March, government revenue ammounted to almost 59,000,000, guilders as against 43,000,000 guilders in the same month of last year. Of this increase of 11,000,000 guilders, the taxpayers get the credit for 8,500,000 guilders and the remainder may be ascribed to the improved conditions of Dutch East Indies products and government industries.

Those with an average income of 500 guilders to 800 guilders a month are paying no less than two months' salary per annum, and those with higher incomes proportionally far more.

FRANCE IS ENRAGED BY ACTIONS OF U.S.

Press Bitter Against Roosevelt Criticism—Food Shipments Called 'Dirty Scheme'

Transocean

PARIS, May 19.—If President Roosevelt is unable to understand France's attitude, he may instruct his Ambassador in Vichy to request Marshal Petain and Admiral Darlan for information; they will surely help him to understand France's position, states the paper "Matin" yesterday in commenting on French-United States relations.

The entire French press, discussing this very problem, unanimously sanctions the firm attitude of the Vichy Government towards the hostile statements coming from Washington. All the papers emphasize that it will be with France's own free will when she decides to cooperate with Germany actively.

The "Oeuvre," in commenting on President Roosevelt's statements on French policy, asks with what right does the American President interfere with French affairs. France, continues the paper, is much more entitled to ask President Roosevelt something about the confiscated French ships and the threatened occupation of Dakar, Guiana and Martinique. "If France is to be robbed of her colonies, we shall defend them," the journal concludes.

The "Aujourd'hui" opines that it is interesting to note that the United States feels herself affected by the French policy of cooperation with Germany. This also clearly reveals the aims of the United States Ambassador in Vichy. The paper then accuses President Roosevelt of having regarded unoccupied France as a chessboard for his selfish purposes. Ambassador William Leahy's mission in Vichy has become superfluous, the paper adds.

Commenting on reports that the United States will send no more foodstuffs to France, the "Paris Midi" remarks that this would show that the food shipments so far from the United States are nothing but "a dirty political blackmailing scheme."

Temps Resents Attitude

Transocean

VICHY, May 19.—Washington's attempt to prescribe to France the foreign policy to be followed by the latter, by reminding France of the assistance, which she allegedly received from the U.S., is sharply rejected by the Temps yesterday.

The paper stressed that the U.S. completely failed to respond to the desperate appeals for help, which France addressed in an hour of supreme crisis to the U.S. in May last year.

It must be admitted therefore that since that hour France alone had the right to decided what was to be done in the future.

To speak of a menace of peace and security, as President Roosevelt had done, was absurd. Today only the French Empire is menaced in view of the threats uttered by British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and by President Roosevelt.

The only danger existing for the people of the U.S. was the danger of being drawn into a risky adventure by their own leaders, although the best informed military experts in the U.S. stressed that sofar U.S. preparedness for such adventures is absolutely insufficient for deciding the war, which above all would have to be fought in the Pacific.—Transocean.

Petain's Broadcast Important

Transocean

VICHY, May 17.—Political quarters here regard the message broadcast by Marshal Petain as an exceptionally important statement.

Speaking with the authority of his great personal prestige and his high office, Marshal Petain showed the French people the course France had to pursue.

It is stressed moreover that the Marshal emphasized his Approval of Admiral Darlan's meeting with the Fuehrer. Petain remarked that Admiral Darlan's conference with the Fuehrer allowed the hope for a brighter future, and his announcement that the parleys now opened with the Reich would be continued likewise made a profound impression.

It is pointed out that every word of Petain's message which was regarded as an "order of the day not allowing any debate" has been carefully weighed. The Marshal had made it clear that there was no longer time to talk about chances or risks. Petain's message, therefore, is regarded as an act of greatest political importance.

The first press commentaries on Petain's message likewise warmly approve of the contents and tone of the Marshal's statement. Thus the "Journal" says: "Generally speaking, the course outlined at Montoire must be continued. Signing the armistice signified that France had neither power nor will to go on fighting. This implied the readiness to enter into negotiations. What kind of negotiations, however? That is a decisive point. The solution of the problem is not in our own power, but depending on our former enemy, and also on our former enemy's battle as long as the latter goes on fighting. Thus we find ourselves face to face with Britain."

The paper "L'Avenir du Plateau Central" declares that the Marshal announced that a grave hour for the destiny of the country had arrived. While the "Paris Soir" calls the message "Clear and reassuring." Marshal Petain—so the paper says—asked the French people to follow him on the path of honor and national interest without any reservations. The message of Petain is encouraging, because it gives us hope, that France will recover from her defeat and retain the rank of a European and colonial power."

St. Joseph's Nine To Meet Y.C.A.C. Saturday Afternoon

The St. Joseph's College baseball team will play against the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club's nine Saturday at 3 p.m. on the club diamond. The game, originally scheduled for last Saturday, had to be postponed on account of rain. The contest will be the first for both teams this season. The students have lost several of last year's squad through graduation, but they have some good material which merely requires seasoning. The club players will be without the services of a number of last year's regulars, but they hope that some new members who are turning out will strengthen the line-up. Both the students and the club players held workouts Thursday afternoon on the Negishi diamond. A baseball practice is being held at the Y.C. and A.C. every Thursday afternoon from 5 p.m. on, and all club members intending to turn out for this sport this season are being requested to attend these sessions.

JAPAN MARINE LIBRARY WILL BE CONSTRUCTED

Communications Ministry and Tokyo Municipal Harbor Bureau Plan Erection

Plans for constructing a Japan Marine Library, containing books and necessary data regarding the sea, are being discussed between the Communication Ministry's Shipping Control Bureau and the Tokyo Municipal Harbor Bureau, reports Domei.

Expenditures of constructing the library, totaling ¥500,000, will be allotted by the Japan Marine Promotion Society while the building site of about 2,500 acres will be presented by the Municipality. The construction project will be superintended by the Communications Ministry. The library is expected to be a three-story building to be completed through a five-year-plan. Hibiya Park is the promising site for the library at present.

About 10,000 books of a fundamental and elementary contents will be collected first in the library which will add 500 extra volumes every year. Approximately 20,000 books concerning shipping, shipbuilding, seamen, fisheries, marine meteorology, light-houses and other matters concerning the sea, are expected to be gathered by the time the library is completed.

CITIZENS TO GROW FOOD ON BORROWED ACREAGE

Seeds, Tools Provided to Cultivate 2,500 Acres Loaned To Municipalities

Seeds of corn, beans, potatoes and other plants will be given to citizens by the Municipal Economics Bureau during a period of two weeks beginning June 5 to be planted on the 2,500 acres of land loaned to town communities and neighborhood associations without charge during the latter part of February, reports Domei.

Citizens are to receive the seeds at agencies of the Municipal Agriculture Society at respective ward offices. Seeds and farming implements were allotted to town communities and neighborhood associations in the city by the Municipal Economics Bureau late in February. As efficient results were obtained through the cultivation, the authorities have decided on the second allotment of the seeds. Potato seeds will chiefly be distributed among people living in districts newly included in the Greater Tokyo Municipality. Citizens are to return appropriate amounts of their crops to the authorities who in turn, will present them to hospitals where wounded and sick soldiers are recuperating.

MRS. YOSHIYA SEES DUTCH INDIES FLIGHT

Narrowmindedness Noted in Islands' Attitude Toward Japanese by Woman Vicitor

Emphasizing a need of having a broad mind worthy of a great nation, Mrs. Nobuko Yoshida, the most prominent contemporary woman novelist and writer in this country, writes down an impression of her recent travels over the Netherlands East Indies in her contribution to the Nichi Nichi. Among others things, she was most unpressed during her visit there, she says, by the real misery of a nation depending on larger foreign countries. Mrs. Yoshiya's article is translated as follows:

"Japan's spirit stands for purity and the Japanese are noted for a morbid love of cleanliness, so people say. And surely this is true, but, because of their excessive cleanliness and purity, they are criticized as insular-minded. It is natural that people of a warring country are liable to become more or less violent in their disposition, but the time apparently has come for Japanese to pay more attention to have a 'broader' mind. As a woman having comparatively a narrow-minded view, I feel it especially necessary for Japanese to do so.

"I happened to visit the Netherlands East Indies at a time when Japan-Dutch economic negotiations were going on. This imparted a sort of tense situation to a bright atmosphere of the South Seas. What impressed me then was why the Netherlands was knocked down by a single blow of Germany, however small the country might be. I found the reason. Dutch are too much narrow-minded. It was a fact that international relations between Japan and the Netherlands were stringent, but the strictness with which Dutch customs authorities examined a petty woman traveller like myself on my entry into that country surprised me. A Dutch woman customs official, who examined me from start to finish, displayed her narrow-minded attitude, for narrower than that of an average Japanese woman, and this gave me a

"She confiscated all Japanese letters of introduction I carried. This led me to think that Japan should not resort to such an attitude, however, serious the war situation may develop. Surely, espionage prevention is important, but this must be carried iut on a broad mind worthy of a great nation. Many other impressions I had during my sojourn in the Netherlands East Indies and among them is a sad lot of a nation depending on large countries. The national anthem of the Netherlands is broadcast during the daytime ti inspire a nationalistic spirit, but the British national song 'God Save the King' always follows.

"On Premier Churchill's birthday anniversary I saw the Union Jack hoisted in Batavia. It is really a sight of piteous plight to see a country, whose homeland was lost to Gesmany, hoisting the Union Jack on such an occasion, although Queen Wilhelmina and Cabinet membens of her Government are taking refuge in England. A country laiking self-respeit is thus to be pitied.

"We as women behind the guns are bearing a great mission. However, women often are iritiiized against party men often are rriticized against petty affairs. The time has gone fom us simply to cry 'patriotism,' but the present day mhst be devoted to a sober readjustment of livelihood. If women are subjected to reckless criticism against trivial matters, they will become narrower in mind and confused in attitude and this may deprive them of their willingness to cooperate with national policies. As women of a great country, Japanese women must have a broad mind and at the same time authorities concerned must understand them right."

PIRATES MEET SOLONS TO BREAK DEADLOCK

Winner Will Tie for First If Cardinals Beat Mariners in Softball

The Pirates will meet the Solons and the Ancient Mariners will oppose the Cardinals in Sunday's mixed softball doubleheader at the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club on Sunday, commencing at 2 p.m.

The Pirates and the Solons are now deadlocked for second place in the four-team league, and the winners of this contest, the first of the twin bill, will obtain a tie for the lead if the Cardinals down the Ancient Mariners

The Pirates lost a 9 to 7 decision to the Solons in their first encounter three weeks ago and are most emphatically eager to avenge that defeat, which was due chiefly to fifth column pre-game activities on the part of the latter. With one of the Pirate stalwarts rendered practically hors de combat before the contest sarted, the Solons had an advantage which proved too much for their opponents.

Captain "Bucky" Harriss of the Pirates will no doubt keep strict surveillance over his men to see that none of them will break training rules prior to the game due to inducements of members of the fair sex who are backing the Solons. He predicts that the Solons will be the ones who are going to be groggy on Sunday because the Pirates intend to make them dizzy watching runners whirling around the bases in rapid succession.

If the league leading Ancient Mariners beat the Cardinals in the nightcap they will be assured of at least a tie for first place in the final standing. The Cardinals, although gracing the cellar at present, were just nosed out by the Ancient Mariners, 14 to 13, in an 11-inning affair when they met previously. The Cardinals also lost to the Pirates by only one run last week, and they think that with Dame Fortune giving them the breaks they should be able to beat the Ancient Mariners.

An informal buffet dinner dance, at which a six-piece orchestra will play from 7 to 10, will close the weekend activities, which also include a number of tennis matches in the club's spring tournament and the opening day of the lawn bowls season.

The teams' line-ups follow:

Pirates: Miss V. Albeck, Miss H. Darbier, Miss P. Rau, Miss L. Salter, F. R. Harriss (captain), E. Eastlake, F. Eastlake, L. A. M. Frank, W. Blamey, C. Meyers, G. W. Gorman, P. O'Neill and P. da Silva.

Solons: Miss W. Dunning, Miss M. Prohaska, Miss M. Stevens, Miss E. Papendieck, F. R. Devin (captain), S. G. Bielous, F. Rodriguez, W. A. Tomlinson, G. da Silva, C. T. Jones, L. Dance and C. da Souza.

Ancient Mariners: Miss T. Planas, Miss L. Andreis, Mrs. E. Tanner, Mrs. M. L. Russell, C. Hesseltine (captain), M. C. Cooke (coach), G. E. Beatty, H. A. Bird, J. da Costa, D. Dentici, D. Harvey P. H. Lord and H. Schoene.

Cardinals: Miss M. da Costa, Miss Darbier, Miss G. Andreis, P. H. Kipp (captain), J. Dynan, M. L. Russell, E. I. da Silva, F. da Silva, V. Levy and R. Child.

SPAIN, VATICAN FINISH CONCORDAT AGREEMENT

Negotiations Concerning Church Affairs Concluded After Several Months

Transocean

MADRID, May 20.—The negotiations, under way between the Spanish Government and the Vatican for several months, have now resulted in the conclusion of a "concordat," the Spanish Secretary of State for Press and Propaganda, Kiemenez de Sanmoval, stated in an official announcement at a press conference held at the Foreign Ministry yesterday, at noon.

Details of the concordat concluded are as yet unknown. It is however, generally expected that certain reservations have been made in respect to the appointment of bishops, in which matter the Spanish Government had demanded to retain a certain amount of influence. The Vatican, it is declared, has agreed to concede to a veto on the part of the Spanish Government in case of undesirable appointments.

According to informed quarters in Madrid, the negotiations conducted over an extended length of time were held in a spirit of cordial friendship.

The reason for the extended period of time required to reach an agreement was explained as being due to the circumstances, that it is exceedingly difficult to arrive at a legally sound compromise between canonical laws and State laws.

The conclusion of the concordat was given front-page prominence in yesterday's papers in Madrid. So far, however, no editorial commentaries have as yet appeared.

CONSUL SEES INTERNEES

Americans Taken From Egyptian Vessel Will Talk With Envoy

American Consul-General at Bordeaux, Henry Walterman, went to interview 140 American medical and ambulance drivers who were brought ashore prior to the sinking of the Egyptian vessel Zamzam by the German surface raider and interned, according to a Vichy report received in Tokyo Thursday. These men were on their way to the Middle East to aid the de Gaulle regime forces there. This interview will ascertain whether all of the 140 Americans brought ashore are actually American.

TOWNSEND HARRIS SCHOOL MAY CLOSE

New York Officials Hold That 3-Year Course for Talented Students Unnecessary

Editor's Note: Townsend Harris High School was named for Townsend Harris, first United States Consul-General in Japan, who resided at Shimoda. Sometime ago, students of this school visited Japan on a goodwill tour, and, similarly, in connection with the New York World's Fair and other events, representatives from Japan have visited the school.

All students now attending Townsend Harris High School can be provided with adequate educational opportunities in the regular public school system of this city, according to the Dr. Jacob Greenberg, associate superintendent in charge of personnel, the New York Times reports.

Townsend Harris, he said, while of value a generation ago, has now outlived its usefulness. Specifically, Dr. Greenberg maintained that the "honor schools" within the public high schools make ample provision for the bright and talented children of this city. Also, "special" schools offer opportunities to those who need individual training.

For several weeks the threatened closing of Townsend Harris has created a furor in the educational world. In his executive budget Mayor La Guardia cut the school's appropriation by $100,000 and ordered its gradual liquidation.

Honor Classes Elsewhere

"Our secondary schools," Dr. Greenberg asserted, "can give the Townsend Harris students the same type of education they are now receiving. Practically all of our high schools have honor classes which offer enriched courses of study and require pupils to work to the limits of their potentialities."

In 25 of the high schools—about half the total number—"honor schools," commonly called "a school within a school," exist. The philosophy of these special schools, Dr. Greenberg said, is not to accelerate graduation but to enrich the curriculum, to individualize instruction and hold pupils to work to capacity.

Four of the high schools—Brooklyn Technical, the Bronx High School of Science, Stuyvesant and the High School of Music and Art—admit pupils on the basis of examinations in the same manner that Townsend Harris does.

In every borough, Dr. Greenberg said, high school students who now travel a considerable distance to Townsend Harris may receive the same type of instruction in schools nearer their home. The only difference is that "our high schools insist upon an enriched and varied four-year course with a full program of extra-curricular activities" rather than the three-year course offered at Townsend.

Holds Staff Adequate

"Our teaching and supervisory staffs know how to provide for children of superior mentality," Dr. Greenberg stressed. "We have the equipment, we have the buildings to absorb the students of Townsend Harris. Above all we have a variety of courses which bright pupils can take not only in the academic fields and in art and music."

School officials, after extensive study, are convinced that high school students, no matter how bright or talented, should attend a full four-year course rather than an abbreviated one, the superintendent said. An enriched program, in his opinion, offers a greater challenge and holds promise for greater lifetime happiness than a shortened one.

"Townsend Harris has outlived its usefulness," he added. "Before we made provision for the gifted children through the honor classes there was a definite place for Townsend. That need no longer exists."

Believe It or Not! Price of Fish Down 50 Per Cent Friday

The Tsukiji Fish Market, had an abundant supply Friday morning of many nice fish such as tunnies, "kihada" and swordfish, which totalled about 700. Besides these "sashimi"-use fish, the market also had from Kansai and Hokuriku such fish as horse-mackerel, mackerel, sardines and flatfish, all suitable to be placed on the table of the average household. As a result of this rich supply, the price of the tunny showed a 30 per cent reduction, those of other sashimi-use fish being reduced by 40 to 50 per cent. The prices of minor fish also had a great curtailment from their usual prices, much to the satisfaction of the citizens at large who had experienced rather a hard dearth of fish. Friday's arrival of fish at the market reached 770 tons in all, which, compared favorably with the alleged regular daily consumption of 500 tons in Tokyo, was expected to more than fully meet the normal demand for the day in the city, Domei reports.

U.S. OIL BANS PROPOSED

3 Measures to Prevent Japan Importing Oil Asked

A resolution and two bills designed to place a ban upon the exportation of oil from the United States to Japan were introduced May 20 before the House of Representatives of the United States, according to a report reaching the Foreign Office May 23, Domei reports.

They were, according to Domei, the resolution requesting the President to place a ban upon shipments of oil bound for Japan, the bill designed to prohibit oil transport ships from leaving ports for Japan and the bill intended to prohibit exportation of oil and oil products except in cases in which the Secretary of Commerce grants permission.

Because of lack of detailed reports, nothing is made known as to other points, Domei adds.

DALMATIA RECONSTRUCTED

Italy Divides It Into 3 Provinces: Pola, Zara and Spalato

Transocean

ROME, May 20.—Dealing with the organization of newly acquired Italian territory along the Adriatic, Virginio Gayda declared in yesterday's Giornale d'Italia:

"Italian Dalmatia will be divided into three provinces—Pola, Zara and Spalato. Susak Quarnero and Buccari in northern Dalmatia will be incorporated into the province of Fiume. With regard to Cattaro a decision does not seem to have been made yet whether to create a new province or to incorporate the territory in question into another province."

In conclusion Gayda mentions that the treaties concluded between Italy and Croatia were in the interest of both countries.

CROATIAN KINGDOM BRINGS STABILITY

Croats Were Unhappy Under Jugoslavian Government Arranged at Versailles

Transocean

BERLIN, May 20.—The creation of the independent kingdom of Croatia ruled by a prince of the House of Savoy was described yesterday in the Wilhelmstrasse as a guarantee that the new state will in future play an adequate part in the European concert.

The Deutsche Diplomatisch Politische Korrespondenz in this connection writes: "The establishment of the new Croat kingdom is symptomatic of the determination of the Axis Powers to replace the disorder resulting from the dictates of the Treaty of Versailles by order and stable conditions.

"This puts an end to the fatal amateurism with which the statesmen in Versailles, either with diabolic intention or just out of ignorance, have created conditions in Europe—and particularly in southeastern Europe—which were bound to bring a clash among conflicting interests.

"This refers especially to the Croats, who as a people who belonged for more than a thousand years to western culture were now supposed to bow to the yoke of the Belgrade system.

"The differences between the Croats and Serbs during the past 20 years clearly proved conditions to be untenable. The rapid collapse of Jugoslavia and the jubilation in Croatia when she was liberated from foreign rule are damning evidence against those who dared to insist that the Europe created by the Treaty of Versailles had not been a miscarriage.

"A new Europe under the clear-sighted leadership of the Axis Powers begins to assume shape. Just as after the collapse of Czechslovakia a free Slovakia was born, the young Croat kingdom today is welcomed as a valuable member in the circle of European nations," states the paper in conclusion.

GERMANS SPONSOR 2 ATHLETIC GAMES

Hockey, Handball Will Be Played at Hankyu Baseball Ground Sunday Afternoon

The German Consulate-General, the National Socialist Party and the German community in Kobe and Osaka will jointly sponsor hockey and handball games at the Hankyu Baseball Ground at Nishinomiya-Kitaguchi at 1 p.m., Sunday. The event is expected to serve a dual purpose of promoting further get-acquainted opportunities between Japan and Germans and of turning over the proceeds to the benefit of the Japanese war wounded.

The program will be as follows:

1. Entry of the Teams.
2. Hoisting of the Japanese flag and Japanese National Anthem.
3. Hoisting of the German flag and German National Anthems.
4. Veneration of His Imperial Majesty.
5. Silent Prayer for the fallen and the soldiers at the front.
6. Speech by the German representative.
7. Speech by the Japanese Representative.
8. Swearing-in of players.
9. Handball match, German team vs. Japanese National Team.
10. Hockey, German team vs. All Kansai.
11. Presentation of Prizes, donated by the German Ambassador.

The games are expected to prove of much excitement, and fully 10,000 spectators are estimated to be at the ground. The handball game, introduced by a German team here only a few years ago, is comparatively a new sport. But the Japanese have acquired the knack of the play and there are as many as 50 Japanese handball teams in Kobe and Osaka, and the Japanese will put up a stiff fight against the German teams.

The German Ambassador, Major-General Eugen Ott, will be present and award the winning teams the prizes he has donated, at a dinner in the evening at the Tor Hotel, Kobe. A number of distinguished people will be among spectators, including Baron Futara, the Mayors of Kobe and Osaka, and Renhold Schulze, regional leader of the Hitler Jugend.

50,000 TONS OF GRAIN ARE UNLOADED IN SPAIN

Shipments During Past Three Months Pass Through British Blockade With Navicerts

Transocean

MADRID, May 20.—A total of 50,000 tons of grain has been unloaded in Spanish ports in the course of the past three months, according to the agricultural paper Ceres.

All these grain shipments were provided with British navicerts so that they were allowed to pass the British blockade.

It is stated that 24,000 tons of grain from Argentina and 10,000 tons from Canada are now on their way to Spain, while 100,000 tons are ready for shipment in Argentina.

The imported grain was released at once for the making of bread and distributed in the provinces.

Spain's own grain reserves have practically been exhausted and bread rationing measures are still strictly enforced. The maximum daily bread ration in Madrid is 150 grams. The flour contains an admixture of maize.

WASEDA NIPS MEIJI 4-2 IN HARD GAME

Ase's Error Gives Waseda Winning Margin After Tight Pitching Duel

An error with the bags loaded in the tenth inning set off a two-run rally that gave the Waseda nine a 4-2 victory over Meiji in the first of their two-game series Saturday at the Meiji Shrine stadium. It was Waseda's sixth win against one defeat in Big Six play, and the Tomon team is now firmly entrenched in first place.

Today the same nines will do combat immediately following the St. Paul's-Hosei game which is scheduled for 12:30 p.m. After six inning of scoreless baseball Saturday, the St. Paul-Hosei game was called on account of rain.

For Fujimoto, top hurler of the Meiji nine, the defeat was a tough one to take. Having pitched three-hit ball till the tenth he gave up a brace of singles and a walk to fill the bags. However, with two away and the score tied at 2-all, he forced Ono to tap weakly to third for what should have been the third out. Ase the Meiji third sacker, was too anxious to play the ball and kicked it around, and Kyoie rambled home for what proved to be the winning run. It made no difference in the final outcome that Kasahara walked to force in the second run in the inning. One misplay cost Fujimoto the game and in all probability Meiji's chance of retaining the title won last fall.

For three innings, neither team threatened to score, with both Ishiguro and Fujimoto having the situation well in hand. In the third Waseda jumped into a one run lead as Ogawa pounded out a screaming triple to third chasing home Kasahara who had singled previously with two away.

Meiji did nothing with Ishiguro until the sixth. With one out Kato took first on a base on balls. Ase's grounder to right forced Kato at second and Harada walked. Singles by Matsui and Fujimoto sent home a pair of runs, and Meiji lead 2-1.

Waseda came right back in the seventh to knot the count, and the game went into the tenth as neither nines came through with hits. Following Waseda's two-run uprising in the tenth, the Meiji boys came close to pulling the game out of the fire as they filled the bags in their half of the tenth. But here Ishiguro tightened and ended the game, forcing Fujimoto to fly out to Matsui.

Despite the fact that rain threatened to fall, the attendance nearly topped the Waseda-Keio classic of last Sunday. It was estimated that the crowd ran well into 65,000. The game was broadcasted direct on a short-wave transmission to the Pacific Coast of America.

Maternal Love Immortal

wrappers, or the like, are quite sufficient, even as the village barber's brass basin became the helmet for Mandabrul.

World of Dreams

You can readily imagine how foreign, how difficult to fit into their imaginary world such creatures as adults are. No matter how kind, the mother or how understanding the nurse, they cannot bring themselves into harmony with this imaginary world even half as well as the children's cats, dogs, and birds. The fact that a cat is sprawling in front of them, and a dog runs across their path, and that a small bird-cage is hung in their window, helps greatly in building up their dream world of charm and beauty. Without any forcing, their little hearts and those of these living creatures are bound together in a harmonious way through natural love and goodness.

Their love for animals is not limited simply to dogs and cats. It is a source of great pleasure to me, when I see their remarkable propensity for loving all animals, their interest in all living things. Of course they are interested in both large and small animals at the zoo, but they will never cruelly kill the butterflies and sparrows that come to the garden nor the dragon flies, cicada, or even the caterpillars, angle worms, bees and fleas. No matter how minute the form of life, it is as if they are unconsciously aware that all life is precious. Only the caterpillar is an exception, and that is rather my responsibility. For if I had not been afraid of their ugly appearance and had stopped killing them, the two of them would certainly never have taken up the killing of even caterpillars.

When summer comes, elder brother scatters sugar under the drawing-room porch and says to the maid, "I have put sugar there for the ants, so please just let that place go when you are sweeping." Then he himself sprawls on the porch for a long time, as he attentively watches the work of these industrious little creatures. In a moment he is in the ant kingdom. In his mind's eye the ants' many storehouses appear to him like the large warehouses along the river-bank at Nihonbashi. The ants' disciplined ranks are like the parade ground at Yoyogi. Finally, when the lazy cicada—at loss to find food in the snow—comes to be fed, it is like a scene from the play in which they are scolded by the tiny mistress of the house in the famous words, "Didn't you spend the whole summer long carelessly singing and playing?"

Interest in Animals

The story of younger brother and the fleas, is also an amusing one. As he suffers greatly when he is bitten by fleas, he is not satisfied until his back is scratched until it is bright red. Yet when his kimono was taken off and a search for his tormentors begun, he called loudly, "Run, run, if you don't Nobu will catch you!"

The boys' visit to the snake store, on the near-by street on which the trolly runs, is another indication of their habitual interest in animals. They hang over the glass cover of the rectangular box in which the snakes are kept and become absorbed in their inspection. Their attention is so riveted on these snakes of all kinds, with their various shapes and actions, that you might almost say that they are infatuated with them. Their mutual opinion is that while it might be frightening to be bitten, there is nothing fearful about just watching them. Kunio says, "Haven't they lovely faces," including even snakes among the lovely things.

They also have a strange attachment for the animal that symbolize their birth years. Tomoichi's show of especial friendship and affection for dogs, above all other animals, is because he was born in the year of the dog. For the same reason, Kunio has the absolute conviction that he, himself, and the ox are bound together by a preordained inseparable fate. I think the way they came to be taken with these ideas was through the influence of their favorite Kimi who was with us formerly. Kimi was born in Tokyo and talked of the luck of ones birth year, or the stars, on every occasion, and these ideas became tied up with the boys curiosity about animals. Really, it seems that their attitude toward the animals which they believe symbolize themselves is that of master, guardian, and friend, at the same time that they are its follower and servant. It is as if they identified themselves with these animals.

'Mr. Dog' and 'Mr. Ox'

Tomoichi is called, "Mr. Dog." Just picture the smug smiling face of "Mr. Dog" when thus addressed. Kunio is called "Mr. Neba Ox." "Mr. Ox" when compared to his elder brother "Mr Dog" manifests signs of a phlegmatic temperment, so the descriptive adjective neba is attached to his nickname.

These two, who identify themselves with the dog and ox, are very earnest in finding out the symbolic animals of other people. Their father's year is that of the sheep, so they say, "Father, what you are is a sheep." Mine is the fowl, and they say, "Mother, what you are is a hen." The baby Yozo's is the horse, so they say that he is a colt. Nobu's sign is also the sheep, but her birth year is one cycle (twelve years) later than their father's, so they say that she belongs to father's group, or again, both being sheep, that they are brother and sister, and they receive especial congratulations. And Tsune, who does the humble tasks, is also the great and fearsome Tsune, because hers is the year of the serpent.

Daring of Questioner

They are not content with knowing about members of the family only, but attempt to carry out this strange investigation with everyone. At least, their aunts and uncles with whom they are so intimate as to be allowed to sit and visit with them, are subjects for special inquiry. "Auntie, what's your birth year?" How many young aunts would be much astonished when thus suddenly questioned. This daring questioner is usually the younger brother. Elder brother, being somewhat bashful, does not become so bold before outsiders as younger brother does. But in his silence there is a great eagerness and curiosity at work. Through careful observation he bends his efforts to discover things from people's faces, appearance, voice, or manner. That is, he seeks to discover from the person himself, what animal-like points he typifies.

How joyful the discoveries that not only do they have an aunt born in the monkey year, but an uncle born in the tiger year, and best of all, that the old gardener was born in the year of the wild boar. And now the discovery of a very tiny and lovely little rabbit child brings them equal joy.

Buddy Baer Cries Foul, Forfeits Title Fight To Louis in Seventh

Domei

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Again demonstrating to the American boxing public that he was still invincible, Joe Louis, pride of Harlem, stepping into the ring at 201 pounds, last night successfully defended his heavyweight championship title when Referee Arthur Donovan disqualified Buddy Baer, 237 pounds, younger brother of ex-champion Playboy Max Baer, for refusing to come out for the start of the seventh round of their championship bout here. Claiming that Joe Louis fouled Buddy Baer by hitting him after the bell sounded at the end of the sixth round, "Booboo" Ancil Hoffman, Baer's manager, shouted and cried that Louis should forfeit the title to his protege.

WAR MEANS SUICIDE DR. HUTCHINS SAYS

President of U. of Chicago Outspoken Against Roosevelt War Drive

D.N.B.

NEW YORK, May 24.—American entry into the war would mean suicide, it was declared in a nationwide broadcast on Thursday by Dean of the University of Chicago Robert Hutchins, well known for his repeated attacks on President Roosevelt's foreign policy. He declared that the people of the United States had every reason to fear that their government would join the war in order to "save the democracies" without asking the consent of the people. Hutchins declared that the slogan "save the democracies" had become a mere parody. In the course of this war the United States has already had to relinquish many of its democratic institutions. In conclusion Hutchinson opposed the assumption that America's entry of the war was inevitable. He emphasized that the people of the U.S.A. need not fear any German attack if they were prepared and that they need not fear any invasion of South America "as long as the Government of the U.S.A. were treating Germany justly, reasonably and decently."

U.S. Blamed for War

That the United States alone were responsible for the war in Jugoslavia was revealed by an article in the Saturday Evening Post giving serious indicative details about the activities of the U.S.A. diplomats in Europe.

The article in question is headlined "Our Frontiers on the Danube." It claims that the U.S. Government as well as the rebels in Belgrade were fully aware that Jugoslavia would be run over and that thousands of Jugoslavs would be killed in case they challenged Germany. Washington and Belgrade, however, played at big politics, and therefore did not care about humane considerations. The Government of the United States knew that the Serbs truly believed in the friendship and magnanimity of the United States. Unfortunately, the Serbs also believed that they would be able to check the German advance until the promised help would arrive.

Germany, the paper states, did not want war in the Balkans and had no other aim but to bring about peace between Italy and Greece as soon as possible. The diplomatic tug of war starting in the Balkans early in 1941 had already been looked upon by England with pessimistic feelings at the time when the U.S.A. intervened through its Minister in Belgrade and especially through President Roosevelt's special delegate, Colonel William Donovan. The attitude of Colonel Donovan is illustrated by the experience the writer of the article in question of the Saturday Evening Post had with him in Ankara.

He writes that at a reception in Ankara, the French Ambassador told Colonel Donovan that he hoped that the U.S.A. would save the French people from starvation by sending foodstuffs. Colonel Donovan's reply was that the United States was prepared to let every Frenchman starve to death if this was necessary to defeat Hitler. Soon afterward Colonel Donovan was refused a visa to Syria.

U.S. Makes Threats

At Belgrade President Roosevelt's special envoy employed unbelievable intrigues. He thus told the Belgrade Government that Washington would look upon Jugoslavia as enemy territory in case Belgrade would conclude an agreement with Germany. After the departure of Colonel Donovan the American Minister to Belgrade, Lane, continued these intrigues and undermined the position of Prince Regent Paul.

The promise of assistance by the United States caused the Balkan War, the paper continued. The small European nations had become extremely watchful and tensely watched whether this intervention would succeed and how it might perhaps be utilized for their own benefit. Events, however, proved this value: in few days the United States lost all its reputation in Europe. America did not recognize that Germany by this war was simultaneously creating a new European Reich and that new groups came into being which were interested in a German victory as much as Germany herself was. But the U.S.A. did not want to listen to reason.

In conclusion the writer of the article stated that American diplomats in Europe frequently had complained to him about their mission. They had told that they were feeling like messengers who had to tell their master bad news, but who would be killed for doing so. They claimed that Washington wanted to hear only one version: everything indicating Germany's early breakdown was joyfully accepted by Washington and gladly published by the press of the United States, while every article depicting Germany as strong was rejected both by government and press.

Population Movement

The national census for the year 1940 recently published is not without features deserving of attention. It is noteworthy above all that 14 prefectures out of the 47 administrative units registered declines in population as compared with the year 1935. These prefectures were Shiga, Nagano, Fukui, Ishikawa, Tottori, Shimane, Okayama, Tokushima, Kagawa, Kochi, Oita, Kumamoto, Kagoshima, Okinawa. It is also to be noted that most of these districts are in the western part of the country.

Some of these local districts have lower rates of birth and higher rates of mortality as compared with other parts of the country, but none of them has in the past returned a natural decline in population, that is to say, deaths in excess of births. Even taking the year 1938 when the effect of the large-scale campaign in China had telling effects on population movement, none of these prefectures registered a retrocession in population. From this fact it is evident that the retrogressive trends shown in the present census are to be explained by the increasing drains made on the local population for one reason and another. And these movements were evidently directed not only to China and Manchoukuo but to the major cities within the country. This is borne out by the fact that leading cities, particularly industrial cities, have rapidly swollen in population in recent years.

Comparatively high rates of birth have been a rule in the country, especially in agricultural communities. Births, in fact, have been at such a rate that few rural communities have been able to absorb their increasing numbers, some portion always being transferred to urban areas. Therefore, actual set-backs in the population of rural communities, as seen in the present case, must be regarded as serious, since the countryside has always been the major source of supply for labor and military manpower.

Another noteworthy feature is seen in the movement of urban population. Whereas the aggregate population of the municipalities in 1920 represented 18 per cent of the total, the census figures for 1925 and 1930 indicated 21.6 and 24 per cent respectively of the total. The percentage of the municipal population of the country further moved up to 32.7 for 1935 and to approximately 38 last year. Since it is not possible that a higher rate of birth obtains in the urban areas, these population increases in the cities must be attributed in large measure to the extension of the municipal limits, as seen in many cities. It is also more than probable that these developments were made at the expense of the prefectures returning population declines.

Increases of population in urban districts are always to be explained by the development of industry and the extension of transport systems. But this trend is nowhere more accentuated than in the major cities. Taking for instance the so-called six leading cities of the country during the period 1935 to 1940 inclusive, their population changes indicate a remarkably rapid growth in all cases. Excepting the city of Kyoto, which returned a modest increase of 0.8 per cent, the five other cities invariably accounted for high rates of population increase for the period under review. Yokohama took top-notch position with an increase of 37.5 per cent, while Nagoya and the city of Tokyo came second and third with increases of 22.7 and 15.4 per cent respectively. Osaka and Kobe respectively accounted for 8.8 and 6 per cent.

Even more remarkable changes are to be noted in the cases of industrial cities. For instance, the population of Amagasaki for 1940 was 154 per cent higher as compared with 1935. The cities of Kawasaki and Kawaguchi, both near Tokyo, respectively returned 94 and 80 per cent gains. Similar trends, though to less extents, are to be noted in cities which have expanded under the current industrial boom. Excepting Tokyo with 6.77 and Osaka with 3.35 millions, there are six municipalities with populations of a million or thereabout. This unbalanced condition of population distribution is regarded as serious by those who look into the situation with regard to social welfare and defense.

It is pertinent to consider birth rates for these cities, although statistical data are available only up to the year 1938. Taking the period 1920 to 1938, the six leading cities of the country invariably indicated birth rates below the average for the country. For instance, whereas the national average of births for the year 1930 was 31.3 per 1,000 of population, the figures for these cities ranged from 23 to 25, excepting Yokohama and Nagoya returning 28 and 31.1 per cent respectively. For 1938 Nagoya and Tokyo ranked first and second with 25.4 and 24 respectively as against the average of 26.7 for the whole of the country.

The low rates of birth seen in the urban districts are partly attributed to late marriages. But when the women between 20 and 39 years of age are taken, the number of those in conjugal relations in the cities represent a higher percentage than those in the rural districts. From this fact it may be adduced that the women of the cities bear fewer children than their sisters in the country.

The rate of deaths in Tokyo for 1920 stood at 159.47 for every thousand of population. This figure dropped to 125.4 in 1925, to 90 in 1930, and further to 78.21 in 1935 Similar trends were also seen in the cases of other major cities. The figures for 1938 again moved up to 84 for Tokyo indicating the loss of lives in the China campaign. The mortality rate for the countryside for 1935 was given at 133.6 for every thousand compared with 167.4 for the year 1920, 153.7 for 1925, and 135.9 for 1930. It is interesting that although the death rate for the cities was higher for 1938, reflecting wartime conditions, the figure for the countryside continued to fall for the same year, the average for the year under consideration being 125 per 1,000.

The main conclusion to be drawn from these comparative figures is that the problem of population adjustment between rural and urban districts is one that calls for serious consideration.

Great and Small

People's arithmetical sense has grown dull in some respects and developed astonishing refinement in others. In the matter of unemployment relief and economic reconstruction we long ago stopped counting the millions; all agree that human needs transcend bookkeeping. More recently we have made it plain that for the defense of this nation's borders and the world's threatened liberties we stand prepared to think in billions of dollars; which is as it should be.

And yet, at a time when seven billion lend-lease dollars are a commonplace and the possible ultimate cost of our effort for civilization and freedom is reckoned in scores of billions, we, as a nation, take pleasure in learning that a 4-ounce piece of pork contains 534 B1 Thaimine international units, 138 B2 Riboflavin Sherman units and 11 anti-pellagra milligrams.

In the same way we have worked it out to a fraction of a millimeter how deep down to the roots of the beard our shaving cream penetrates; to the fraction of a second how fast our cigarettes burn; to the fraction of a yard how many miles to the gallon of gas. We live in a world of marvelously refined percentages which measure the intensity of reading lamps, the bone-building energies of dariy cream, the abrasive powers of tooth powder, the toughness of rubber tires, the penetration index of razor blades, the non-shrinkability of new shirts. We have cost equations for new books which show at a glance that for the price of one cent the booklover obtains 3½ pages of reading matter consuming 9½ minutes of time and supplying 187 units of enchantment, 43 units of instruction, 34 units of escape from the worries of the age, and impressive money savings made by staying at home with a good book instead of going to a night club. —N. Part III

Love for Animals

Last spring, just as they were most strongly gripped by this strange interest, the person we call Aunt N. came to visit us for the first time in many years. She was accompanied by her beautifully dressed little daughter, the youngest of the family. When the boys were called into the drawing-room to greet their aunt, whom they had not seen for a long time, and to play with their little guest, the question which came immediately to both of their minds was, "I wonder what that girl's birth year is?" The two of them stared steadily at her round little face. Then both together dropped their eyes and exchanged meaningful glances. Elder brother, as usual, remained silent. Younger brother pressed forward bravely, but seeming not to have the courage to put the question directly to the aunt with whom he was not yet familiar, he asked me, "Mother what is her birth year?"

When, to explain the question, I told briefly of the reason for their curiousity, their aunt laughed amusedly. Then, she turned to the boys and said, "She was born in the rabbit year."

"Well then, she is a rabbit!"

To the two of them with their present interest, this must have been like bagging an unexpected catch. Looking at her with this in mind, she seemed to be like a rabbit in all respects—from the pale face and very round eyes, to her stiffly set little ears. In their search, they are like expert gold diggers, no matter how unpromising the place, they are certain to discover some gold. After having discovered only this much, that this little girl was born in the year of the rabbit, they were most delighted. It was so amusing and droll that they rolled about and laughed with all their might.

Sympathy With Animals

I have already spoken of the boys having several cats and dogs. After writing of their feeling of close sympathy with these animals, it is but a natural sequence to tell how they came into possession of them. Such an account not only reveals their love for animals, but it makes an interesting record of the fascination that animals have for them.

Well, let me repeat once more, the brothers have three cats and two dogs. But if I were to tell the truth, I must say that not one of them is really their own. Mii was a pet cat of the M's next door. When she came over the fence to play, she was completely beguiled by the extraordinary welcome that was given her. Shouting, "Mii has come, Mii has come!" the two boys would run into the kitchen making a great to do. They would not be content until they found some meat or sufficient cake to please her. Saying such things as, "Oh this is a red one," or "the crown shaped sponge cake has the most frosting," they would throw before her most ungrudgingly, the cake over which they themselves would ordinarily have had a squabble. When in the course of things, Mii gradually became bolder and even sat under the dining table, the boys would purposely drop delicious bits of meat onto their laps. They greedily demanded raw fish which they did not themselves want to eat, merely because they wished to give it to her with the excuse, "it is my left-overs."

Mii well knew the time of day. At tea time, and at about the time in the evening when delicious odors were in the air, she was sure to come and follow the boys around with an ingratiating familiar cry. She visited them in this way any number of times a day. Before long this cautious creature, keen for advantage, made her decision. It was, of course, that she would forsake her old master. Her attitude was neither timid nor anxious, it was bold, nor did she attempt to return to her former home.

"Your cat, Mii, has come to our place and won't go home, so we are taking care of her." It is nearly two years since such a message was conveyed to the M's by the tradesman who comes to both places.

Cat's Hospital

Last spring, Mii gave birth to three kittens. She had them in the store-room at the back of the house. The boys knew nothing about it up to that time. They only noticed that even though she was frightfully large, her movements were very languid and that she did nothing but sleep. Moreover, she had become very touchy with them. But they laid it all to her being sick.

"Mii is probably sick, it is a shame to tease her," the boys would say, cautioning each other.

One day they saw her wandering from room to room as if searching for something. She uttered sad meaningful cries, at which Nobu picked her up and took her to the store-room in the rear. The boys, who in regard to everything that has to do with their surroundings, always become very dramatic and who have a great capacity for giving expression to their ideas, immediately spoke of the store-room as the sick Mii's hospital, and her being taken there as Mii's admission to the hospital. But they were warned that they must not pay any attention to her for awhile and were forbidden to visit her in "the hospital." But what do you suppose! By the next morning she had left the hospital and seemed unaccountably tired. And using her tongue for a brush, she washed her coat as she lay for a long time basking in the sun shine on the edge of the veranda. They thought that she had become very thin.

Natural Curiosity

"Mii, Mii," they called in especially gentle voices, with the kind of solicitude that is shown to one just up from a sick bed. Mii drew nearer, mewing as if she were very fond of them. She was no longer languid and touchy as she had been before. When food was given her, she showed an astounding appetite. She had completely recovered. But why was she continually going back to her sick room? It was impossible to keep this from the boys' alert attention indefinitely. What it was, they didn't know, but without doubt there was something in there—something strange, mysterious, and interesting. This natural curiosity was not satisfied for awhile. Being afraid that their fondling of the kittens would be too rough for such tiny creatures, the people of the household tried to keep the boys from discovering them. Elder brother, having gone back to school, Kunio was left without a playmate and when walking in the garden with Nobu, who was looking after the baby, his feet seemed unconsciously to carry him in the direction of the store-room. He would stop before the old double-doors and for a moment hold his ear against them attentively. He and Nobu sometimes had a dispute as to whether Mii was now in there or not. Also, Nobu's mysterious smiles excited Kunio's curiosity more and more.

One time, as Kunio was listening in this way, he was suddenly surprised by a strange faint cry that came from inside. "Oh what is that?" He looked at Nobu with an expression in which was mingled suspicion and at the same time uneasy expectation. Nobu, still smiling, replied serenely, "Open the door quietly and look." He put his hand on the door and pulled it open about two inches. The inside of the store-room was pitch dark. But when he looked closely, he saw among the bags of charcoal, basins, tubs, and other odds and ends, that were piled about, an oblong box about the size of an orange crate. In the box he could make out some white and black things that were moving. And they were crying. It was the same faint cry he had heard from outside the door. Turning to Nobu, who stood smiling behind him, he asked the same question as before, "Oh what is that?" But this time she did not tell him to go inside and look well, "You'll understand presently, so come out quickly," she urged, having him withdraw. Feeling somehow a little queer he quietly did as she said.

Elder brother, on returning from school and hearing the report from Kunio, seemed to feel that it corresponded with what he had been thinking. At least, this report must have given concrete form to a suspicion which had, without any special reason, been gradually taking shape in his mind. He did not hesitate. As soon as he had flung his small book-sack into his room, he dashed out into the garden. Of course, his younger brother was at his heels. Imagine the elation and happiness of the two adventurers when they discovered three kittens in the box—two of them tortoise shell in color like the mother, and one white. They seemed to feel that leaving the kittens in that dark and dirty place was a very heartless thing to do. They planned to remove them to their own room at once. Instead of the muddy box and ragged cotton, they must be given a finer house and a clean quilt. That is, in their little hearts, they felt that whatever small furnishings that were appropriate must be provided. Then, at the time of making the removal, they must not forget to introduce them to those with whom they must be on intimate terms—the horse, rabbit, dog, rooster, and all the other animals and dolls, in their toy cupboard.

Safest, Pleasant Place

But while they squatted thus in the dust covered store-room, absorbed in their happy plans, Nobu appeared. Saying that it was yet too soon for the kittens to be moved, she gave them this astonishing warning, "If they are meddled with or moved around at this time, the mother cat, fearing they will be taken from her, may hide them away some place where we can't find them. And if they are harmed, she might even eat them up." At this, both of them were astonished and trembled with fear. Such a terrible thing must not happen. Therefore, they decided to postpone all their plans for the time being. But their period of disappointment was not for long. Soon Mii, who knew with the sureness of a mother's instinct that the time had come to move the kittens from the place where they were born, chose, before making the transfer, the boy's room as the safest and most pleasant place.

At about the time when the question was being raised as to whether the kittens were not old enough to catch mice, word came from the K's that in two or three days their daughter would come to get the one which had been promised to them. During supper, I happened to speak of this and when I said that we must also give them some dried bonito or something, Tomoichi, who was sitting at my right busily engaged with his chopsticks, suddenly let out a wail. His cry was so loud and sudden, that those around the table were a little startled. "What is it? Why are you crying?" we questioned. He did not answer a word, but with a loud voice continued to cry all the harder. If elder brother cries, Kunio always cries in sympathy, so now he began to sniffle in accompaniment.

Great Honor

Tomoichi's crying was because of his distress about the kitten. Kunio's was rather out of concern for his brother's weeping. But whatever the cause, the loudness and earnestness of their crying was such that their father and I were at a loss as to what to do. Being rather abashed before this strong feeling of the children and knowing the while that it was but a subterfuge, we began to reason in adult fashion that it was a great honor for the kitten to be wanted in this way, and also very convenient, because next year Mii is sure to have more kittens than this, or at least as many. And along with saying that in such a case we could not possibly have all these kittens in the house, we tried to soften their distress by urging them to consider the happiness of the kitten in being taken to the K's. But to them, these considerations were but a secondary matter. According to their feeling, the most important, the most pathetic, the really unbearable thing was for this tiny creature to be separated from its mother and sent to a strange house all by itself without knowing anyone. Could there be such cruelty! In such words as these did they protest. We looked at each other, and while thinking with gratitude of the beautiful spirit they had shown, felt that in some way they still must be convinced with an array of adult wisdom. What people adults are!

I urged that we give away the one of the three kittens that we liked least. They replied that they liked them all. When I suggested, "How about that rather dirtish white one?" Kunio cried out, "The white one is mine!" and his sniffling became a real downpour. At last, the difficult question was settled by their father promising to buy them each a toy cat, but even then Tomoichi's tears did not cease for a long time and he said through his sobs, "He is sure to think about us and be lonesome."

Everything All Right

Their first dog, a small brown and white pointer, is called Tatsu. Like Mii, he was a pet of the N's. It seemed as if he had some eye disease, for his eyes were always heavy and the rims were red and sore. Also his hair was gone in places. But the children didn't see any of this ugliness. Everything was all right. They were satisfied simply to discover something on which they could lavish their love. "Tatsu, Tatsu," they made as much over this dirtish looking little dog as if there were none his equal. Whenever he came to play, they gave him cakes and threw him scraps of fish, so that the result was shortly the same as in the case of Mii. He would not return home, but slept at night under the veranda of the children's room. Fearing what the M's would think, we tried driving him home, saying, "Go home Tatsu, go home, only come back just to play if you want to." But he fawned on the boys demanding all their attention. If we became a little threatening, he took it merely as a prank. Considering themselves the animal's special friends, the boys didn't think of him as someone else's dog, but felt that their love for him was their special privilege. "It's because he likes us that he won't go home." They fully believed that it was but natural for the one loved to love in return.

The way that they got Kuma was through a similar circumstance. One afternoon several months ago, Tomoichi on returning from school, came to me in my study to say, "Tadaima," as he always does, and then almost without a pause he said, in a tone that seemed to be much distressed, "I certainly was in a fix today."

Somewhat surprised, I asked, "What

ST. JOSEPH'S TEAM BEATS Y.C.A.C. NINE

Brown-Jones Combination of College Students Proves Too Much for Bay City Club

The St. Joseph's College baseball team, with great support from an alumni battery, defeated the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club nine by 8 to 1 on the latter's diamond Saturday afternoon.

The hurling of J. Brown and receiving of W. Jones for the students proved too much for the club players. The former held the home team to five hits and struck out 17, while the latter sparked the S.J.C. attack as well as giving a fine performance behind the plate. This pair obtained four of the collegians' nine safeties and scored half their total of runs.

The Y.C. and A.C. squad bat first and made a promising start in the initial canto. Two bases on balls and a double steal resulted in Bill Blamey and "Bucky" Harriss being perched on third and second, respectively, with only one out, but a strikeout and a grounder to the pitcher resulted in the side being retired without a score.

Students Gain 3 Runs

The students gained three runs in their half of the first frame, and this lead proved sufficient to win the game. Y. Kiyono, the lead-off batter, received a free ticket to first on a dead ball. P. Minenko grounded to the shortstop, who threw to second and forced out Kiyono on a fielder's choice. J. Gomes dropped a texas leaguer over short, Minenko taking third. After Gomes had stolen second, W. Jones sent a liner to the outfield and Minenko and Gomes crossed the plate when the catch was dropped. Jones took second on the throw to the plate and later stole third on a passed ball.

Pete Kipp, the Y.C. and A.C. moundsman, struck out Ed Eymard, but the catcher dropped the ball and Jones crossed the plate on the throw to first to retire the batter. The next man up went down swinging to make it three out.

The home team got their one and only run in the second. Kipp started off with a single and after the next batter whiffed, Serge Bielous drove out a three-bagger to bring in Kipp. Lou Haum received a walk and as he stole second Bielous took a big lead off third to make a dash for the plate in case the catcher threw to second. The receiver made a fast throw to third instead and Bielous was called out on a close decision. The next batter struck out to retire the side.

The students also got a point in their half of the second inning. After the first two batters had been retired J. Brown singled. On the next pitch he started for second, and the catcher threw to the base in an effort to cut him off. The throw, somewhat low, was missed and the ball rolled to the outfield. Brown headed for third and when the heave from the outer garden evaded the third-sacker the runner kept going to cross the plate.

There was no further scoring until the fifth, when the visitors gained another point. P. Minenko received a walk and reached second when J. Gomes grounded out. Then Jones singled to right and Minenko was caught at the plate when he tried to reach home on the play. Jones made second on the throw in and scored when Ed Eymard dropped one into the outfield. Kipp struck out the next batter to end the inning.

The students got another three runs in the seventh when "Lefty" Beatty took over the hurling assignment from Kipp for the Y.C. and A.C. Kiyono walked but was out at second on a fielder's choice when J. Ravetta grounded to third. Gomes' grounder tunneled through an infielder's legs into the outfield and Ravetta completed the circuit while the batter took second. Jones hit to left to bring in Gomes and then stole second. Ed Eymard then singled to right to score Jones, and this proved to be the last run of the game.

Good Performance Seen

The collegians gave a good performance and fully deserved their victory. They obtained nine hits while their opponents got five, and they made only two errors to four for the club players.

Besides Brown and Jones, Eymard made a fine showing with two hits and handling all chances that came his way at first base without a miscue. Kipp only allowed the students six hits during the six innings he worked, and these he kept well scattered, but poor support proved costly. He also had nine strikeouts to his credit. Beatty was touched for three hits and got two strikeouts during the balance of the game. Bielous took the batting honors for the club players with his three-bagger, which brought in their only run.

Takahashi Statue Unveiled

The bronze statue of the late Korekiyo Takahashi, who was assassinated in the so-called February 26th Incident, in 1936, while he was occupying the post of Finance Minister, was unveiled at Takahashi Memorial Park, Omote-cho, Akasaka-ku, at 2 p.m. Monday. With a smile on his lips, the statue of the late Takahashi, five feet in height, with newspaper in one hand and glasses in the other, stands at one corner of the park in front of the children's playground. The park was originally the residence of the late Finance Minister which was donated to the Tokyo Municipal Office in 1938.

POLICY OF AMERICA INTERESTS JOURNALS

What Japan Really Wants Is World Peace—Real Dilemma Is Faced by U.S.

The American policy thus far pursued or declared generally impresses the world with the inevitability, indeed imminency, of the American participation in the European hostilities, according to the Japanese public voice finding expression in the latest issues of different vernaculars at home and on the Continent.

The worst that America sees ahead, however, is the very worst, in the newspapers' opinion, that every other Power of the world, not excepting Japan, must face. On the strength of that common conviction, they make suggestions as to what ought to be done or point out what is likely to be done at this moment, by the Powers concerned, in particular by America and Japan.

Japanese Resolutions

Judging from all the positive steps thus far taken by the Washington Government, the Mokyo Shimbun, among others, emphasizes the growing probability of American advance the into hostilities against Germany. Referring to the daily growing British distress under the invincible fighting power of Germany, the journal observes in part to the following effects:

"With its foreign trade completely smashed, and its marine line of communication intercepted in a considerable measure, England now finds itself driven into even a graver danger that when it was in 1917 because of the German submarine tactics that left with it only a few weeks' stock of food.

"Should Britain stoop before the Axis Powers, America knows too well what would be coming forth in the train. America as it rises to fight in consequence, however, would do so with Britain as its shield, just as the latter has thus far done with France, Norway, the Netherlands and Belgium in fighting the Germans. As viewed from the British standpoint, it is only reaping what it did sow.

"American participation in the European hostilities directly affects the East Asian situation. It denotes development of a de facto world war. That a war benefits no nation is plain enough. Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka repeatedly warns the Japanese against challenging the United States. That is by no means because he is afraid of America, but because he is too well aware of the fatality of such a world war; aware of room still left for averting such fatal possibilities—provided America is made to realize and appreciate the historical necessity of a new order for the world peoples.

"What, however, if America would not agree to such realization and appreciation to the last moment?" With this question which is deemed no longer imaginary, but a burning actuality, the journal concludes that Japan—every Japanese subject—must be prepared to "palm so many aero-bombs that might come to fall upon him for defense" as was recently suggested by Navy Minister Oikawa.

Resolution Testified

Such a Japanese resolution as suggested by the Navy Minister and endorsed by the above journal finds its eloquent testimony in the renewed activities at the whole China front started by the Imperial forces in an implict but powerful contradiction of the rumor reported as current in America that Japan was tired of fighting Chungking, according to the Keijo Nippo.

Pointing out a remarkably large scale on which the Japanese military operations are now resumed against Chungking, and the growing distress, in consequence, of the Chiang Kai-shek Government on the other hand, the paper asserts that the fall of Chungking is only a matter of time.

The world situation surrounding the Anglo-German war foreshadows the advent of the worst in both the West and the East, thinks the journal, which as the best way for Japan to follow, suggests with Ambassador Kumataro Honda the concentrated efforts toward the strengthening of the new Nanking Regime. "And the best way to effect such strengthening is," concludes the paper, "to weaken the position of Chungking."

Holding Casting Vote

Japan holds now the casting vote: what line of action America may follow or even in what form the present European war may end depends in a large measure upon what Japan decides to do at this moment. This is the conclusion of the editorial in the Nikkan Kogyo, which, pointing out the steadily growing prospects of German victory over Britain and the consequent growing difficulty wherein America finds itself driven because of its Britain-aiding policy, observes the situation in the following light:

"The latest development of the front situation in Europe unmistakably indicates the reassuring progress of the German Mediterranean campaign. After the British influence has been swept off the Mediterranean Sea, Britain must be regarded as hopelessly defeated whether England is occupied or not by the Germans.

"The Soviet's latest political move well bespeaks of their incisive pre-conclusion of the German victory through the past developments of the situation in the Balkan states and in the Near East. All these latest developments of the European situation mean a favorable turn of the Eastern situation, with the Soviets willingly going to confine their activities in the Southwest, off from the Far East, and the United States driven to the necessity of reconsidering its policy of going too far in the British aid.

"The prospective future development of the world under the circumstances will multiply factors inimical to the Anglo-American interest. As a matter of fact, it may be fairly asserted that Japan's patient attitude toward the Anglo-American policy is the very factor checking the otherwise accelerated aggravation of the ever spreading anti-Anglo-American sentiments of the world.

"In what direction to lead the world sentiments and to what end to bring the present war might thus be regarded as depending in no small measure upon the very policy Japan decides to follow. With this actuality in view, America and Japan ought to reconsider what each should do."

Only Way for America

As regards what America should do, if it would contribute anything at this juncture towards the world's peace and welfare, the Hochi Shimbun prints a noted public commentator Mr. Teichi Muto's article, a gist of which may be reproduced as follows:

"America's participation in the hostilities against Germany is at once natural and inevitable. Time is the only factor preventing the posibility from its release for this moment.

"Presumably no one is more surprised than President Roosevelt himself that things should have come to this pass. In the face of his repeated public assurances to the people as to America's non-participation in war, President Roosevelt has all the time been playing with fire after all at the vestibule of a powder magazine.

"The first and foremost cause of the American worry over the problem of participation in warfare is inadequacy of preparations. With the greatest portion of its fleets in the Pacific, America cannot but find it no easy task to maintain an effective 'patrol' over the Atlantic. With 12 out of the 15 battleships kept on the Pacific now, only three are kept afloat on the Atlantic. America has 26 submarines in Manila. But none of them seem going to be moved round to the Atlantic for all the "President's gestures for advance into war."

Two-Ocean War

Attributing that inconsistency after all to the impossibility of fighting in the Atlantic and the Pacific at the same time under the present circumstances of the United States, the critic points out in proceeding the fatal dilemma in which President Roosevelt now finds himself, because of his policy of aiding Britain beyond the bounds of necessity and prudence, and because of all the numerous elements at home and abroad that detract much from the American confidence in hostile operations to start.

The only way out of that dilemma for America is, the critic emphatically suggests, to recognize Japan's position in the proposed East Asia Co-prosperity Sphere, giving up aid to the Chungking Regime. "This is plain enough to see for the President. Only the question is whether he has got that much wisdom and courage."

JAPANESE MAINTAIN EAST INDIES TRADE

Commercial Enterprises Occupy 33 Per Cent of Nipponese Residents of Islands

Recent business activities of Japanese residents in the Netherland East Indies with ample promises for further development are described by Fumio Yamada, director of the research department of the Pacific Society, Tokyo, in the Nichi Nichi following his recent return home from his inspecting trip over there. His article is substantially as follows:

"The Japanese residents in the Netherlands East Indies numbered 6,733, according to an investigation in 1939. Results of national census taking have not been announced since 1930, but Japanese there are given the same social treatment as Europeans. Of the 1930 population of Europeans numbering 240,162 in all, Dutch topped the list with 208,269, or more than 86 per cent, Germans came second with 7,381 and Japanese were a good third with 7,195. Japanese are treated differently from Chinese. Reflecting the recent international situation, the number of Japanese withdrawing home is increasing now and naturally their present number is smaller than what it used to be 10 years ago. About 45 per cent of the Japanese residents are members of business men's families and the real number of those really engaged in various parts, but the number in Java is 4,314, that in Sumatra 1,125, that in Celebes 603, that in Borneo 51, that on the Moluccas Islands 137 and that in New Guinea 36.

33 Per Cent in Commerce

"Occupations in which they are engaged are various. Apart from those connected with consular and other Government services, those having commercial business are 2,184, or 33 per cent, those interested in aquatic industry 401, or 6 per cent, those engaged in industry 167, or 3 per cent, those taking up agricultural pursuit 142, or 2 per cent, and those related to forestry, mining, transportation, medical practitioning and other kinds of jobs are less in percentage. It makes us feel strong to see at least two or three Japanese retail shops exist at almost every place. General merchandise is sold. Whenever we happen to see a Japanese business shop, we are instantly lured to drop in it to exchange word with men in it, shopping apart. Most of them went there many years ago with a little money and amassed a fortune without Government protection or capitalists' support. In most instances, they are self-made men, having established their firm business foothold through their trade with natives.

"Chinese merchants wield the greatest commercial influence there. They laid their ground work many, many years ago and naturally their influence is deep-seated beyond dispute. The Hsien Yuan and Company is the largest business concern among Chinese. Their infiltrating power is quite strong and it will be a really hard task for Japanese there to compete with them. Unlike Japanese, Chinese merchants there are carrying on business in an amazingly large number of classes. It is convincing and pleasant for a Japanese to see comparatively large Japanese business houses doing business among many Chinese retail shops in a country town.

"Shigezo Okano, running the Chiyoda Yoko with many branches over cities and towns there, is the most conspicuous man of all Japanese who gained prosperous business. He is too well known to be introduced here. We should like to pin our hopes more on the future activity of Japanese who are maintaining their shops in keen competition with Chinese merchants in country towns. We also must not lose sight of Japanese who are toiling in agriculture and fishery there. There are no less large estates specialized in plantation of sugar, rubber and tea. That they are playing an important part in the Japanese activity there cannot be denied, but exploits of those who are paving their own way through their sole efforts should not be forgotten.

Sato Has Plantation

"For instance Tsurumatsu Sato is managing a large plantation in a mountain of Java. Many kinds of farm products are shipped to various parts of the island. I happened to stop overnight at his house at the farmyard and heard him telling me how he has taken great efforts to develop the yard to the present prosperity. A few other farm yards are also tilled by Japanese near the Sato yard. About 70 or 80 per cent of the total amount of potatoes consumed in Java at present are raised by Japanese. Rice and corn also form major agricultural products of Java. These are raised by natives, but their sales are monopolized by Chinese. Chinese maintain rice mills in various places. Buying, refining and sales of rice are all done by Chinese, who have a guiding influence on rice production. Only a small number of Japanese rice millers is maintaining business in eastern Java. While traveling over the eastern part of Java, I happened to stop overnight at Banjoewangwi and to talk with a Japanese having a rice mill at a point several miles off that town.

"The Tozan Shokai at Samarang and the Sato Plant at Pandong are the two leading Japanese industrial concerns. The former is manufacturing slippers and the latter cloth. Slippers are sold at cheap prices to East Indians. Cloth is manufactured by Japanese machines and at present the manufacture of staple fiber cloth is its chief business.

"The Higashi Indo Nippo, or East Indies Daily News, is the only Japanese newspaper. This paper carries correct information on Japan. In spite of control on publication by the Batavia Government, this paper is fulfilling its mission of news reporting and comment.

ST. LOUIS LEADS NATIONAL LEAGUE

Gashouse Gang Displaces Dodgers After Crucial Series —Indians Top A.L.

United Press

NEW YORK, May 21.—The St. Louis Cardinals opened their crucial Brooklyn series with an impressive 9 to 3 victory today, increasing their lead over the Dodgers to more than two games.

The Dodgers started strong by collecting two scores in the first inning, but the lead was short lived as the Cards came back in the third with a three-run rally. In the fifth Brooklyn tied up the score, but from then on the visitors trailed with the St. Louis nine putting the game on ice with rallies in the fifth and eighth frames.

Harry Gumbert, after a bad start, settled down and limited the heavy hitting Dodgers to nine hits. Kemp Wicker started on the hill for the Dodgers but gave way in favor of Curtis Davis in the fifth.

Though the league leadership may have been at stake in the Cards-Dodgers tussle, the feature game of the senior circuit was at Cincinnati where the Giants bested the Red Birds 6 to 3 in an extra inning game. The Giants were trailing 3 to 0 when the ninth inning rolled around. Ace Adams retired the first two Giants easily but Carry Danning then stepped up and slashed out a circuit drive. He was followed by Bill Jurges who singled and Joe Orengo and Joe Oden who connected with doubles. When the dust cleared away the score was locked at three-all.

Browns Win a Game

In the American League Bob Muncrief and John Kramer handled the mound assignment for the Browns and limited the Red Sox to five hits, including one run which was scored off Muncrief in the fifth.

St. Louis collected 13 hits, most of them off Charlie Wagner who stayed on the mound until the ninth when he was relieved in favor of Les Fleming.

Cleveland's mighty Indians stayed well at the top of the league by besting the seventh place Washington Senators 4 to 3. The Indians came from behind in the ninth to push over the necessary two runs.

With two outs gainst them the Peckinpaugh club opened their rally with Lou Bordreau driving out a double. Bordreau came home when Roy Weatherley followed with a single. Hal Trosky then connected with a long single to drive in the winning run.

Al Smith, Joe Heving and Harry Eisenstat saw mound duty for the Indians while Sydney Hudson went the full route for the Tigers.

The Chicago White Sox held onto second place as they took the measure of the Philadelphia Athletics by a 4 to 1 count.

Johnny Rigney was in fine form and limited the Athletics to six hits. He also received perfect support from his mates. The Chicago club broke into the scoring column in the third frame by pushing over a lone run. The Athletics came back in the fifth to knot the score. In the sixth the White Sox added two more to their total and then pushed over one more for good measure in the ninth.

Cards Take Another

The St. Louis Cardinals made it two straight over the Brooklyn Dodgers by piling up an early lead and coasting to a 7 to 6 victory.

Brooklyn made a desperate effort to overcome the big lead and stay in the running for the senior league leadership but their ninth inning rally fell one run short of tying the score.

Lon Warneke started on the mound for the Cards but gave way late in the game in favor of Hubert Lanier. Brooklyn used Hugh Casey, Vito Tamulis and Brown in an effort to quiet the Cards' big bats.

Don Padgett led the batting attack for the winners by clouting out a homer with two mates aboard. Infielder Johnny Mize also came through with a circuit drive.

The Dodgers collected three runs in the final frame as Lewis Biggs, Joe Medwick and Harry LaVagetto accounted for doubles and Herman came through with a single.

Behind the steady hurling of Paul Derringer the Cincinnati Reds came through with a 6 to 4 win over the New York Giants.

The Reds collected six runs in the first three innings and were never threatened. The Giants bunched two scores in the fourth and followed with single runs in the sixth and seventh frames.

Both clubs played airtight ball, and the Reds collected nine hits off two Giant hurlers, while Derringer limited his opponents to seven safeties.

Rain forced the postponement of the other two senior league games.

THAI FEELING PINCH OF CRAFT SHORTAGE

Bangkok Merchants Grow Anxious as Rice, Rubber Take Bulk of Bottoms

United Press

BANGKOK, May 22.—The shortage of shipping in the Far East is causing considerable anxiety in Bangkok shipping circles and threatens Thai with a dearth of imported goods.

Since the inception of the European war tramp steamers have almost ceased to call at Bangkok and shippers have been unable to charter shipping space to and from Bangkok. In normal times four or five tramp steamers and chartered ships called at this port each week.

Almost all the ships now touching Bangkok are coastal steamers plying the China coast and the South Seas. The withdrawal of large numbers of British ships from Pacific trade has served to lessen the number of bottoms serving Bangkok. Many of these ships are now being used as troop transport and supply ships by the British Navy. Japanese bottoms alone call here as regularly as they did before the war.

Rice its Valuable

The increased demand for rice in China, Hongkong and Japan has made rice the most valuable cargo shipped from Thai. The freight rate for rice has more than doubled in the past two months. Although the exportable surplus of Thai rice is only about 900,000 tons this year, as against a normal yearly surplus of 1,300,000 tons, steamers have not had room in their holds for other cargo. Shipping space has decreased much more than rice production. Shippers find they cannot buy space for general cargo as long as there is a commodity as valuable as rice waiting shipment.

Shippers with general cargo piled on Bangkok wharfs are finding it hard even to have it shipped to Singapore, Hongkong or Manila, where it could be transshipped on one of the steamers touching those ports. This situation is due mostly to the withdrawal of British ships from the Bangkok run. The United States Navy has 500 tons of teak waiting here for shipment to America for use in the construction of warships in the U.S. naval program.

Japanese ships call as frequently as ever at Bangkok. But a constant stream of trucks loaded with rubber and rice destined for Japanese buyers fill their holds and no room is left for the general cargo of other nations. Most of the rubber now grown in Thai is purchased by Japan.

Imports to Trickle

The flow of imports into Thai has dwindled to a trickle as a result of the shipping shortage. Bangkok is beginning to feel the scarcity of imported foodstuffs. Grocers have run out of Australian butter, whiskey, coffee and other similar commodities. Factories which have ordered machine replacements in the United States and Europe have been forced to wait months for delivery. Consequently, many buyers have turned to Japan for materials wherever possible.

The application of the licensing law to almost all exports from the United States has further delayed shipments of necessity articles to this country. This is especially true in the case of machinery.

The Thai people as a whole, however, will be affected by the shipping problem only as it effects the price of rice. The capital and several of the larger Thai cities are the only places where imported foodstuffs find a market. The average Thai is a farmer. He raises his own food and, until cheap Japanese goods flooded the country, he wore clothing woven by his wife and daughters. He is almost self sufficient and, if the importation of cheap Japanese goods should be stopped, he still has his old loom and his wife has not yet forgotten how to use it.

SYRIANS SUPPORT DENTZ

Newspapers Endorse Attitude of French High Commissioner

Transocean

BEIRUT, May 20.—Syrian newspapers today unanimously endorsed the attitude taken by French High Commissioner General Henri Dentz in his radio broadcast speech yesterday.

General Dentz said that France is determined to resist every British attack.

The newspapers pointed out that this address clarifies the situation and that the British authorities now know exactly how things stand.

They added that the French mandatory authorities in Syria, in their defensive struggle against the British forces may rest assured of the support of the Arab population.

The Arab people are patiently awaiting developments while the French authorities are doing everything possible to put the country into a state of defense, Syrian newspapers said.

SOUTHWARD ADVANCE SEEN BY DEPARTMENT STORES

Economic Investigation Parties Will Study Possibilities of Economic Expansion

In view of the economic importance of the southern part of the "East Asia Co-prosperity Sphere," the Japan Department Store Association plans to make an economic advance to the same area and concrete programs are under deliberation.

With the first rate department stores, including the Mitsukoshi and Shirokiya, ready to dispatch their respective inspection parties to the southern co-prosperity sphere, their southward economic march is expected to be realized in the course of the year.

The outlines of the plan under deliberation are as follows:

1. For the time being, department stores should be established in Thailand and French Indo-China.

2. Alternative plans are the establishment by a corporation under a joint account of all the member department store companies, and the separate advance of each company to the assigned market.

3. In both countries, the influence of Chinese overseas merchants cannot be ignored, and taking into consideration the right of existence of Japanese general dealers in this area, a wholesale trade should be also carried on.

Undersea Bore in Kanmon Straits Nearing Completion —Locomotives Tested

The completion of the epochal sea tunnel under the Kanmon Straits, between Shimonoseki and Moji, is near.

Iwao Kugimiya, chief of the engineering office, is now discussing programs of the opening ceremony of the tunnel with the Railways Ministry.

The Railways Ministry, at the same time, is planning to select some 120 employes of the Moji and Hiroshima Railways Bureaus to be appointed as drivers in the Kanmon tunnel. They will be trained in the Tokyo Railway Driver Training Institute. The term of training is one year for higher drivers and eight months for ordinary ones. Their training will start from early next month.

In the meantime, nine out of the 10 locomotives to be used in the tunnel railway have been completed and are being tested on the Tokaido railway line.

The Railways Ministry is also negotiating with the railway offices in Chosen, Manchoukuo and North China regarding reorganization of the diagrams after the completion of the Kanmon under-sea tunnel.

EUROPE'S ECONOMY UNIFIED AT LAST

System of Planned Economy Realized Under Germany's Leadership

D.N.B.

BERLIN, May 27.—German economic policy scored another big success in the course of the past week. The Reich Ministry of Finance announced that Germany's revenues during the taxation year 1940 rose to a total of 40 milliards. More than half of all expenditures of the Reich in the course of the present war can thus be covered from this amount.

In addition, this high figure gives a true reflection of the enormous economic power of the working German nation. The productive capacity of Germany is steadily being enlarged. Industrial orders amounting to over 1,000,000,000 marks have been turned over to the industries of the occupied areas of the European West in the last year, while the productive capacity of the European Southeast is now also being employed for the German economic needs. Factories which so far had been closed down in these territories for reasons of a false economic policy were awarded large orders from the Reich thus giving additional work to industrial establishments in Croatia, Serbia and also partly in Rumania.

The entire industry of Europe thus comes to a closer collaboration under the leadership of the Greater German Reich. In very few man to man conferences of the leading industrialists of the different countries could problems be clarified and was work distributed as it is now. Such obvious advantages for all were also introduced in Germany's relations with foreign countries. The first country to take up respective negotiations for a general industrial planning was Bulgaria. An industrial subcommittee working in unison with the usual industrial Government committee arranged a cooperative assistance and limited the mutual interests within the four most important Bulgarian industries.

Similar industrial planning is being considered in Rumania.

Another important economic event during the past week was the agreement reached between Germany and Turkey providing for a considerable increase of German-Turkish commerce by means of compensations involving about 30,000,000 marks. Many articles which so far could not be delivered on account of the comparatively small compensation amount of 40,000,000 marks will now be brought on their way and will thus benefit the economics of both these countries. New agreements covering the current compensation year were also concluded with Bulgaria in the course of this week. Bulgaria's economic life proved to be rather resistant to the war events enabling the conclusion of new agreements.

A trade agreements was likewise concluded in the course of this week with Slovakia for the purpose of reducing the high clearing balance which exists at the present time in favor of Slovakia. Prices of German export merchandise for Slovakia were reduced in order to make Slovakia's market more responsive to German goods and thus to help to reduce the balance. The Slovakian State in addition has place an order for railway material and industrial outfits in Germany. The economic negotiations will be commenced this week with newly founded Croatia in order to create a clearing system for both countries and thus to facilitate the exchange of merchandise.

U.S. WHEAT HELD DOWN

Acreage Allotment for 1942 Shows Decline Because of War

United Press

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The Department of Agriculture yesterday announced the 1942 national wheat acreage allotment would total 55,000,000 acres.

The allotment was a reduction of 7,000,000 acres from this year's allotment due to lack of export markets and increasing surpluses.

The prospective carry over of 390,000,000 bushels July 1 would give the nation a total of approximately 1,250,000,000 bushels, which is over 500,000,000 bushels above the estimated domestic consumption and exports for next year.

MANILA ASSEMBLY SESSION IS CLOSED

Terminates With Flurry of Defense Bills and Support to U.S.

United Press

MANILA, May 23.—The National Assembly early today closed its regular session on a keynote of defense cooperation with the United States.

Scores of bills were passed in the last minute rush, including extension of President Manuel Quezon's emergency powers for another year, appropriation of 10,000,000 pesos for civilian defense, resolution asking the U.S. Congress to indefinitely postpone graduating taxes on Philippine products entering the United States and enabling bills setting the second Tuesday in November, 1941, for general elections under the new amendments to the Constitution.

Jose Yulo, Assembly Speaker, in his closing speech reiterated the need for more vigorous support of the United States in view of the emergency.

The Administration's bill empowering President Quezon to negotiate with the U.S. Export-Import Bank for a loan of $200,000,000 to finance the islands' ailing economy, hard-hit by war, was not passed due to lack of time, but it was understood Sr. Quezon may summon a special session the first week of June to pass this as well as other "must bills."

It was noteworthy that this constituted the final regular session of the Commonwealth Government's unicameral Legislature which was established by Constitution in 1935. In the next elections, a bicameral Legislature will be chosen, in accordance with amendments to the Constitution which were signed by President Roosevelt last year.

Supplementing the resolution requesting the United States to postpone imposition of taxes on Philippine exports, the Assembly passed another resolution reiterating the nation's desire for independence in 1946 as provided in the present law passed by the U.S. Congress.

The second resolution was inspired by Quintin Paredes, Floor Leader, who objected to the first resolution regarding suspension of the graduating taxes on the grounds that it might be construed by the United States as meaning the Commonwealth was amenable to re-examination of the independence question.

THAI DELEGATION LEAVES MAINLAND

Prince Varnvaidyakara and Party Sail for Beppu After Kwansai Tour

Gratitude for the hospitality accorded the Thai Delegation to the Tokyo Peace Conference was expressed again by Prince Varnvaidyakara Varavarn, chief Thai Delegate Plenipotentiary, as the mission left the Japanese mainland on Tuesday evening, sailing from Kobe Harbor at 6:20 p.m. for Beppu on board the O.S.K. liner, Sumire Maru.

Following the successful conclusion of the negotiations conducted in Tokyo since the beginning of February with the recent signing of the Thai-French Indo-China Peace Treaty, the Thai delegation had been touring Kansai during a week, visiting Nagoya, the Grand Shrines at Ise; the Mikimoto Pearl Farm at Toba, Nara, Kyoto, Osaka, and Kobe.

"I can hardly find words to express our feelings of gratitude for the Japanese hospitality which has been accorded us during all our stay in this beautiful country," Prince Varnvaidyakara told a representative of the Japan Times and Advertiser in an exclusive interview before boarding the ship.

"We have been the guests of the Japanese Government during all this time, and we have been enjoying a most pleasant time, especially after the termination of the negotiations. We are very thankful for the opportunity we are now being given of touring Japan and seeing the sights, as a very happy conclusion of our stay.

"In spite of rainy weather, we spent a very nice day sightseeing in Nara and Kyoto, and we found Osaka to be a very interesting city, with its busy life typical of the activities of modern Japan.

"My little daughter has been making many friends among the Japanese children, who have taught her Japanese songs, and she is now to sing them in Japanese. She is also playing all day with Japanese dolls, which she was given as presents by her many Japanese friends.

"I am quite certain that I shall visit Japan again, and the next time I shall also go to Manchoukuo. Foreign Minister Matsuoka is very eager to have me see the progress of Manchoukuo, which is his great life work."

On the last day of their travels in the Kwansai, Prince and Princess Varnvaidyakara Varavarn and 19 other members of the Thai delegation visited Kobe, reaching Sannomiya station at 9:47 a.m. on Tuesday, from Osaka. They were welcomed by Mr. Kamei, chief of the General Affairs Section of the Hyogo Prefectural Office; Mr. Yagi Kobe's Deputy-Mayor; Mr. Enami Honorary Consul of Thailand, and others.

After resting at the Oriental Hotel the members of the mission inspected the Kawasaki Dockyards and then attended a luncheon given in their honor under the joint auspices of the Prefectural and Municipal Offices, the Kobe Chamber of Commerce and Industry and the Kobe-Thai Society. In the afternoon, Honorary Consul Enami entertained the members of the Delegation at a tea party at the Kanko House in Sumanoura.

A large gathering was present at the Kobe Pier when the delegation boarded the Sumire Maru, where a brief farewell reception was held in the first class dining saloon and cheers were given for the Prince, the Princess and the other members of the mission. As the ship left, the Prince was seen on deck waving a Japanese flag, while the pier presented a lively scene with flags of Thailand and Japan being prominent displayed.

Among those at the pier were the Royal Thai Minister and Mrs. Sri Sena, who accompanied the mission during its Kwansai tour but will remain in Kobe for a few days. They will meet the delegation again on Saturday at Moji, where the Thai mission will board the N.Y.K. liner Fuji Maru for Taihoku. There they will take a plane for Bangkok where they are scheduled to arrive on June 5.

On their journey to Beppu, the mission was accompanied by the Naval Attache and the Military Attache of the Royal Thai Legation in Tokyo and by officials of the Foreign Ministry.

Reich Film Offers Valuable Lessons

this end, we must first develop industrial strength and productivity, and also foster the advance of scientific and technical knowledge of the people. Also young men of the country must be given preparatory training for service in mechanized corps. To attain all these results, we must give such efforts as shown by the German people pictured in the film.

To Conduct Research

Recently the Mechanized and Armoured Headquaters was established in the Army, for undertaking education, administration and research in connection with the mechanization of arms and the supply of their materials. The Planning Board has drafted a basic policy for establishing a new order of science and technique. These are welcome steps.

Within a few years after her declaration of rearmament, Germany managed to form strong mechanized corps. But it was not the result of only five years, but is due to her superior scientific and industrial power, as well as the preparation already made by the German people under hardship and adverse conditions. Also Fuehrer Hitler gave utmost attention to the training of young men and particularly the training of the German motor corps has served much in establishing her mechanized corps.

The Mechanized Defense Association of Japan has been devoting its attention to the fostering of the mechanization of the Army, and it has decided on a plan of training young men and boys of the country in operation of motor cars, as a preparatory training for merchanized corps service.

Then, it is also planned to form students voluntary corps in universities and colleges and local volunteer corps in prefectures. Already 50 students' volunteer corps are organized and local volunteer corps are made at Tokyo, Saitama, Shizuoka, Kyoto and Wakayama prefectures.

AMERICA REMINDED OF PAST MISTAKES

Torpedoeing of London Economic Conference Was One of Diplomatic Errors

Transocean

BERLIN, May 20.—"The memory of the people in other American countries is not as short as the United States would like it to be," the semi-official Deutsche Diplomatisch Politische Korrespondenz declared yesterday in commenting upon the speeches of President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull on the occasion of the commencement of this year's Foreign Trade Week.

"Europe likewise does not suffer from amnesia. Europe has not forgotten that it was the United States Government which torpedoed the international economic conference—to which all states had sent delegates with the best of intentions—because America would not allow currency stabilization which would destroy the chances for dumping.

"Nevertheless, President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull believe that they can offer some kind of world leadership on the part of the United States for the reconstruction of world economy," this German journal which is close to the Wilhelmstrasse continued.

After mentioning the various plans for world improvement proclaimed by the United States during the past few years, the Deutsche Diplomatisch Politische Korrespondenz added that "the United States may build up its own economic system any way it likes. It may decide whether or not it wishes to trade with foreign countries. However, Europe most emphatically denies to President Roosevelt and his friends the privilege of forcing upon it a system which utterly failed in his own country.

"War inciters in the United States have not hesitated to exploit the dissatisfaction existing in all the countries of the Western Hemisphere as a result of the unsatisfactory economic situation for their own purposes.

"But today both President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull complain that the foreign trade of the United States is so small. Their arguments to explain this are simple; this is another example of the doings of the 'evil' authoritarian states.

"However, these speakers did not mention that their country had helped to destroy the principle of the freedom of the seas.

"So we see the same quarters who charge the Axis Powers with intending to rule the world making absolutely no secret of the fact that they together with Britain consider it their self-evident right to rule the seas and thus by this means the world.

"Furthermore, the commercial policy of the United States still labors under the conviction that American products should be sold everywhere to everybody, but that on the other hand, the United States has no obligation to buy from its customers," this semi-official journal concluded.

JAPANESE INVENT NEW PHONE WIRES

Aluminum Substituted for Copper and Steel in Mongolia Communications System

The Mongolian system of electro-communications will shortly be introduced to a new scientific technique which promises to revolutionize the telegraph and telephone services in Mongolia, according to reports from Kalgan.

With the aid of the Japanese Communications Ministry, the Electro-Communications Company of Mongolia has decided to make use of a new Japanese invention, an aluminum alloy as a substitute of copper or steel wire hitherto employed for installations of telegraph and telephone systems.

The adoption of this new type wire not only prevents delayed construction of necessary communications systems due to growing difficulties in obtaining copper wire or its substitutes, but minimizes the burden of all the disadvantages attendant to transport which have hitherto made it difficult to carry the communication facilities into remote country districts. For the aluminum alloy could be turned out so cheaply and so abundantly while its product as telegraph and telephone wire is so light and efficient.

Studying Substitute

Japan has long been studying a most practical substitute of copper or steel wire, in view of the growing difficulty in the case of the former to get an ample supply, and the inferior conductivity in the case of the latter. The effort has recently culminated in the discovery of an ideal substitute in the shape of aluminum alloy.

This is turned out through an original process of chemical disposal of aluminum by blending with the light metal 5 per cent silicon and magnesium. The alloy thus produced possesses as much conductivity as copper while its productive cost hardly exceeds 15 per cent of what copper wire would require. In respect to weight, the new type wire is only a quarter as heavy as copper.

Japan's present success in turning out a new type of wire with such wonderful properties is particularly appreciated by her Continental colleagues, in particular by Mongolia where the dissemination of the electro-communication system, in spite of its urgent necessity under the prevailing circumstances of the Far East, has been considerably retarded for the scantiness of copper supply and for the heavy weight of steel wire which made it out of the question to be carried into the remote mountainous region of the country.

Under the circumstances, Mongolia is the first to introduce the new technique of Japan within the Greater East Asia Sphere of Co-prosperity.

The construction work will thus be taken in hand in the course of a couple of months, according to the Mongolian authorities concerned, who in a press interview made the following statement:

"Mongolia is proud to be the first to make use of Japan's internationally important invention. The Japanese authorities are preparing for mass production of the new alloy and Mongolia is to enjoy its benefit simultaneously with Japan.

Aluminum Use Studied

"How to use aluminum as a copper wire substitute has long been a common subject of world's scientists' study, and the crown of laurels has now been won by Japanese engineers.

"The copper wire hitherto used for telephone or telegraph system construction measured 2.9 m.m. in diameter and steel wire 4.5 m.m. The new wire, however, is as thick as copper wire and yet owns the same strength and conductivity as the latter, while it weighs only one-fourth of the copper wire. This means that one equal load of the new type wire could be spread over a distance four times as long as that of the copper wire.

"The introduction of this new scientific technique thus promises to facilities an epoch-making development for the electro-communication system in Mongolia."

ROOSEVELT DRAGS PUBLIC WITH HIM

Ota Says Wilson Obeyed Public In 1917, but Roosevelt Disobeys It Today

A comparison between the present American situation and that before and after the American participation in the first European war was made, in connection with the fireside chat of President Roosevelt Wednesday, by Tamekichi Ota, former Japanese Minister to Mexico, in an interview with a Domei reporter.

Mr. Ota was appointed to Mexico shortly before the entrance of the United States into the first European hostilities.

President Wilson seemed to be reluctant to participate in the war, while President Roosevelt, on the contrary, seems to be dragging the nation into the war, in the opinion of Mr. Ota.

"I may not be qualified to reply to your question," said Mr. Ota to the Domei reporter, "because I was appointed just before the American entrance into the first European war.

"But I got the impression that President Wilson was unwilling to be involved in the war on the European continent.

"Due to the sinking of the Lusitania and other American ships by German submarines, however, the American public opinion was stimulated, and President Wilson seemed to be driven by public opinion.

"At present the American public opinion is hovering between participation and non-participation, but President Roosevelt himself is behaving positively.

"With regard to the fireside chat on Wednesday, there is nothing new in it. But we can get the impression that the President is steadily leading public opinion toward participation in the war. There is a wide difference between the present American situation and that before the first European war."

United Press

NEW YORK, May 25.—Aging Robert Moses "Lefty" Grove, who rose to heroic heights as ace of the Philadelphia Athletics, today won his 296th major league victory, defeating his old rivals, the New York Yankees, by a 10 to 3 score.

Grove, who in 1930 won 31 and lost four games for an .886 percentage which stood as an all-time record until Johnny Allen broke this in 1937, gave up seven hits to the Yankees and failed to yield an earned run for the Boston Red Sox win.

The Yankees scored three times in the fourth inning after Jimmy Foxx dropped Charlie Keller's sky-breaking fly and then went hay-wire on the throw-in.

The Red Sox bunched hits in the third inning for three runs, added four more in the seventh and two in the eighth. They collected 14 hits during the game, but looked bad in the field by making four errors.

Bob Feller won his ninth victory of the year when the Cleveland Indians smashed the St. Louis Browns, 6 to 0, and continued to hold on to the American league leadership. Feller was in his old form, fanning 13 hitters and walking two while yielding seven scattered safeties.

Jeff Heath led the 9-hit Cleveland and a single. The Indians had their attack by collecting a homer, a triple and a single. The Indians had their big innings in the second and fifth when they collected two runs in both frames.

The Chicago White Sox held on to second place in the junior circuit by defeating the Detroit Tigers, 7 to 3, with a wild seven-run splurge in the seventh inning after the Tigers had amassed a two-run lead earlier in the game.

With the bases loaded, Alton Benton cut loose with a wild pitch and a few moments later Joe Kuhel connected for a double—netting four runs during the big White Sox splurge.

The Tigers added another tally in the ninth inning, but Thornton Lee soon squelched the rally and ended the game with an easy victory. Each club collected eight hits during the game, but the White Sox had theirs when they counted.

Detroit's big guns were Rudy York, who homered in the second, while Frankie Croucher connected for a circuit clout in the ninth.

The Philadelphia Athletics trimmed the Washington Senators, 7 to 3, by making five hits count for five runs in the eighth inning. They also scored tallies in the first and seventh innings.

The Athletics collected 15 hits during the game off Emil Leonard and Alejandro Carrasquel while Johnny Babich and Ferrick yielded 10 hits to the Senators between them.

In the National League Billy Southworth's St. Louis Cardinals took both ends of a double header from the Pittsburgh Pirates when they performed in championship style before a pleased Sunday crowd in their home park.

St. Louis staged a four run rally in the eighth to take the opener by a 6 to 4 score and then nosed out a 4 to 3 win in the night cap.

Shortstop Steve Mesner played an important role in the Cards' first victory by clouting out a long two-bagger when the sacks were loaded in the eighth.

The Southworth club was badly otbit in the first game and four hurlers, Harry Gumbert, Hubert Lanier, Ira Hutchinson and Ernest White were used in an effort to stop the Pirates.

Aidon Willkie went the full route for the Pirates, allowed only 10 hits and was given airtight support. Willkie's downfall proved to be the Cards' ability to bunch their hits to net two runs in the third and four in the eighth.

In the second game the Cards again pushed over a necessary score in eight and eked out a victory by a one run margin.

Howard Wilbur Krist started on the mound for the St. Louis club but was relieved late in the game by Lanier who had seen service in the opener. Robert Klinger, Russel Bauers and Ken Heintzelman saw pitching duty for the Pirates. The Brooklyn Dodgers, back in their home port after a disastrous road trip, came through with an 8 to 4 win over the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Dodgers won the game with a five run rally in the sixth, with Harold Reiser's homer and Joe Medwick's single accounting for most of the runs. Joseph Vosmik and Fred Walker gained walks during the rally, and Arnold Owen did his bit with a sacrifice blow.

John Wyatt started for the Dodgers in the pitching role, but was relieved when the Phillies started nicking him hard and was succeeded by Bill Swift who in turn gave way in favor of Curtis Davis.

The old veteran Charlie Root bested Paul Derringer in a mound duel as the the Chicago Cubs nosed out the Cincinnati Reds 3 to 2. It was the 195th victory of Root's big league career.

The Cubs won the game in the ninth when Charlie George singled, Bill Nicholson came through with a double and George came home on Louis Novikoff's sacrifice fly.

Ernie Lombardi, the Red's hard hitting catcher, batted in both of his teams runs with a circuit drive in the second inning. Derringer allowed only six hits while Root was yielding nine. Both clubs played errorless ball.

The New York Giants led throughout to defeat the Boston Braves 6 to 2.

The big inning for the Giants was the third when John Rucker's and Harry Danning's singles and a circuit drive by Norman Young accounted for two runs.

Cliff Melton and Bill Lohrman hurled for the Giants and allowed nine hits. Manager Casey Stengal used five chuckers against the New Yorkers.

BISMARCK'S SINKING IS LOSS TO GERMANY

But Nation Gratified at Manner In Which Officers and Crew Gallantly Behaved

D.N.B

BERLIN, May 29.—The sinking of the battleship "Bismarck" is a painful loss for the German Navy which the German people deeply mourn. The pain and the sorrow are, however, accompanied by feelings of pride and satisfaction at the achievements connected with the name of this ship. No other navy has ever possessed a ship which in such a short period of service has earned such great fame as the Bismarck.

According to the British description, of the battle which ended with the destruction of the flagship of the Grand Fleet lasted only five minutes. In the same battle, the Prince of Wales, a British battleship in every way equal to the Bismarck, was damaged. The German ship achieved this great success against two of the most powerful battleships of the world within the course of only a few minutes, while the British Fleet required altogether four days to put the single German battleship out of action and to sink her. According to the report of the British Admiralty, the battleships King George V, Prince of Wales, Rodney, Renown and Ramillies, the aircraft carriers Ark Royal and Victorious, the fast cruisers Norfolk, Suffolk, Sheffield and Dorsetshire as well as the destroyers Zulu, Maori and Cossack took part in the operations against the Bismarck. All these ships took part in direct attacks against the Bismarck while numerous unnamed vessels participated in the search for the German battleship. Once more, according to the British reports, this superior force of at least 250,000 tons of the most up-to-date British men-of-war against only 35,000 tons on the German side, was not able to score a decisive hit on the German battleship. This was done by a British torpedo plane being successful in damaging the rudder and propellers thus rendering the Bismarck out of control. Even this success, was only able, following the British report, as a result of several waves of torpedo carrying planes staging massed attacks.

In following the report of the enemy, we note with satisfaction that never in the history of naval warfare has a ship been opposed by a greater superiority in numbers and fought them off longer than did the Bismarck. It is not yet known whether the British Fleet has had to pay for the sinking of the German battleship with other vessels besides the Hood. It can almost be assumed with certainty that other British ships were hit by the Bismarck's guns apart from the up-to-date British battleship, the Prince of Wales, which, as already stated, was damaged.

As an indication of the great respect paid by the British Admiralty to this German battleship can be taken the fact that it only dared to announce to the British public the first installments of the losses suffered off Crete in connection with the sinking of the Bismarck. According to the official British announcement these losses comprise two cruisers and four destroyers. These figures, however, only form 50 per cent of the actual losses, although it nevertheless constitutes the largest figure of losses in warships to be announced by the British Admiralty at one time since the beginning of the war.

SIX MAN FOOTBALL MAKES DEBUT HERE

Grand Tournament Featuring 17 School and Club Teams Saturday and Sunday

Six-man American football, which had its introduction in Japan last year, will move into the spotlight here again when the Tokyo Intercollegiate Football League holds its second tournament at the Waseda University Higashi Fushimi grounds and the Meiji Shrine stadium on Saturday and Sunday.

There will be 240 athletes from 20 schools, clubs and colleges in the 17 game program that will run from 1 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday at the Waseda grounds and from 2:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday at the Meiji Shrine stadium.

The grand finale will be the championship college game. Last year, the Keio team to walk off with the title and cups offered by the Football League and the Asahi Shimbun.

But if Meiji is to repeat, it will have to defeat 15 other teams representing five colleges, Keio, Waseda, Hosei, Rikkyo, Nichidai and an "A" team from Mizuho Gakuin. It's main foe should be Keio, with two teams recruited from last year's Intercollegiate football championship squad.

This year, the tournament will also be participated by two high school teams and two club sixes. The two school outfits, Mizuho Gakuin "B" and Aoyama Gakuin, as well as the Sanyo Shokai and Victor Talking Machine Company club teams, will automatically enter the finals and clash Sunday at the Meiji Shrine field in the championship game of their respective division.

The preliminary round, the quarter finals and semi-finals in the college division will all be run-off Saturday at the Waseda Higashi Fushimi grounds. In the opening game of the tournament, at 10 a.m. the Keio "B" and Meiji "B" will clash. In all Saturday, rain or shine, 14 games will be played. However, the finals on Sunday at the Meiji Shrine gridiron, will be postponed one-week in case of wet weather.

The six-man football game has been the rage for the last several years in the United States. From a spectators point of view, the game is very similar to the regulation eleven-man struggle. Ninety per cent of the rules governing the six-man game are derived from the eleven-men game.

The one major difference, besides the number of players, is that on all running plays, the man taking the pass from center, cannot directly advance with the ball. Always, the man receiving the center's pass must make a backward pass of at least two yards to another back before the offensive team can advance with the ball.

On forward passes, the above rule does not apply and all six players are eligible to receive forward passes. Fifteen-yards, as compared to ten-yards in the eleven game, is required in the six-man game to make a first down.

With all colleges having undergone several weeks of rigorous spring training recently and with the football players familiar with the rules and technique of this new game, the two-day program is expected to provide many thrills for gridiron fans.

The pairings and schedule of the two-day tournament follows:

TOKYO KYOJIN CLUB COPS CHAMPIONSHIP

Local Ball Team Takes League Pennant With Remarkable Standing

The Tokyo Kyojin nine, with a percentage of .786, copped the title of the spring season of the Nippon Professional Baseball League brought to a close Wednesday.

With the local club taking the top position from the opening week of the season, they maintained their lead throughout the past two months and ended up five full games ahead of the Taiyo nine. Of the 28 games played, the League-leaders lost but 6.

Kawakami, slugging outfielder of the Kyojin club, won the individual batting race with a percentage of .321, collecting 34 hits in 106 times at bat. The only other batter to end up in the .300 circle was, Shiraishi, also of Kyojin, who compiled a .301 average.

Showing their complete domination in all fields, the local Giants also took team batting honors with a .248 including 8 home-runs. In pitching the local club also shone as Suda, with 12 victories and two defeats, led the parade of hurlers with an .857 average.

All eight clubs of the League will gather at Osaka this week-end to compete in the Daimai championship tournament at the Nishinomiya stadium, before getting back to the summer playing schedule, which will be launched in the first week of June.

LOU GEHRIG PASSES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Yankee First Baseman Lauded As Greatest Players in Baseball History

COLLAPSED DURING 1939

'Iron Horse' Long Paragon of Health and Stamina

Domei

NEW YORK, June 2.—American big league baseball suffered a serious loss when "Iron Man" Lou Gehrig died today after two years of illness following an attack of infantile paralysis on June 19, 1939. He was 37 years old.

Lou Gehrig was born June 19, 1903 of German immigrants in a tenement in lower Harlem, New York City. When he was four, Gehrig's family moved to Washington Heights where there was more room and more fresh air for the youngsters.

Lou Gehrig was the most durable baseball player in the game's history. From June 1, 1925 until April 30, 1939, Gehrig never missed a ball game with the New York Yankees and ran up the amazing record of playing in 2,130 consecutive games.

Through those 15 years, Gehrig, by sheer grit and extraordinary constitution, performed one of the miracles of baseball and earned the title of "The Iron Man." Of all the men in the baseball world, Gehrig was considered the one least likely to fold up overnight the victim of a disease which has defied medical aid.

Death Notice on Birthday

But after a week of examination at Mayo Brothers' Clinic, Rochester, Minnesota, a shocked baseball world was informed that Gehrig was suffering from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, a type of illness known in lay terms as chronic poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis). Gehrig received the sad news on June 19, 1939, his 36th birthday.

Gehrig remained with the Yankees the rest of the 1939 season, but retired from baseball after the Bronx Bombers had won their fourth straight world title by defeating the Cincinnati Reds in four straight games. In respect to his long and faithful service to the club, the Yankees retired his "No. 4" and gave the ball player permanent ownership of his locker in the Yankee dressing room.

On October 9, 1939, Mayor Fiorelli H. LaGuardia appointed Gehrig to a 10-year term as a member of the three-man parole commission at a salary of $5,700. Occasionally Gehrig would drop in quietly at the Yankee Stadium and sit on the Yankee bench in civilian clothes during a game.

More than once during his fabulous career, Gehrig played on his nerve alone. He had attacks of lumbago so bad that he was unable to dress himself in his uniform. He had his feet stepped on and cut. His legs and fingers were bruised and bashed. Once he played for a period with a chipped bone in his little finger.

Suffered Lumbago

The nearest Gehrig ever came to breaking his consecutive game string before the final exit was at Detroit 1934. He had lumbago so badly he could not rise out of bed.

"I had to fall out of bed to get up," Gehrig said in recalling the incident. "I called the club trainer, Dr. Painter, and he had to undress me and help me get into my baseball togs. I led off in the lineup, I singled and then retired to nurse my aching back."

Once in Washington, a doctor ordered Gehrig out of the game after he was hit on the head by a pitched ball thrown by Earl Whitehill, but the Yankee first baseman refused to obey. He played on and hit a homer that won the game.

Gehrig attended the High School of Commerce, but did not make the baseball team until his second year. He first attracted the attention of baseball scouts when he hit a home run over the rightfield fence at Wrigley Field, Chicago, in the annual inter-city high school game between the champions of New York and Chicago.

College Student

Gehrig attended Columbia University and starred at football as well as baseball. While at Columbia, he tried out with the Giants at the Polo Grounds, but John J. M. McGraw did not pay a lot of attention to him. McGraw sent Gehrig to Hartford, where he played under the name of Lewis, but he became homesick and jumped the club.

In 1923, the Yanks signed Gehrig, giving him $3,500. Eight other clubs, including the Giants, had been after Gehrig to sign a contract, but the Yankee proposition made up his mind for him.

"My mother had double pneumonia, and my dad had not worked in six months," Gehrig said. "I took the money so fast Ed Barrow did not have a chance to change his mind."

Soda Jerker

Gehrig went South with the Yankees in 1924 and had only $12 in his pocket. For a while he had a part-time job as a soda-clerk in New Orleans, where the Yanks trained that year, in order to pay his incidental expenses. When Miller Huggins learned of Gehrig's plight, he arranged for the club to give him extra expense money.

The Yanks sent Gehrig back to Hartford in 1924 because he was promised a bonus of $1,500 if he went back there. He had become popular with the fans in Hartford during his first appearance there. He hit .369 and came back to the Yanks the next spring.

Wally Pipp was playing first base for the Yanks, and Gehrig had to sit on the bench. He grew restless and asked Manager Huggins to send him back to the minors.

"Be patient young man," Huggins counseled him. "I have plans for you. Besides, I couldn't send you out of the league."

Pinch-Hitter Debut

One June 1, Gehrig appeared in the Yankee lineup as a pinch-hitter, batting for Pee Wee Wanninger. Only a few weeks before Wanninger had replaced Deacon Scott at short-stop, and snapped the veteran infielder's record of playing in 1,307 games. The experts predicted at the time that Scott's record probably would never be broken.

The next day, Wally Pipp came back into the Yankee clubhouse after infield practice and asked the trainer for some tablets. He had been bothered by pains in his head as a result of an accident in his youth. Huggins overheard Pipp's request.

"Got a headache?" the little manager asked. "Well take the day off and let this kid play."

To Gehrig, Huggins said, "Now, here's the chance you've been hollering for. Let's see what you can do."

Gehrig batted sixth in the batting order, and made two singles and a double off George Mogridge and Allan Russell of Washington, helping the Yanks to win, 8-5. He was a landmark at first base for the Yanks for the next 14 years.

Broke Many Records

Connie Mack, Mickey Cochrane and Joe McCarthy were among the diamond peers who judged Gehrig as the greatest first baseman of all time. Connie Mack had Jimmy Foxx as his first baseman, and he saw George Sisler, Hal Chase, Frank Chance and all the other oldtime greats in action. He deemed Gehrig the star of them all.

Gehrig broke and equalled many records during his 17 years with the Yanks. His lifetime batting average for 2,162 games was .340. He played in seven world series and batted .361. He hit 493 home turns during his major league career, a figure exceeded only by Babe Ruth and Jimmy Foxx. On 23 occasions he hit homers with the bases filled.

In 1934 he led the American League in batting with an average of .363. He collected nearly $400,000 in salary and world series cuts during his Yankee career. His top salary was $36,000 in 1937. He was given the "most valuable award" in 1927 and 1936.

BRITAIN PUTS EGGS ON NEW RATION LIST

Lord Woolton Optimistic Despite Fear of Having to Limit More Foods

Reuters

LONDON, May 29.—Lord Woolton, Minister of Food, will shortly put eggs on his list of rationed foodstuffs. He told the House of Lords yesterday that he was going to adopt this course as an experiment. There will be no regular weekly ration, and he would do his utmost to secure the maximum possible ration. Special provision will be made for children and invalids.

He hoped he would never have to ration bread, but he believed he would ration milk whether he had to from necessity or not.

He proposed to bring more and more foodstuffs under control and regulate their passage on the most economical lines from the importer to the consumer.

Lord Woolton declared that food prices were already held down for all major commodities. Wheat imports would continue without an increase in price at the port of shipment for at least 12 months.

"We can see," he said, "at least 12 months ahead in maintaining bread supplies and meat supplies at the present level. For meat supplies we must look partly to the home farmer, who is doing his job toward winning this war. Our food supplies have been maintained in cities and ports which have been the target of enemy attacks and tens of thousands of people were provided with meals by the Ministry of Food emergency organization in cities which suffered from air attacks.

"We have suffered hardships, hinderances and some serious losses, but we have emerged from the winter and after 20 months of war in a position as strong and secure in food supply as 12 months ago.

"We are restricted and beleaguered, and I thank God that we can face the coming months with confidence in the security of our essential food supply."

Baer Charges Louis With Illegal Punch; Board Rejects Claim

United Press

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The District of Columbia Boxing Commission unanimously rejected yesterday Buddy Baer's claim to the world's heavyweight title on the grounds that he was fouled by Champion Joe Louis in their bout here last Friday. Baer claimed that Louis hit him after the bell had sounded ending the sixth round. Baer had just risen at the count of ten before the closing gong sounded. Because of the roar of the crowd, Louis apparently failed to hear the bell closing the round, and he landed a terrific right to the head, flooring Baer. Referee Donovan later said that the knockout blow was landed before the bell, but most observers, including the United Press sports scribes, said the punch was delivered after the bell. Baer's seconds refused to leave the ring when the warning whistle sounded ten seconds before the bell for the opening of the seventh round, and they still declined to leave when the bell rang for action. Donovan then disqualified the challenger who was helpless, half-unconscious on his stool from the beating administered by Louis.

BILLY CONN SIGNS FOR JOE LOUIS GO

Sensational Young Irishman Developing Punch for Title Bout June 18

United Press

NEW YORK, May 29.—After a stormy dispute regarding terms with Mike Jacobs, outstanding boxing promoter, Billy Conn and his manager, Johnny Ray, yesterday signed a contract for a title bout with Joe Louis, world heavyweight champion, on June 18 at the Polo Grounds here.

Conn, youthful Irish-American fighter from Pittsburgh, entered the ranks of the heavyweights last year after relinquishing his world light-heavyweight crown.

He has been after a bout with Louis for more than a year. Although tentatively promised a fight with Louis by Jacobs, head of the 20th Century Sporting Club who handles all bouts in which Louis appears, Conn only signed papers yesterday.

A classy boxer who is extremely fast with his hands, Conn has been concentrating in the past few months on developing harder blows. Formerly he specialized in jabbing, but he has slightly changed his style recently in an effort to put more beef behind his blows.

Conn has been engaged in a warm-up campaign in preparation for his big fight with Louis. In his most recent showing he scored a technical knockout over Buddy Knox earlier this week. Conn revealed great improvement in his punching power, battering Knox so badly in the seventh round that Knox could not come out for the eighth canto. Knox was knocked down three times in the seventh round.

Conn weighed 180 pounds, which made sports scribes believe that he would attempt to put on a few pounds before meeting Louis, who weighs about 203 pounds and thus possesses an advantage of more than 20 pounds.

NEW YORK, May 29.—Collecting three runs in the last of the ninth the Cardinals came through with a 6 to 5 victory over the ambitious Chicago Cubs today at St. Louis.

The league leaders trailed badly, and were outhit by the Cubs, but timely blows by Terry Moore, Steve Mesner, Martin Marion, Harry Walker and Don Padget spelled victory for the Cards.

The big guns in last inning rally were Mesner, who connected with a three bagger, and Moore, who came through with a double.

White on Mound

Ernie White drew the mound assignment for the Cards but held out only five innings and was succeeded by Howard Krist and finally by Clyde Shoun who received the credit for the win. Larry French, Vince Page and Vern Olsen saw pitching duty for the Cubs.

The Pittsburgh Pirates piled up an early lead to humble the Cincinnati Reds 7 to 4. Al Butcher went the full route on the hill for the winners, and though nicked for a dozen hits, held his foes scoreless until the eighth frame.

The big inning for the Pirates was the third, when Vince DiMaggio clouted out a homer after Maurice Van Robay had singled and Al Fletcher walked. The Pittsburgh club also bunched two runs in the first frame and the same number in the eighth.

Playing under the kleig lights at Philadelphia the Brooklyn Dodgers pushed over a 6 to 5 win from the Phillies in a 12-inning battle.

Both clubs collected 14 safe blows as Brooklyn used three hurlers and the Phillies four.

Cleveland Breaks Losing Streak

United Press

NEW YORK, May 29.—Rog Peckinpaugh's Cleveland Indians came bounding out of their doldrums today, and behind the near-perfect pitching of "Blazin' Bob" Feller broke their three-game losing streak with a lashing 9 to 0 win over the Detroit Tigers.

Feller pitched his third straight shut-out of the season, keeping the seven Tiger hits well scattered and fanning eight Detroit batters.

Kenny Keltner led the 13-hit Cleveland attack by getting a homerun in the fourth inning.

Tommy Bridges started on the mound for Detroit and yielded one run in the second and fourth innings. The Indians jumped on him for three runs in the fifth, and Bridges gave way to Floyd Giebell in the sixth. The Indians nicked Giebell for three runs in the eighth inning, however.

White Sox Blanks Browns

The Chicago White Sox blanked the St. Louis Browns, 4 to 0, to hold tight to their second-place position in the League standings.

Bill Dietrich almost entered baseball's Hall of Fame with a no-hitter, but Chester Laas found him for a single in the fourth inning—the only hit of the game. Dietrich gave two free passes to first base.

The White Sox scored three runs in the fifth inning when Julius Solters drove out a four-bagger, Myril Hoag collected a resounding double and Dietrich pounded out a single.

TENNIS AT Y.C.A.C. MOVES INTO FINALS

Matches Being Played in Afternoons Despite Traditional Rainy Sundays

Despite unfavorable weather during the past five weekends considerable progress has been made in the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club's annual spring tennis tournament, more than 40 matches having already been played in the eight events.

With the courts having been unplayable most of the time during weekends for the past month on account of rain, competitors have been playing off matches during the week, taking advantage of the long days.

Most progress has been made in the ladies' singles handicap, Miss W. Dunning having already advanced to the final. She will meet the winner of the match between Miss H. Lord and Mrs. M. L. Russell, who have reached the semi-finals in the other bracket.

Eight matches have been played off in the men's championship singles. W. T. Craigie has made the most headway with three victories in this event to his credit and now has a berth in the semi-final bracket. Two of the other favorites, H. S. G. Batter and J. Cornu, have also overcome all opposition they have met to date.

In the mixed doubles championship, Baroness Fain and S. Stephens are now in the semi-finals, as are Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Fachtmann who won the event last year.

There have been a number of close matches in the various events, quite a few going to the limit in sets. The hardest fought so far is the game in the ladies' singles handicap between Miss H. Lord and Mrs. E. Tanner, the former winning the third and deciding set at 8-6.

One of the feature matches was the one between W. T. Craigie and S. Stephens in the championship singles. Craigie, the younger player, beat the veteran star in a fine exhibition by 5-7, 6-2, 6-2 and 6-4.

FOOTBALL AS USUAL; PRESTON WINS CUP

War Causes No Lack of English Sports Interest as 45,000 See War Cup Match

Reuters

LONDON, June 1.—Scenes reminiscent of peace time marked the Football League War Cup Final replay, in which Preston beat Arsenal by two goals to one. A restricted crowd of 45,000 at Blackburn saw the first national Cup Final held in Lancashire since Sheffield United beat Chelsea at Manchester during the last war.

The early stages were full of action, with Preston more scientific and Arsenal relying on solid defense and quick forward thrusts. Play was generally evenly distributed, with both goals undergoing narrow escapes, particularly when Smith twice kicked clear with the Preston goalkeeper beaten.

It was a faster game compared with Wembley, but not so skilful. Drake, a last minute inclusion in the Arsenal attack, was a constant danger to the Preston defense. There was no score at half-time, but Arsenal were severely handicapped by an injury to Drake, who retired from the game 15 minutes before the end.

Preston took the initiative, swarmed round the Arsenal goal, and Robert Beattie scored for Preston after four minutes. Arsenal equalized when Gallimore, the Preston fullback, kicked into his own goal, but Preston restored the lead. Their forward ran right through from the kick-off, and Robert Beattie finished a fine combined movement with a well-placed shot. Preston then concentrated on defense and finished deserved winners.

Following are the results of football matches played yesterday:

Football League War Cup (final replay)
Preston	2	Arsenal	1
London Cup (semi-finals)

FLOYD DAVIS TRIUMPHS IN INDIANAPOLIS CLASSIC

Averaged 115.117 Miles an Hour—Rex Mays Second—Wilbur Shaw Crashes

United Press

INDIANAPOLIS, May 30.—Floyd Davis, crack, young American racer, today sky-rocketed to fame by winning the gruelling 500-mile Indianapolis Memorial Day speed classic.

Mauri Rose, who was forced out of the race in his own car early in the grind, relieved Davis after Davis had driven the first 178 miles of the race. They averaged 115.117 miles an hour, covering the 500 miles in four hours, 20 minutes and 36.24 seconds.

Rex Mays placed second, followed by Ted Horne, Ralph Hepburn, Cliff Bergere.

Wilbur Shaw, favorite before the race, was a consistent leader until he passed the 375-mile marker when his car crashed into the southwest wall on the 152nd lap.

Shaw was leading at the 130th lap, followed by Mays and Bergere.

Three racers were forced out with broken connecting rods, oil pumps or valves.

PRIVY COUNCILORS DISCUSS PROTOCOLS

Agreements Among Japan, Thailand, French Indo-China Discussed at Palace Meeting

The first session of the Special Committee of the Privy Council was held from 10 a.m. Wednesday in the Imperial Palace for deliberation of the protocol signed among Japan, Thailand and French Indo-China regarding political understanding and Japan's guarantee in connection with the settlement of the Thai-French Indo-China border dispute and the protocol regarding operation of the Border Demarcation Committee.

Two protocols in question were signed on May 9 in Tokyo. The Government has presented them to the Privy Council to be referred by His Majesty the Emperor again to the Privy Council for deliberation.

As a result, the Privy Council has organized a special committee for deliberation of these protocols under the chairmanship of Count Kikujiro Ishii.

The first session of the Special Committee was attended by nine Privy Councilors, including President Dr. Yoshimichi Hara, Vice-President Admiral Kentaro Suzuki and Count Ishii, and representatives from the Government, including Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka, Naokai Murase, Director of the Cabinet Legislation Bureau and Shunichi Matsumoto, Director of the Treaty Bureau of the Foreign Office.

Foreign Minister Matsuoka, at the outset of the meeting explained the reason for which the Government has presented to it these protocols and circumstances leading up to the settlement of the long-pending border dispute between Thailand and French Indo-China.

Mr. Murase and Mr. Matsumoto made more detailed reports and explanations on the matter, followed by discussions among the Privy Councilors.

The session was brought to a close at 12:05 p.m. The second session of the Committee will be held from 1:30 p.m. Saturday to continue deliberation upon the matter.

CHINN BEATS KAIDO IN 10-ROUND BOUT

Filipino Feather-Weight, Joe Eagle, Scores Seventh Round T.K.O. Over Kid Soda

The tall Chinn So-kyoku, ring star of the local Kento Kai, made the most of physical advantages as he hammered his way to a decision over strong-boy Takeshi Kaido, Thursday night in the feature 10-round bout at the Hibiya outdoor amphitheater before a large crowd.

With advantages in height and reach, the Chosenese boy Chinn brushed aside the strong punches of his rival and with a steady fire of straight lefts to the chin and body at long range and close quarters, fought his way to a close decision.

In another 10-round bout, the Filipino feather-weight, Joe Eagle scored a seventh round T.K.O. over Kid Soda, who suffering cuts about the face, failed to answer the seventh round bell.

The only knockdown in the Chinn-Kaido battle came in the fourth round when Kaido half-slipped to the canvas as he took an overhand right to the side of the head for no-counts.

Several times in the early rounds, Kaido landed with powerful counter-punches but with each round Chinn gained strength and was particular successful at long range.

In the first round, the nimble-footed Chinn took the offensive and scored with several fast jabs with his left, However, neither fighter cut loose with damaging blows.

With the second round, Kaido counter-punching nicely at close quarters and with several long rights turned the bout in his favor, keeping rushing Chinn on the defensive.

At the start of the third, Kaido cut loose with a two-fisted attack to the body and head that drove Chinn to the ropes but rallying nicely Chinn outboxed Kaido at long range toward the end of the heat.

The tide of the battle came in the fifth as the stronger Chinn pressing all the way with a wicked body attack sapped the strength of Kaido. Kaido attempted to rally again in the next two rounds, but Chinn belabored his smaller rival about the body at close quarters and snapped Kaido's head back repeatedly with straight lefts from long range. Although tired and outpunched Kaido held his own in the final round, but the points piled up by his foe was too much to overcome.

Joe Eagle, although taking the worst of the earlier rounds, found his rival's chin often enough with uppercuts and swinging lefts and rights to damage Soda's face and eventually earn the T.K.O. A spirited battle all the way, Kid Soda took the attack from the first round but several times was jarred back with stinging uppercuts and hard left and rights.

Knockouts shortened the supporting card. Fujioka flattenning Chyanagi in the first of a scheduled six-rounder and Kimura doing likewise to Yuki. Asano took a six-round decision over Akiyama.

BRAZIL FIRMLY NEUTRAL DESPITE U.S. ATTITUDE

Nation Follows Getulio Vargas, Not Franklin Roosevelt

Transocean

RIO DE JANEIRO, May 31.—Brazil's determination to observe strict neutrality in the present war was again emphasized by the newspaper Melodia yesterday.

"We heard the speech by President Roosevelt with the same natural interest as we would one by Chancellor Hitler, Premier Mussolini, Premier Salazar, Prime Minister Churchill, or Marshal Petain.

"We could boast of having given the world an example of what strict neutrality means. All of us stand united behind the persons of the President of Brazil. What he orders we shall do; and with the conviction that the greatest statesman of America, Getulio Vargas, knows how to repulse foreign aggression.

"We have no reason at all to allow ourselves to be dragged into the catastrophe. We are living in a time of national reconstruction and we therefore do not wish to become mixed up with matters which are none of our business. We insist that when someone talks of the future of Brazil, he will first ask us what we think of his opinion of the matters in question.

"It was for this reason that President Roosevelt's speech had only a very limited echo in Brazil. His speech expressed the opinion of a Government to which we owe international courtesy, but the aims of which we do not want to have anything to do with," this editorial concluded.

SHORT SKIRTS FOR BRITAIN

Pleated Ones Banned—Aim Is to Save Cloth

Transocean

LISBON, May 29.—A dispatch to the Diario de Lisboa this morning from London announced that skirts in the British Isles are shorter than anywhere else in the world and that pleated skirts have been banned by the Government.

Thi has been done to save cloth, the Portuguese newspaper correspondent reported.

London dressmakers have agreed to end skirts normally 45 centimeters above the ground, which makes British skirts five centimeters shorter than American, and seven and one half centimeters shorter than French skirts.

GIANTS GRAB TITLE FOR 5TH STRAIGHT

Defeat Hankyus 5-0 as Suda Gives Out Only Four Hits

For the fifth successive year, the Tokyo Kyojin (Giants) nine won the Daimai Cup professional baseball title by defeating the Osaka Hankyu nine, 5-0 in the finals of the tourney Wednesday at the Nishinomiya stadium, Osaka.

Third place went to the Asahi team which defeated the Nankai squad, 4-2 in the game preceding the championship tilt.

Pitching his team to the title was the big right-hander, Suda, the Russian who limited the Hankyu sluggers to but four-hits. Opposing Suda was Kasamatsu, who gave up ten blows including a triple and a pair of doubles. After five scoreless innings, the Kyojin nine found their eye and tallied a run in the sixth and followed up with two more runs each in the seventh and eighth.

All eight clubs of the League are scheduled to get back into the regular play of the summer season which is slated to begin next week.

Gandhi Faction Fights British Imperialism

liar to the people of India now. When he started it in 1920-21, he was the first "Satyagrahi," and many thousands have since become his followers so much so that in the struggle of 1930-31 as many as 90,000 were convicted as political prisoners. In 1940-41 the response is no less. In order to be able to spread the movement for years if need be—because the present war may continue for some time—Gandhi has made certain changes in the mode of the application of the fight. He has made it Individual Civil Disobedience instead of Mass Civil Disobedience. This change is also helpful to check civil disorder and communal disorder which mischief-mongers, among whom are found governmental agent-provocateurs, may cause in the country.

According to reports received at the office of the All India Congress Committee the total number of Congress leaders who were imprisoned during the first phase of the movement (between October 18 and December 20, 1940) was, 31 ministers and 398 members of various provincial legislatures, 22 members of the Central Legislature, 174 members of the All India Congress Committee and 11 members of the Congress High Command. This does not include thousands of men and women of all classes and communities including students and labor. The total amount of fines imposed on Satyagrahis, during the same two months was Rs42,645.

List of Names

The first phase having been confined only to legislators and office-holders of the Congress, the second phase began in January this year, when Babu Rajendra Prasad, leader of the Province of Bihar and a member of the Congress High Command, presented a list of 1,453 names to Gandhi, and the United Provinces presented a list of 1,500 names. Other provinces followed suit in thousands. Maulana Abdul Kalam Azad, a muslim President of the Congress, who is also jailed now, announced before being convicted that, after the present form of Satyagraha had spread right down to the villages, the next step would be that all four-anna members of the Congress who undertook to follow the conditions laid down by Gandhi and who sent their names for approval, would be allowed to offer Satyagraha. The membership of the Congress is about a million at present, apart from scores of millions who are not formal members but who always rush to stand by the Congress whenever there is struggle.

The situation has grown serious that Sir Jagadish Prasad, an ex-member of the Viceroy's Executive Council, made a statement that the fears of some of them had only come true. Political disagreements had ended in open conflict between the Congress and Government. Those (Congress) who not long ago were governing large provinces with publicly acknowledged success were already in prison or were soon to be there.

The features of the present "Satyagraha" movement are that anti-war slogans will be shouted by selected satyagrahis at place and time specified beforehand. In all these cases, it has been found that the public will have assembled at the spot according to the time of the notice. A complete list of satyagrahis will have been supplied to the District Magistrate from time to time, thereafter every satyagrahi would intimate the District Magistrate as to when and where and on what date he would offer satyagrapha. Anti-war slogans are shouted and the authorities arrest the person. Even ex-premiers of provinces have followed the same course of action.

Not Interested

Some sections like the princes and Indian Liberals are not with the movement, because they are not interested in any popular Indian administration, which may deprive them of the special favors they are enjoying today.

There are some individuals and nationalist groups who criticize this "Satyagraha" to be too mild for the present occasion. Replies are made by the leaders of the movement. Maulana Abdul Kalam Azad, Congress President said, "If India is invaded tomorrow, and there is no other alternative to defend my country, I will not hesitate to take up arms and fight." Gandhi himself gave his opinion that the Non-violent satyagraha was enough against the British, while he had no objection to allow the Congress High Command to resort to other ways of fighting against any other external enemy.

SCOTTSBLUFF, Neb., May 30.—When Mrs. Fred Aaron saw a lavishly-decorated and yellowed set of chinaware in the window of a Scottsbluff sales commission shop, she stood and stared. It reminded her of a wedding gift she had received 42 years ago. Mrs. Aaron hurried home and searched the loft of the barn at the rear of the house. Her set of china and other mementoes were missing. She identified the set in the shop window.

BRITISH CINEMAS TO CLOSE

Three-Quarters of Movie Operators May Be Conscripted

Transocean

STOCKHOLM, May 30.—Provided the Ministry of Labor does not change its recruiting policy, the closing down of 75 per cent of all cinemas in Britain is foreseen by the Daily Mirror as a prelude to the gradual closing down of all the remaining movie houses.

According to the Ministry's latest decree in this respect, men below the age of 35 can be exempted from military service only for most urgent reasons. The Daily Mail points out that three-quarters of all movie operators are below that age.

United Press

NEW YORK, June 2.—The Cleveland Indians and St. Louis Cardinals moved into undisputed first place in the two major leagues today as the Indians trounced the New York Yankees, 7 to 5, and the Cardinals beat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 5 to 4.

Roger Peckinpaugh's Tribesmen, who yesterday trailed the Chicago White Sox by .001 percentage points, took over leadership of the American League when the Washington Senators trounced Chicago, 8 to 3.

"Blazin' Bob" Feller, ace of the Indian staff, won his 11th victory of the year over the Yankee when his mates bunched 10 hits for runs in the first, fifth and sixth innings. Feller yielded but seven base-hits to the Yankees.

The Indians won the game in the fifth inning by combining two hits and three walks. Kenny Keltner, with a triple, and Jeff Heath, with a four-bagger, spear-headed the attack.

Trailing 7 to 3, the Yankees made a big bid in the eighth inning with two runs but were unable to catch up to the Indians, Tommy Henrich sparked the Yankee attack by getting two home-runs, in the fourth and eighth innings.

Steve Sundra, former Yankee hurler, chalked up his fifth win of the year against the Chicago White Sox as the Washington Senators trimmed the western club, 8 to 3.

The White Sox opened the scoring by pushing one run across in the third inning, but the Senators came back with one in the fifth, added two each in the sixth and seventh innings and then blasted out three more in the eighth. The White Sox managed to tally twice in the ninth, but Sundra then tightened up to win hands down.

Riddle and Joe Beggs handled the mound duty for the Reds and were nicked for eight hits, while three Giant hurlers allowed only five hits.

The Boston Bees registered their first shut-out of the season as Richard Marriwell Errickson turned back Pittsburgh, 2 to 0.

Errickson allowed only three hits while two Pirate hurlers were nicked for nine safe blows and allowed single scores to cross the late in the third and seventh frames. Both clubs played errorless ball.

Gene Moore, Bee outfielder, set the batting pace by connecting with a pair of three bagger and a single.

The Philadelphia Phillies broke their losing streak by nosing out the Chicago Cubs, 3 to 2, forcing the westerners down into fifth position.

Johnny Podgajny turned in his best game of the season, limiting the Cubs to seven hits and allowing single scores in only the sixth and seventh frames. Larry French was on the mound for the Cubs and allowed nine hits after getting off to a bad start.

The Senators scored twice in the seventh by collecting three safe hits. The Senators out-hit Chicago, 13 base blows to 10.

In the only other American League game of the day, the Boston Red Sox trimmed the Detroit Tigers, 9 to 1, enabling the Boston club to strengthen its hold on fourth place in the league standings.

The Red Sox scored three times in the opening inning when Jimmy Foxx smashed out a tremendous home-run with two men aboard. The Red Sox added two in the second when Joe Dobson connected for a home-run.

It was Louis "Buck" Newsom's seventh loss in 12 starts this year while hurling for the 1940 American League champions. Dobson yielded but four hits to the Tigers in the game, and permitted only one run to cross—in the opening inning.

Cards Back on Top

The St. Louis Cardinals broke the Brooklyn Dodgers' winning streak of nine games today to take over undisputed possession of the senior league.

Infielder Johnny Hopp saved the day for the Cards when he clouted out a three-bagger in the ninth and then came home on Jimmy Brown's sacrifice fly with the winning run.

Brooklyn started strong and led during the first half of the game but the Cards forged ahead with a three-run rally in the fifth. The Dodgers came back in the eighth with a two-run rally which knotted the score only to lose out in the final frame.

Seven hurlers saw service in the battle for the league leadership, four representing the Dodgers and three the Cards.

The Cincinnati Reds moved back into the upper division by recording a 4 to 3 win over the New York Giants, largely through the heavy hitting of Catcher Ernie Lombardi and Infielder Eddie Joost.

Joost brought in half of the Reds' runs with a homer in the fifth while Lombardi hit a circuit drive with the sacks empty in the seventh. The other run also was scored in the seventh and resulted from Elmer Riddle's single which scored Harry Craft who had been walked.

Baseball, Softball, Tennis and Lawn Bowls Set at Bay City Club Over Weekend

Weekend sports at the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club will include baseball, softball, tennis and lawn bowls.

First item on the program will be the ladies' softball game between the Y.C. and A.C. and the St. Maur's School, scheduled to start at 1:30 p.m. today.

The Y.C. and A.C. baseball team will meet the King Club nine this afternoon in a return game, commencing at 3 p.m. The Tokyo squad defeated the bay city players by 6 to 5 in a 10-inning contest last Saturday, and another close tussle is expected today.

May Get Break

On Sunday afternoon the mixed softball doubleheader which has had to be postponed a fortnight due to rain will be played, provided old Pluvius to give the followers of this sport a break for a change.

The Pirates and the Solons are scheduled to meet in the opener at 2 p.m., while the Ancient Mariners will play the Cardinals in the nightcap which will get under way about 3:30 p.m.

With the second and third round matches' closing date in the club's spring tennis tournament set for June 15, a number of contests are scheduled to be played off over the weekend.

Lawn bowls addicts are expected to get in as much practice as possible today and Sunday as the entry lists for the six events in the club's annual tournament will be closed on Monday, and matches will begin to be played next weekend.

With four of the six lawn bowls tournament events being handicap contests, a number of both men and women members have taken up Drake's favorite pastime this season. The lawn bowls committee is hoping that members of the fair sex especially will take up the game as there are a number of men looking for partners for the mixed doubles handicap tourney. The committee has announced that partners will be obtained for any ladies wishing to take part in this event, should they not have made arrangements on their own.

AUSTRALIAN RED CROSS READY FOR EMERGENCY

Unit in Malaya Has Medicine And Other Supplies to Meet All Demands of Forces

Reuters

SINGAPORE, June 3.—The Australian Red Cross unit in Malaya has come so well prepared for any eventuality that the organization has enough medical and other supplies to meet all the demands of its fighting forces for several months without depending on stores from the local authorities.

"We hope that our supplies which are considered adequate for any emergency will enable us to carry on efficiently for several months," said Basil Burdett, Deputy Assistant Commissioner of the unit here.

Mr. Burdett, who was formerly a feature writer of the Melbourne Herald, now with the rank of captain in the A.I.F. in Malaya, stated that the question of making up consignments of foodstuffs and clothing for the troops in Malaya had presented the Australian authorities with "quite a problem" because of the living and climatical conditions of this country.

For instance the home authoritics had to deal with all kinds of requests for wearing apparel, particularly for light cotton pajamas with short pants, Mr. Burdett explained.

Moreover, the Australians being great letter-writers, had already been supplied with more than 30,000 sheets of writing paper with a corresponding number of envelopes, he added.

CULTURE SOCIETY PLANS TO RECOMMEND READING

Recent Good Books Will Be Listed—Inspectors to Pass On New Manuscripts

The Japan Publication Culture Society will soon start activity through the recommendation of good books and the inspection of intended publications in the manuscript stage, it was formally decided Thursday at the meeting of the Society's directors.

The recommendation of good books, it is expected, will not be limited to new publications, the number of which will be comparatively less with the enforcement of new control over publications July 1, but will also cover books published from July, 1939, up to last April.

The Society will see on the other hand that half the advertising cost of the recommended books will be borne by the Society so that the reading public will be provided with good reading matter at a comparatively cheap price. Regarding the intended inspection of publications by the same Society before they go to press, authorities on varied branches of culture will be appointed as inspectors. The inspection committee's list, as reported by the Miyako, will include Dr. Kumaji Yoshida, Dr. Mokichi Saito, Kokushi Kishida and Yoshio Nishina.

MEIJI TAKES KEIO IN LAST FRAME 6-5

Last Minute Double Puts Meiji Out in Front—Hosei Blanks St. Paul's 3-0

A screaming double by Kato with the bags loaded in the ninth which chased across three runs enabled Meiji to down Keio 6-5, in a thrilling ball game Sunday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine stadium. In the other Big Six league tilt, Hosei behind the four-hit pitching of southpaw Yuki, blanked St. Paul's 3-0.

Kato's winning blow in the Meiji-Keio tilt came after two outs. Yasui started the rally by doubling to left-field. Kawanishi followed with a hit to center, and when Takatsuka walked Miyamoto, the bags were loaded. Kato then on the third pitch slapped the ball to deep left field to send across his teammates for the winning run.

Meiji first broke into the scoring column in the third with two walks aided by two errors which scored a pair of runs, Keio got one of the runs back in the fourth with three successive singles after two outs. Again in the fifth Keio tallied a run to even the count.

Yasui's triple and Kawanishi's perfect bunt on a squeeze play shot Meiji ahead 3-2 in the seventh. Keio apparently tucked the game away in the eighth when they scored three runs on four hits. After one away Ohdate and Uno singled successively. Inouye was retired but when Betto singled to left and the left fielder momentarily fumbled the ball Ohdate scored. Takatsuka then chased in two more runs when he got a hit to left.

In the Hosei-St. Paul's game Yuki won his own game in the second inning when he doubled to right field to send across Morishita who had walked. The lead was increased in the eighth when doubles by Torimaru and Morishita, sandwicked by a walk, scored two more runs.

Yoshimura was reached for six hits by the Hosei batters, while Yuki limited St. Paul's to but four. Both teams played errorless ball.

Record Reviews

Jacques Thibaud, violinist, and Alfred Cortot, pianist, are heard on three Victor large red label records playing Faure's Sonata in A Major, opus 13, for violin and piano. The work is in four movements as follows: Allegro molto, Andante, Allegro vivace, and Allegro quasi presto.

Faure was a French contemporary of the German Brahms and he has been considered the French equivalent of Brahms but with perhaps less fire and more of delicate beauty, and certainly with genuine classic French spirit. These three records re-issued here ought to be welcome to those admiring this most popular chamber work because I understand that in Europe the Thibaud and Cortot recording has been withdrawn from stock.

The first movement has a clarity and ease in the structural design that makes the music sound too easy. Yet it is self-sure, and full of spiritual brightness. The writing for the two instruments is close but the fusion is almost perfect. There is intimacy of spirit between the players and the music. This is to be expected for surely none can better interpret this French classic than these two most prominent French artists.

In the first part of the lovely Andante the violin is greatly to the fore but the piano gives beautiful support. The piano has its say with the introduction of the second subject which introduces a meditative mood which is in goodly contrast to the soaring mood of the first section. The meditative section is based on the theme of the first part, and in the recapitulation the second idea returns.

The third movement is in the form of a delightful scherzo. There are some good key-changes and the introduction of the minor in the middle part. The subject matter and playing is nicely balanced between the two instruments and each in turn shines.

The last movement moves right out and on with slick motion and the introduction of a rather grave mood, but again the bigness of spirit and feeling returns with the second subject given in octaves. It is most companionable music, easy on the ears, easy to digest, and really takes hold of one's feelings. One could be hypercritical and perhaps find a complaint here and there, but the work is so charming and the performance gives quite a lot of pleasure. The recording is first-rate.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, directed by Serge Koussevitzky and with Jesus Maria Sanroma, Mexican pianist as soloist, is heard on two Victor large red label discs playing Stravinsky's Capriccio. This work is not listed in the compositions of this controversial Russian up to 1925, therefore it must be one of his advanced and comparatively recent compositions.

The Capriccio is an amazing riot of instrumental coloring and one of the most capricious of Capriccios with its use of many contrasting rhythms, tempi, and musical ideas. The opening is a sudden tutti blast followed immediately with a dreamy flute motif accompanied by fanciful wanderings on the piano, and strings adding a background of varying tonal color. The entry of the piccolo gives a clownish effect. The second side brings in blasts of the brasses and the introduction of the dramatic element with the piano adding that rhythm of a weird march step, or is it the dismal tolling of a bell or the cathedral clock?

The third part suggests the icy-coloring of some of Grieg's music of the north, changing into a gay dance with the piano suggesting the puff-puff of a locomotive. The bassoons enter with a clownish motif along with the brasses taking the puff-puff rhythm from the solo piano. The piano follows alone in a bit of operatic declamation and the accompaniment suggests a villain hovering near. Then the music passes to Stravinsky's good ballet style in which there are many ideas suggestive of parts of his Fire Bird Suite which carries on through to the end. In the absence of any program with these records, one's imagination is free to wander and the music certainly does stimulate imagination.

The Boston performance is remarkable for the distinctness with which every detail is worked out in the orchestral choirs, and each solo instrument gives its share with lovely tone and the utmost clarity. The pianist is most unusual in his playing and without hearing the work it is difficult to imagine the extraordinary effects he achieves. The recording is splendid.

If you have never heard Igor Gorin, Russian baritone who has created a sensation in America and at the Metropolitan, then hear him in two typical Russian songs on a Victor small red label record. The first is Moussorgsky's Gopak, and the second number Grechaninoff's Over the Steppe. The first is a wild, boisterous barbaric song with a touch of sarcasm and humor, and the second is in a very mournful mood but just as fresh and vigorous as when written about half a century ago. Gorin's baritone voice is nothing less than magnificent and has a musical quality that is superb. His range and volume is huge. However, to understand his artistry give special heed to his control of the voice, phrasing, feeling and his exquisite pianissimo tones. It is a fine disc. The orchestral accompaniment is also good.

Yehudi Menuhin, violinist, with Ferguseon Webster at the piano, has recorded Brahms-Joachim' Hungarian Dance No. 22 in D minor and Locatelli's Labyrinthe on a Victor small red label disc. The Hungarian Dance is well-known and Menuhin gives a strong, virile and rhythmically impulsive rendition with excellent tone. The Locatelli number is like a Perpetuum Mobile with its constant, rapid flow and from the labyrinthe the soloist succeeds excellently in picking out a staccato melody. As a technical display it is grand but musically it has little appeal. The pianist is excellent and the recording good.

The Victor Salon Orchestra, under the direction of Rosario Bourdon, plays an arrangement of Kreisler's Tambourin Chinois and Caprice Viennois on a Victor small black label disc. As teatime music or salon music the numbers will pass. However, to one who has heard Kreisler in his heyday play these two charming solos, the present orchestral arrangement is not satisfactory. The first number sounds like a theatre-organ bit a la Ketelby's Persian Market. The Viennois number lacks any likeness to a caprice as played, and the lovely song lines for the violin are taken too quickly and without any use of rubato.

Marek Weber and His Orchestra are heard in two bits of salon music on a Victor small black label record. The first is Ave Maria by Robert Stolz, and the second Song of Paradise by Keykens. Both are melodious, good harmonies and straight-forward tempo and given with variety of instrumental coloring. The Ave Maria is not to be confused with any other Ave Maria you know. The performance is good with clear recording.

Pimienta, tango, and El Trianero, paso-doble, are two very pretty bits on a Victor dance discs as played by Osvaldo Fresedo and His Orquesta Tipica, and with addition of a song refrain in the second number sung by Roberto Ray. The first makes an excellent dance with good rhythm and tempo, and the melody is good with attractive harmonization. The second, just as good in its own style, can be used as a one-step or a slow foxtrot.

Venetian Love Song, and The Gondoliers are two numbers by Ethelbert Nevin's Opus 25 suite, A Day in Venice. Both are given on one Victor small black label record by the Victor Salon Orchestra, directed by Rosario Bourdon. The Love Song is mournful and melancholy as if the singer had been repeatedly rejected. One finds it difficult to associate this Venice with that of Strauss' Venice. The second number in the first half is gay and a pretty bit of ballet dance music but the second half is a lapse into the nostalgic. It seems impossible that this kind of music by Nevin used to be so popular in America and heard on nearly every student-recital program. The performance is passably good but would be more attractive if Bourdon were not so strict in keeping to the tempo. By such severity he destroys feeling entirely.

AMERICAN-MADE TANKS REPORTED IN CYRENAICA

British Forces Attempt to Break Axis Lines With Mechanized Equipment

Domei

ROME, June 6.—First appearance of American-made heavy tanks was reported today by an Italian war correspondent from an undisclosed place in Cyrenaica, North Africa.

The British forces attempted to break through Axis lines in Cyrenaica with middle and light tanks followed by motorized infantry units, only to be repulsed by Italian anti-tank guns, it was said

Realizing that their efforts have failed, the British command was said to have attempted to penetrate Axis lines by hurling American heavy tanks against Italian anti-tank guns.

One of the tanks, however, reportedly touched a mine and exploded. Another tank was said to have been sent immediately to rescue the crippled tank. Forced to expose its side in its daring conduct against Italian fires, the second tank reportedly was immobilized. Other light and middle tanks which accompanied the American made tanks were forced to withdraw. A total of six tanks were lost by the British in the course of the battle, it was said.

KING BASEBALLERS BEAT Y.C.A.C., 10-7

Yokohama Club's Ladies Tie St. Maur's School Belles 7-7 In Softball Tilt

The King Club of Tokyo baseball team defeated the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club's nine by 10 to 7 in a return game on the latter's diamond Saturday afternoon. The squad from the capital won the initial contest with the Y.C. and A.C. a week ago on the same field by 6 to 5 after an extra inning.

Prior to the baseball game, the St. Maur's School softball team held the Y.C. and A.C. ladies to a 7-all draw in an eight-inning tussle.

As in the first game with the King Club, the Y.C. and A.C. baseball players outhit their opponents, but costly errors again spelled defeat. The home team obtained eight safeties, one more than the visitors, but were guilty of seven miscues whereas the opposition made five.

The Tokyo squad took the lead in the first half of the second frame with one run. Sakairi singled to left, and two walks filled the bases. The next batter struck out, but Sakairi scored when Kobayashi grounded to short and a forceout was made at third.

The Y.C. and A.C. tied the count in their half of the same canto. With one away Kipp singled to centerfield and then stole second. He took third on a pass ball and scored as Frank grounded out to second.

After shutting out the Tokyo players in the third, the Yokohama squad made three points in their half of this stanza to gain a 4 to 1 advantage. Haum singled to left and crossed the plate on Harriss's three-bagger. The latter also scored when Devin's long liner to center was dropped. Devin stole second and completed the circuit on da Silva's drive to center.

The Y.C. and A.C. lead was shortlived as their opponents made five runs in the next inning to be out in front again by 6 to 4. Three walks, one hit and three errors were responsible for the merry-go-round.

There was no further scoring until the seventh, when the King Club gained another two points to increase their lead by 8 to 4, two safeties and a miscue giving them the runs.

A point in the eight and another in the ninth resulted in the visitors being ahead by 10 to 4 when the home squad came up to bat for the last time. The Y.C. and A.C. players then staged a rally which netted half the six runs necessary to knot the count and send the game into overtime.

Bielous's grounder was messed up by the infield, but he was forced at second when Haum rolled to the shortstop for a fielder's choice. The latter took second as the next batter was thrown out at first, and came home on Devin's bingle to left. Da Rosa's fly to center was misjudged and Devin, who had started for the plate as the ball was hit with two men being out, scored. Da Rosa took second on the play and scored on another miscue. The next batter flied out to end the game.

In the first game of the afternoon the St. Maur's softball team gained a two-run advantage in the first inning, but the Y.C. and A.C. ladies equaled the count in their half of the same frame.

The home team made one point in the second, third and fifth cantos while holding the opposition scoreless to gain a 5 to 2 lead. The students staged a three-run rally in the sixth stanza to tie the score, but their opponents made a point in the seventh to forge ahead again at 6 to 5.

St. Maur's rallied again the eighth with two runs and took the lead at 7 to 6, but the Y.C. and A.C. players made one point in their half of the canto to again tie the score. Play was stopped then so that the baseball game could be started.

The Y.C. and A.C. ladies were short two players, their line-up being comprised of Miss L. Salter, Miss P. Rau, Miss T. Planas, Miss H. Lord, Miss M. Prohaska, Miss E. Papendieck and Miss M. da Costa.

Playing for St. Maur's were Miss da Souza, Miss Planas, Miss da Silva, Miss Andreis, Miss L. Apcar, Miss Ravetta, Miss Bell, Miss D. Apcar and Miss Sequeira.

The score by innings was as follows:

MARINERS, PIRATES WIN Y.C.A.C. GAMES

Pirates Mutilate Solons 12-3 While Mariners Trim Lowly Cardinals 9-5

Standings

	P	W	L	RF	RA	Ave.
A. Mariners	5	4	1	53	38	.800
Pirates	5	3	2	57	38	.600
Solons	5	2	3	50	67	.400
Cardinals	5	1	4	62	79	.200

The league-leading Ancient Mariners retained their grasp on first place in the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club mixed softball standings by downing the Cardinals by 9 to 5 in the nightcap of Sunday's doubleheader at the club grounds, while the Pirates gained sole possession of second place by crushing the Solons in the opener, 12 to 3.

In the Pirates-Solons fracas the Solons gave the Pirates a hard fight until the fifth, when the buccaneers scored four runs to gain an 8 to 3 advantage. They scored three more in the sixth to practically clinch the game.

The Cardinals-Ancient Mariners contest was much closer, the seafarers having to do their best all the way to gain the decision over their determined opponents.

The Pirates started off on the right foot by scoring a run in the first inning and another in the second. However, the Solons made two runs in their half of the second to tie the score.

After a scoreless third canto the Pirates stepped ahead again in the fourth with a brace of runs, but the Solons reduced the margin to one in their half of the same frame.

Then came the fatal fifth, when the Solons went to pieces. Two walks and four errors brought in four runs. This setback apparently stunned the Solons, and they never quite got over the blow for they were shut out for the rest of the game.

The Pirates lived up to their name by showing no mercy to a demoralized foe, and in the sixth stanza they garnered another three points. Another run in the eighth boosted their total to 12.

Charlie Meyers made his local softball debut by pitching a good game for the Pirates. One of the highlights of the game was his having two strikes called on him while out of the batter's box. Meyers was just about to step into the box when Pitcher Ray Devin of the Solons sent over a strike. The batter stayed out of the box and protested Umpire George Edmondson's decision, contending he was out of the box.

As the discussion kept on Ray Devin sent over another fast one, which the arbiter promptly called "strike two" and added that the batter had had plenty of time to step into the box and couldn't hold up the game with high jinks. With Devin getting ready to send over another pitch Meyers decided it was no time to argue and stepped into the box.

In the nightcap the Cardinals came to bat first and pushed over a run in their initial stand to take the lead. The Ancient Mariners came through with a four-run barrage in their half of the same frame to establish what seemed a comfortable margin.

However, after a scoreless second stanza the Cardinals made three points in the third to knot the count, but the Ancient Mariners got one in their half of the canto to gain the lead again at 4 to 3. The seafarers made two more in the fourth and another two in the sixth while holding the opposition scoreless and gained a 9 to 4 advantage.

The Cardinals made a run in the eighth, and this proved to be the last of the contest.

Standing out again for the Ancient Mariners was Teresita Planas with an errorless performance in the field, which included a spectacular catch. Third-baseman Joe da Costa also played a fine defensive game for the seafarers and took the batting honors of the game with two hits.

STEEL PRODUCTION IS CUT

Automobile and Civilian Industries In U.S. Will Be Curtailed

Domei

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The Office of Production Management announced yesterday it had ordered curtailment in production of sheet and strip steel for automobile and other civilian industries in order to release the capacity of all rolling mills for production of steel for building ships and railway cars.

William S. Knudsen, co-director of the O.P.M., recently asked the automobile industry to reduce production of 1942-model cars by 20 per cent and also asked the steel industry to increase its capacity by 10,000,000 tons.

Big League Baseball Faces Night Shutdown Due to Power Crisis

United Press

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Organized baseball today was facing a situation which, potentially, was more serious than conscription—the possibility that growing demands for power by national defense industries may dim or even black out night baseball which is a many million dollar industry with a gate appeal to match. It was learned that the Federal Power Commission, which may ration electricity in an emergency, will include night baseball in its nationwide inventory of the power situation within the next 10 days.

NEW YORK, June 5.—The Cleveland Indians and Chicago White Sox, holding down first and second place in the American League pennant race, fell before the big bats of the Boston Red Sox and the Philadelphia Athletics respectively today in the feature games of the major leagues.

Joe Cronin's Red Sox smashed the Tribesmen under a 14 to 1 attack that routed three Indian hurlers from the mound before the attack could be halted.

The Athletics staged a similar uprising, and smashed the White Sox, 9 to 3.

The Red Sox collected 10 singles, three doubles, one triple and two homers during the game to clearly display their superiority. They collected 16 hits during the game while Bob Harris was limiting the Indians to six safeties. The Indians also made two errors during the game.

Boston scored once in the opening inning, three times in the third, fifth and sixth innings and added four runs in the eighth for their biggest splurge. The Indians scored their lone tally in the eighth inning.

Philadelphia sent six runs racing across the platter in the second inning to take a tremendous lead and then added three more in the eighth inning for good measure.

Bob Johnson, Sam Chapman, Frankie Hayes and Walker each collected doubles, Berry Davis, Johnny Knott and Albert Brancanto drew free passes to first and Wally Moses hit a tremendous triple in that big second inning.

Knott pitched a seven-hit game, limiting Chicago to three runs, while his mates made three errors.

The Boston win enabled the Red Sox to move into third place ahead of the New York Yankees as the Broadway Bombers dropped a 5 to 4 decision to the Detroit Tigers.

The two clubs fought it out nip and tuck until the tenth inning, when the Tigers pushed the winning run across. The Yankees scored first in the sixth inning by sending two runs across. The Tigers came back in their half of the inning and scored three runs. Detroit added another in the eight to take a 4 to 2 lead. The Yankees, however, never gave up and blasted two tallies across the platter in the ninth to tie up the score.

Tommy Henrich was the hero of the ninth-inning rally when he homered with one man aboard, giving the two tying scores.

Pat Mullin, first man up for Detroit in the tenth, poled out a beautiful double. Marvin Breuer walked two men to load the bases and Joe McCarthy sent Johnny Murphy to the mound. Murphy served a "deep-dish" pitch down the alley and Bruce Campbell smashed it for a beautiful single which gave the Tigers the win.

Detroit collected 10 hits and made two errors during the game, while the Yankees found Louis "Buck" Newsom and Harold Newhouser for eight hits.

The St. Louis Browns trimmed the Washington Senators, 4 to 2, thereby holding on to their precarious perch on seventh place, a few percentage points ahead of the Senators.

It was Dennis Galehouse's fourth win of the year, and he made sure of the game by poling out a double in the third inning and then scored on Johnny Lucadello's single. The Browns scored first in the third inning, twice in the seventh and topped it off with another tally in the ninth, at which time Johnny Allen went to the mound to replace Galehouse. Galehouse's tally in the third, however, insured that he got credit for the game.

Both clubs collected eight hits during the contest and played errorless ball.

All National League games were postponed because of rain.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Leo Durocher's "Daffy Dodgers" were perched atop the National League heap today, .015 percentage points ahead of the St. Louis Cardinals—and the Dodgers did not have to lift a finger to do it.

The Dodgers took over undisputed leadership by default when the Boston Bees trimmed the Cardinals, 4 to 2, and the Brooklyn clash with the Chicago Cubs was rained out.

The seventh-place Bees handily defeated the Cardinals by lumping two runs in the first inning, and then adding single scores in the fourth and seventh frames.

The Bees scored their winning tally in the fourth inning when Carvell Rowell and Buddy Moore singled. Philip Masi, Bee catcher, came to the plate and hit into a double-play that caught Moore at second and himself at first. Rowell, however, raced home with the third Boston run as the Cardinal infield played on Moore and Masi.

The Cardinals went on a two-run rampage in the sixth inning which threatened to tie up the game, but Johnson proceeded to cool off the St. Louis rally. The Bees then iced the game in the seventh when John Cooney reached first on a safe hit and pranced home on a single by Max West.

The Bees outhit the Cardinals, 11 safeties to nine while St. Louis made three errors to Boston's one during the game.

The game was the only National League contest of the day as all other tilts were rained out.

In the American League, the tail-end Washington Senators trounced the seventh-place St. Louis Browns and moved up to within .001 percentage points of getting out of the cellar.

The Senators took a one run lead in the second inning, but the Browns knotted the score in the third. Washington tallied twice in the fifth while the Browns added one in their half of the same frame. Each team scored single runs in the sixth, and Washington boasted a 4 to 3 lead.

The Browns, however, went wild in the seventh inning to chalk up four runs and take an easy 7 to 4 win. Johnny Bernardino was the hero of the game in the big splurge when he connected for a resounding triple with the bases loaded, to send the first three runs across the platter.

Jimmy Bloodworth, Senator slugger, poled out a home-run in the sixth inning with the sacks empty.

Each club played errorless ball, and the Senators chalked up more base-hits than the Browns, nine to eight, but were unable to get them in the pinches.

The Chicago White Sox trimmed the Philadelphia Athletics, 6 to 1, in a night game which enabled the White Sox to strengthen their hold on second place.

The White Sox tallied their first run in the second inning, added two more in the third, one in the sixth and two in the seventh. The Athletics were able to get only five hits and one run—that in the sixth—off Thornton Lee, who went the full route on the mound for Chicago. The White Sox collected 10 safeties off the offerings of Lester McCrabb.

Latest Gallup Survey Reveals 52 Per Cent Favor Navy as Convoy

Reuters

NEW YORK, June 4.—The latest Gallup survey on the question: Should the United States Navy be used to guard ships carrying war materials to Britain resulted in 52 per cent of those asked voting yes, 40 per cent no, and 8 per cent undecided. The survey was completed before the President's fireside talk last week. It was noted that just after the war began 21 months ago 84 per cent of those questioned wanted American ships to stay out of the war zone. Results in the five largest states on the current question were as follows: New York, 50 per cent yes, 44 per cent no, 6 per cent undecided; Pennsylvania, 52 per cent yes, 41 per cent no, 7 per cent undecided; Illinois, 46 per cent yes, 48 per cent no, 6 per cent undecided; Ohio, 48 per cent yes, 43 per cent no, 9 per cent undecided; California 50 per cent yes, 44 per cent no, 6 undecided.

CONSIDERABLE DEFICIT SEEN IN D.E.I. BUDGET OF 1942

No Drastic Measures for Making It Up Considered—Shortage of Ships Affects Exports

Reuters

BATAVIA, June 7.—The Netherlands East Indies budget for 1942 shows a considerable deficit. No drastic measures for making it up are being considered however, the press says. Indirect taxation may be slightly increased. The Government has not decided whether it will float a loan.

During 1940 the Netherlands East Indies imported goods valued at 445,000,000 guilders against 469,000,000 in 1939. Exports in 1940 amounted to 1,931,000,000 guilders compared to 768,000,000 in 1939.

Figures for 1940 are very favorable. A less favorable balance is expected in 1941. Shortage of ships has had a detrimental influence on exports and although everything possible is being done to counteract this it cannot be eliminated altogether.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—"Events overseas cry out to the United States every day to speed up our effort in every direction," declared Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury, when announcing today that the first month's sales of Defense Savings Bonds and stamps totaled $441,782,000.

Floyd Bennett Field Taken Over by Navy; Starting Point of Many Historic Flights

I.N.S.

NEW YORK, May 25.—Floyd Bennett Field, Brooklyn, long considered by military experts vital to national defense, will be taken over by the Navy on or about May 26, it has been announced.

Mayor La Guardia of New York disclosed that negotiations between New York City and the Navy Department concerning the transfer of the field were virtually complete.

Private aviation firms located at the airport have been given notice to vacate the hangars they now occupy. Part of the field already has been designated officially as "Naval Air Station, New York" by Secretary of the Navy Knox. This designation was applied to that portion of the field where a squadron of navy patrol bombers is berthed.

In addition to this navy air station, the Naval Reserve and the Coast Guard which augment the regular navy in time of emergency, also have bases at the field.

Located at the southeastern tip of Brooklyn, the airport was one of the few in the country capable of being transformed into a naval air base, and it will be the most powerful along the middle Atlantic coast.

Covering 387 acres, the field has eight large hangars equipped with modern machine shops and other equipment necessary for the maintenance of planes. Two of these hangars are being used by the Naval Reserve in the flying cadet program. Two others are used by the Bluefries N. Y. Corporation to dismantle and crate bombing planes destined for England. The Bluefries Corporation is working under provisions of the Lease-Lend Bill and so it is considered unlikely that the Navy Department will order the firm to vacate its hangars.

The four remaining hangars probably will be used by the Navy to house the patrol bombing planes that are now based at the field since existing navy hangars cannot accommodate the full squadron of planes.

Strategically situated, the new air base provides an ideal terminal for neutrality patrol fights, and at present both Coast Guard and Navy planes are making daily patrol flights from the airport. The Coast Guard planes, having relatively short cruising ranges in comparison to the Navy planes, patrol the coastal waters, while the Navy planes, with greater cruising range, patrol the Atlantic lanes.

The location of the air base also makes it an ideal protective point for the water approaches to vital New York harbor.

Protection for the air base itself is provided by the anti-aircraft guns stationed at Fort Tilden which lies directly across Jamaica Bay from the airport.

BRITAIN'S CONDUCT OF WAR CRITICIZED

Newspapers of Empire, Especially Australia, Score Responsible Men in London

Transocean

LISBON, June 6.—Not only the British papers at home, but the entire press of the Empire are sharply criticizing those responsible in London for the conduct of war. Papers reaching here yesterday from London, the Empire and particularly those from Australia, which latter dominion has lost a considerable number of men in the—as they put it—"useless" defense of Crete, declare that London's request to send reinforcements to the Near East could be fulfilled only after British superiority in the air in the Suez Canal zone had been established.

The Melbourne Argus remarks in this connection that in view of the lack of cooperation between the British land and air forces against Crete, a defense of Cyprus would also be useless. The loss of this isle could not be averted. Britain would now be acting wisely if she were organizing the defense of Alexandria. But this also would be of no use unless the British air force in that sector would be considerably strengthened.

The News-Daily Mirror of Sydney speaks of a "Third Gallipoli," which, however, must be the last one. There could be no excuse for a lost campaign if defeat was brought about by insufficient support of the land forces by the air force. In an editorial the paper raised the question why effective cooperation between British land, naval and air forces should not be possible. "What Great Britain was not able to achieve in six months in Crete, was done by the Germans in six minutes," says the paper.

Since an occurrence in future of similar situations as that on Crete was not improbable the paper demands in the interest of the Australian soldiers that the Dominion of Australia be given a seat in the British War Cabinet.

Since soldiers from South Africa were not involved in the defeat on Crete, the press of the Union of South Africa merely expresses its regret over this British misfortune. The Cape Times, however, criticizes that an airdrome of as great strategical importance as that of Maleme had not been blown up, and that it could now be used by the Germans for their operations.

All papers carry lengthy accounts of the activities of the German parachutists, whose feats they greatly admire. In this respect the Cairo correspondent of the London Daily Mail, Alexander Clifford, gives the lie to the British Prime Minister, Winston Churchill, in a report which says.

"So far there has been no confirmation of the report that the German parachuters had been wearing New Zealand uniforms. Not one of our soldiers who had been on Crete and whom I had asked did confirm it." The German parachuters were clad in green overalls made of linen with zip fasteners, which they opened after landing so that then they were fighting in their uniforms.

United Press

NEW YORK, June 6.—Robert "Blazin' Bob" Feller today strengthened his claim as the classiest pitcher in the major leagues by winning his 12th game of the season and his seventh consecutive victory, trimming the Philadelphia Athletics, 2 to 0.

It was Feller's fourth shut-out of the 1941 season, and the great Cleveland hurler fanned 11 men and walked none to chalk up a brilliant performance. He held the Athletics to four scratch hits.

Bill Beckman hurled a good game, limiting the Tribesmen to eight hits and two runs, but could not equal Feller's performance. The Indians tallied once in the fifth and once in the eighth to win the game hands-down.

The Chicago White Sox lost ground on the Indians when the Boston Red Sox smashed them, 6 to 3.

The Red Sox tallied three times in the first inning on double by a Ted Williams and a free pass to first for Joe Cronin. Jimmy Foxx took a cut at one of Johnny Rigency's offerings with his big bat and poled out a tremendous fourbagger to clear the bases and bring three runs home.

The Red Sox added two more in the third when Dom DiMaggio Tabor added the final Boston run in the fourth inning by also getting a round-tripper.

The White Sox tallied three times in the sixth, sending Joe Dobson to the showers. He was replaced by Ryba. Ryba and Dobson held the White Sox to seven hits, one more than their mates collected, but Chicago could not match the tremendous Boston home-run attack.

The Detroit Tigers smashed the Washington Senators, 11 to 8, in a hitting duel that saw each club collect 10 hits during the tilt.

Bruce Campbell drove in three runs, while George Tebbetts, Frank Croucher and Charlie Gehringer each drove in two runs. It was the Tigers' first win over the Senators during the entire 1941 season.

The Senators scored six runs in the second inning to amass a tremendous lead, but the Tigers came back with a seven-run rally in the third. The Senators added two more in the third and fourth inning, to take an 8 to 7 lead. Detroit, however, blasted out three runs in the sixth and added another in the seventh to takke the game.

Washington used four pitchers during the game, while Lynn "Schoolboy" Rowe, who replaced Floyd Giebell in the second inning, lasted out the remainder of the game.

HUGE AUDIENCE ATTENDS TALKS, FILMS ON D.E.I.

Entertainment on Islands Given Jointly Under Auspices of Koseikai and Water Association

As a sign of the people's interest in the southern parts of Asia, a large audience packed the hall of the Railways Association in Marunouchi at 6 p.m. Saturday to hear lectures and to see motion pictures on the Dutch East Indies.

The lectures and motion pictures were given under the joint auspices of the Koseikai and the Water Association. Following a talk on Dutch East Indies by Ippei Mori, president of the Nagoya Newspaper Company, the film "Exploring the Dutch East Indies," jointly produced by the Osaka Mainichi and Tokyo Nichi Nichi newspapers, was run.

After a brief explanation of the time-honored relations between Japan and the Dutch East Indies and other islands as links in the Far East Co-Prosperity Sphere, the contents of the film, divided into three sections, were disclosed as follows:

Under the subtitle of "New Dutch East Indies," the first section describes politics, industries and life in modern Dutch East Indies. The second section, "Old Dutch East Indies," brings out the ancient history, traditions and art of the Dutch Far Eastern colony. The third section, under the title of "Dutch East Indies, the Dreamland," shows the primitive paradise-like life of the natives despite their being under the reign of the white man.

DESIGN COMPLETED FOR OSAKA STADIUM

Spectacular Project to Be Patterned After German Athletic Plant at Cologne

The largest combination athletic field in the Orient equipped with lawn bleachers copied after the municipal stadium at Cologne, Germany, will be constructed between Nishi Nagao-cho, Higashi Nagao-cho, and Takaai-cho, Sumiyoshi-ku, Osaka, at a cost of ¥15,000,000.

Plans for the colossal project, which were entrusted to various experts since last year, were formally approved by the authorities at a conference held at the Nakanoshima public hall re-recently. The construction will require seven years.

The combination athletic field will include a ceremonial plaza, lawned track and field grounds, soccer field, swimming pool, training pool, swimming pool for children, tennis courts for matches, practice courts, out-door kendo and judo hall, gymnasium, callisthenics ground, equestrian ground, sumo arena, and special grounds for neighborhood association affairs.

A hotel for participants, and lunch and tea rooms are also included in the plan.

One of the characteristics of the new athletic field will be the lay-out of the baseball field, which will be built facing the northeast direction. All noted baseball grounds in the Kansai district, including those at Koshien, Nishinomiya and Fujiidera, face the northwest, thus causing considerable nuisance to ball players who must play facing the sun.

Another outstanding feature of the plan is the improved designing of the aquatic stadium to enable fans to watch three different pools at once.

Spectacular Horse Sweeps American Racing Classics

United Press

NEW YORK, June 7.—Warren Wright's Whirlaway today became the fifth horse in history to sweep the "Triple Crowns" of American racing, winning the $25,000 Belmont Stakes.

Previously Whirlaway had won the 1941 Kentucky Derby and Preakness, and his win today firmly established his name in turfdom's "Hall of Fame" as one of the great horses of all time. In addition to the three crowns, Whirlaway holds the record fastest time for the Kentucky Derby.

Robert Morris was second, Yankee Chance was third and Hebo placed fourth in the Belmont Stakes today.

NICHIDAI FAVORED IN BIG SWIM MEET

Defending Champs Out to Win Third Straight From Meiji And St. Paul's

The annual triangular swimming meet between the teams of Nichidai, St. Paul's and Meiji, will have it's eighth renewal Sunday at the Meiji Shrine pool. The eight-event program, drawing some of the cream of the local college natators, will get under way at 1:30 p.m.

Nichidai, four time winner of the meet, will seek their third consecutive triumph with a veteran team. But they will have to hold off the challenge of the St. Paul's whose brightest stars are free-stylers Shigeo Arai and Toshio Homma.

Last year, the meet developed into a strictly two-team affair with Nichidai flashing through with remarkable performances to capture 89 points as against, St. Paul's 50. Meiji trailed, accumulating only 11 points.

Nichidai's greatest strength lies in its free stylist Yano, who captured both the 400 and 800-meter races last year, and Taniguchi, who took the 100-meter back stroke. Again in the relays the defending champions are expected to make a strong bid by placing well balanced teams in both the 200-meter medlay and 800-meter races.

The complete list of entrants follows:

100-meter free style—Meiji: Hori, Toyoshima, Kato; St. Paul's: Honda, Arai, Ohta; Nichidai: Makino, Sagitani, Kohio.
200-meter free style—Meiji: Kato, Osugi, Goto; St. Paul's: Honda, Arai, Ohta; Nichidai: Makino, Sagitani, Hamaoka.
400-meter free style—Meiji: Takeuchi, Matsuyama, Goto; St. Paul's: Homma, Iwata, Ohta; Nchidai: Tsuda, Kurihara, Amano.
800-meter free style—Meiji: Osumi, Takeuchi, Matsuyama; St. Paul's: Homma, Sakai, Iwata; Nichidai: Tsuda, Kurihara, Amano.
100-meter back stroke—Meiji: Yamakawa, Iida, Ohno; St. Paul's: Kadoya, Sakamoto, Hiraga; Nichidai: Ukimaru, Taniguchi, Inagaki.
200-meter breast stroke—Meiji: Yamaguchi, Sudo, Shimamoto; St. Paul's: Ohno, Tsutsumi, Oura; Nichidai: Taguchi, Yoshimura, Hayashida.
300-meter medley relay—Meiji: Iida, Yamaguchi, Toyoshima; St. Paul's: Sakamoto, Oura, Arai; Nichidai: Taniguchi, Homura, Kono.
800-meter relay—Meiji: Toyoshima, Goto, Matsuyama, Ohsugi, Takeuchi, Kato, Hori and Ando. St. Paul's: Arai, Homma, Honda, Iwata, Ohta (Chu), Shirayama, Ohta (Ko), and Sakai. Nichidai: Amano, Kurihara, Tsuda, Sagitani, Makino, Hirano, Hamaoka, and Koshido.

Welshman Lead in First Half of Traditional London Tilt

Reuters

LONDON, June 8.—Wales lost 2-3 to England yesterday after leading by two goals to one at the interval before 20,000 spectators. Woodward James scored for Wales before England's forwards got going. Wales forwards went through together early in the second half but Hapgold dropped back to save the final shot with the goalkeeper out of position. Hagan equalized and soon afterwards Welsh shot the winning goal.

Reading won the London Cup, beating Brentford three goals to two after sharing two goals at the interval. Sharawood scored after three minutes for Reading but a half hour later Perry equalized.

A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, attended the game and had the teams presented to him. Later he handed the cup to the winner's captain.

The season's football honors were won as follows: War Cup, Preston North End; Scottish Cup, Rangers; Nortir Regional League, Preston; South Regional League, Crystal Palace; Football League South, Brighton; London War Cup, Reading; Southern Scottish League, Rangers; West Regional Cup, Lovells Athletics; South Wales Monmouthshire Cup, Cardiff; Hampshire Cup, Portsmouth; Allied Services Cup, British Army; Glasgow Cup, Rangers; Combined Counties Cup, Middlesborough; Lancashire Cup, Manchester United; Midland Cup, Leicester City.

BOMBERS ATTACK BREST

Small Scale German Raid Is Announced

I.N.S.

LONDON, June 11.—A strong force of bombers has attacked the docks at Brest where a Hipper class cruiser, believed to be the Prinz Eugen, has taken refuge alongside the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau. A large amount of bombs was dropped on the docks and on these three warships and other vessels at anchor there.

The Air Ministry announced that there was enemy air activity last night on a small scale, when bombs were dropped in South Wales. Some damage resulted as well as a number of casualties some of which were fatal.

CARDS BEAT GIANTS, RESUME N.L. LEAD

Dodgers Lose Vital Tilt to Cincinnati as Lead Changes Hands Fourth Time

United Press

NEW YORK, June 7.—Billy Southworth's St. Louis Cardinals blasted their way back into leadership of the blistering race for the National League pennant today by trouncing the New York Giants, 11 to 3, as the Brooklyn Dodgers were trimmed by the Cincinnati Reds, 8 to 3. The Dodgers were shoved back into second place, .006 percentage points behind the Cardinals.

Luke Hamlin of the Dodgers and "Bucky" Walters of the Reds hooked up in a tight pitching duel until the eighth inning when the Reds went on a wild six-run splurge that drove Hamlin from the mound, Newell Kimball was finally able to squelch the Dodgers, but too late to undo the damage.

One Dodger error, two walks and four hits including a home-run by Ernie Lombardi, the big Red catcher, with two men aboard gave the Cincinnati club the six runs.

The Dodgers tallied first in the opening inning, but the Reds matched it in the second and went ahead by shoving another tally across the plate in the third. The Dodgers knotted the count in the fourth and took a momentary lead by scoring again in the seventh—which lasted only until the eighth canto when the Reds chalked up six counters.

Pete Reiser homered in the first inning for the Dodgers, while Jimmy Ripple homered in the third for the Reds. Walters held the Dodgers to seven hits while his mates collected 10 this off Hamlin and Kimball. Brooklyn made three errors and Cincinnati two during the tilt.

The Cardinals took an easy 11 to 3 win from the Giants by clubbing four New York hurlers for 19 safeties during the game. Two Cardinal rookies, Herman Triplett and Frank Crespi, led the batting parade with Triplett getting four hits, and Crespi a homer in the second inning. Terry Moore and Jimmy Brown each collected four hits during the game.

Sam Nahem, young Card hurler, started the game but gave way in the second inning to Ernie White when the Giants scored once in the first and twice in the second. White held New York scoreless thereafter. The Cardinals collected four runs in the second, three in the fourth, three in the sixth and one in the ninth.

The Chicago Cubs trounced the Boston Bees, 5 to 1, although the Boston club outhit Chicago, seven safeties to five. Claude Passeau went the route for the Cubs and permitted only one run to cross home plate, in the third inning.

The Cubs tied up the score in the fifth and went on a three-run splurge in the sixth to take a big lead. Augie Galan drew a free pass to first base, Lou Novikoff, young Cub rookie, also drew a free pass and Clyde McCullough, the big Chicago catcher, drove out a home-run that cleared the paths and gave Chicago three runs. The Cugs then added another in the eighth for good measure.

The Philadelphia Phillies trimmed the Pittsburgh Pirates, 2 to 0. Lloyd Dietz, ex-Red hurler, and Johnny Lanning, yielded but seven hits to the Phillies during the game but saw themselves defeated when Darrell Blanton, young Philadelphia hurler, kept eight Pirate hits well scattered.

The Phillies scored their first tally in the second inning on an error, a single, a walk and a long sacrifice fly. Two singles and a sacrifice fly in the eighth yielded their other run.

Craig Wood Takes U.S. Golf Crown in Rain At Fort Worth, Texas

United Press

FORT WORTH, Texas June 7.—Big Craig Wood came from far behind the field today to win the National Open golf championship over one of the toughest courses in the United States, made worse by a driving rain which yesterday drenched the course and temporarily held up play. Wood shot a blistering 70 on his final round for a grand total of 284, three strokes up on Denny Shute who shot a 287 by virtue of a brilliant 71 over the final 18 holes. The lowest amateur was Hary Todd, who shot a 195. Other scores were: Johnny Bulla, 189; Paul Runyan, 291; Herman Barron, 291; Gene Sarazen, 294; "Spud" McSpaden, 294; Horton Smith, 196; Lawson Little (defending champion), 197.

REPORTER RELATES CRETE EVACUATION

Withdrawal Involved Intensive Struggle of Airpower Against Naval Strength

By Gratton P. McGroarty
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

ALEXANDRIA, June 8.—The evacuation of British troops from Crete by the British Navy was completed after the most prolonged and intensive battle of airpower versus seapower in history.

Beginning with the battle of Kitheria Channel, which I witnessed, the Luftwaffe and the British Navy constantly engaged in a life and death struggle in which thousands of planes and the entire Mediterranean Fleet were involved.

All details of the results of the titantic struggle for the small island base cannot yet be told. In fact, not all are known, but one result has proved for all time that air strength and seapower cannot be divorced from one another, but must work in closest cooperation.

The evacuation of Crete was inevitable. It was obvious that the island could not be held, not because of any fault of the R.A.F. but because the Germans held air bases from which they could operate tremendous numbers of fighters all day long, keeping constant patrols around the only two airdromes on Crete. Thus, they were able to pick off the British craft like sitting ducks the moment the British landed for refuelling or taking on ammunition.

Despite the tremendous disadvantage, the R.A.F., with the Fleet air arm, inflicted heavy damage on the Luftwaffe to say nothing of the scores of planes downed by the British Fleet's anti-aircraft batteries.

It was estimated that over 75 per cent from the approximately 20,000 Imperial troops in Crete arrived safely in Egypt and practically all carried their full equipment.

The first group of warships went to the northern coast of Crete under the cover of darkness and picked up the first troops.

Destroyers approached the shore so closely that if they had gone a few more feet they would have run aground. All forces, provided with previous instructions regarding movements, boarded the evacuation vessels without a hitch. Destroyers picked up as many men as possible and transferred them to cruisers and then returned to pick up more troops.

Before dawn the first contingent was sailing to Egypt, but the Luftwaffe was not long in determining the warships' positions and before 6 a.m. the first attack occurred.

Wave after wave of German planes, including dive-bombers and high-level bombers, came over in a constant procession throughout the day. Their attacks were spread over the whole of the 14 hours of daylight.

It was almost impossible to keep track of the number of German planes shot down because all eyes had to be focused on the next group of German craft which was about to swoop down on the warships for another attack.

TRAVELERS SAY TROOPS DESERTED TO DE GAULLE

Only 'Token Resistance' Seen In British Advance Into French Territory

United Press

ISTANBUL, June 6.—Twenty five thousand trained French soldiers accompanied Colonel Collet, brilliant French commander, when the latter fled to Palestine from Syria to join the forces of General Charles de Gaulle, wellinformed travelers who had just arrived from Syria claimed today.

(Previous Vichy reports said that only a few of the French soldiers who had sought to escape from Syria managed to cross the border.)

These travelers reported that French pilots, with their planes, were still escaping to Palestine from Syria while the French fighter defense remained passive during the Royal Air Force raids on Syria.

These sources alleged that the native troops in Syria were strongly in favor of supporting General de Gaulle, and claimed that there was little prospect the French would offer more than a "token resistance" in the event the British decided to invade Syria.

The travelers claimed that the shortage of bread in the French mandated area had accelerated demoralization of the populace throughout Syria.

Direct Air Links Sought

Domei

LONDON, June 11.—Reliable but unconfirmed reports received here today stated the United States has been speeding up arrangements for direct airlink with Britain because it fears German moves in the western Mediterranean and the Atlantic soon might sever its present connection via the Azores and Lisbon.

NEW YORK, June 8.—After a one-day reign, Billy Southworth's St. Louis Cards tumbled out of first place in the senior circuit when they dropped both ends of a double-header to the hard-hitting New York Giants today.

Leo Durocher's Brooklyn Dodgers moved back into the top spot even though they met a 3 to 2 defeat from the Cincinnati Reds.

The Dodgers led until the ninth when the Reds pushed over all of their runs. Until then, Whitlow Wyatt had held the Cincinnati Club to four hits.

Frank McCormick started the ninth inning rally with a double deep into center field. On the next play he scored when Catcher Ernie Lombardi clouted out a single. Eddie Joost followed with a two-bagger to score Mike McCormick who was running for Lombardi. Pitcher Paul Derringer then won his own game to bring in Joost with a two-bagger.

The loss was Wyatt's third of the year against nine victories and was a tough one to lose after holding the Reds scoreless for eight frames.

The Giants pushed over a five run rally in the ninth to force their first game with the Cards into an extra inning.

In the tenth Dick Bartell connected with a homer when one mate was on base.

In the second game the Giants started out with a seven-run rally in the first frame, and held a comfortable lead throughout to finish up with a dozen runs compared to the Cards' five.

Carl Hubbell went the full route for the Giants and while nicked for a dozen hits and despite poor fielding support, he fares better as the game progressed. He was close to being replaced when three runs crossed the plate in the first inning.

With a wild ninth-inning rally that netted nine scores, the Pittsburgh Pirates downed the Philadelphia Phillies, 12 to 2 in the opener, only to drop the second half of their double-header by a 5 to 2 score.

Maurice Van Robays' two bagger with the bases loaded proved the highlight of the Pirate victory in the first game.

The Phillies converted four hits into five runs to even the count in the second game. Four of the runs were pushed over in the first inning with the assistance of some loose playing by the Pirates.

The first inning rally by the Phillies chased Rush Bauers to the showers. John Rizzo scored two of the runs when he hit a double with the bases loaded.

Behind the five-hit hurling of Bob Lee, the Chicago Cubs downed the Boston Bees 5 to 1 in the first half of another bargain day bill, but suffered a 13 to 1 walloping in the second game.

Lee was nicked for two of the hits in the third when Boston collected their lone run. He held his foes hitless until the ninth when the Bees seriously threatened to rally. The bases were full as a result of three hits when Lee finally retired the side.

The veteran Larry French was chased from the mound in the second frame by the Bees in the night-cap after yielding six runs. He was succeeded by two other hurlers, Dick Errickson and Hal Queen.

In the hectic second inning, the Bees collected their half dozen runs from five hits, a walk, a balk, Errickson's wild pitch and Lou Stringer's error.

Yanks Win Pair

United Press

NEW YORK, June 8.—Trouncing the St. Louis Brown in both games of a double-header, the New York Yanks today moved into a tie for third place in the American League.

The Yanks pushed over an easy 9 to 3 win in the opener and then took the night-cap, which was halted in the seventh frame on account of darkness, by a 7 to 1 score.

Joe DiMaggio came through with three homers, two in the first game and one in the second, to bring his season's total up to eleven.

Tommy Henrich and Red Rolfe also game through with circuit drives in the opener, and Joe Gordon and Charles Keller produced four-baggers in the second game.

Charlie Ruffing went the distance for the Yanks in the opener and limited the Browns to seven hits, while two hurlers were required in the second game to keep the St. Louis club under control.

The league-leading Cleveland Indians made it three straight over the Philadelphia Athletics by taking the first game of a double-header, 7 to 3. Roger Peckingpaugh's tribe still had the Indian sign on Connie Mack's club in the second game, which they took by an 8 to 6 score to push the A's deeper into the cellar.

Johnny Babich gave the Indians three runs in the second frame when he walked three consecutive batters. Rollie Hemsley batted in two of the runs with a single and then Ray Mack scored the other on a double steal. The other Indian runs crossed the plate in the seventh, eighth and ninth frames.

Both clubs were hitting hard and ten hurlers saw service during the twin bill.

Boston's scrappy Red Sox forged their way back into second place, replacing the White Sox, after defeating Chicago in both games of a double-header at Chicago.

Behind Robert "Lefty" Grove, the Red Sox came through with a 5 to 3 win in the opener and then Herbert Newsome blanked the White Sox, 3 to 0, in the night cap.

The opener went ten innings and was broken up by Dominic DiMaggio's single which scored two runs. Joe Cronin was the hero of the second half of the bargain bill, clouting out a double which scored the first of the Red Sox runs. Two other runs crossed the plate before the seventh inning ended.

Both of the Chicago hurlers turned in fine games, but errors and timely hits led to their downfall. In the opener, Ted Lyons allowed only six hits as compared to Grove's nine, and in the second game Thornton Lee held the Red Sox to three hits.

tention of the American public.

Asked how President Roosevelt's "fireside chat" was received in America, Mr. Bellaire said it put before the people a definite, firm and solid national policy which removed a feeling of uncertainty from the minds of the people. The people, he stated, knew now where they were going, and they are definitely uniting and cooperating in the task.

Giving an example, the newspaperman mentioned how local defense boards, which are actively coping with the national policy, were being organized in the towns and villages. And he particularly mentioned the "wave of patriotism" which is sweeping over the entire American continent. More American flags are seen everywhere, he said, and red-white-and-blue colored dresses were the vogue among young women. Pins, badges, etc. with the American flag on them were popular everywhere, he observed.

Questioned in regard to the numerous strikes in America, Mr. Bellaire said that too much prominence was being given in the papers to them. The workers and factories which are demanding raises, he said, are only a small proportion of the number of laborers and plants which were working 24 hours a day on shifts and are putting out a tremendous production.

In regard to the stepping in of the Army to subdue the strikes, Mr. Bellaire stated that this step is not to destroy private industry nor merely break up the strikes, but it is to give time for the Government mediation agencies to figure out an agreement between the workers and the employers while construction work can continue on schedule.

In concluding, the correspondent stated that the attitude toward life of the American people is changing, due to conscription and drafting, and the whole nation is uniting under a flame of patriotism.

Japan Yesterday And Today

yoshi for a time and waited till the lust of vengeance had cooled down so that he might have been able to convert possible rivals into friends, even to make some arrangements with men like Hideyoshi, Iyeyasu and Shibata to divide the spoils of power in equitable shares; then he might have enjoyed a longer reign of prosperous career, always with a possibility in the offing to rising to the top. He might at least have been spared the untimely and ignominious fate of being pierced to death with the sharpened bamboo of an unknown peasant sniper, and he might not have left for all time the infamy of being Japan's arch-traitor. For we read that

"Treason doth never prosper: what's the reason?

"For if it prosper, none dare call it treason."

But no, the ill-starred Mitsuhide, in the tinsel glory of his successive coups, could not wait; he took for once an un-Mitsuhide-like step, and fell.

BIG SIX BASEBALL WINDUP ON TODAY

Weekend Contests to Feature Hosei-Keio, Waseda-Meiji And Keio-Waseda

The spring season of the Tokyo Intercollegiate Baseball League will ring down it's curtain this weekend with three highly important contests at the Meiji Shrine Stadium. Today, the fast-stepping Hosei nine will tangle with Keio, and in the second tilt of the afternoon, Waseda, the league-leaders will face Meiji. The Hosei-Keio game is on tap from 1 p.m.

Sunday, the second game of the classic Waseda-Keio series will be contested from 1:30 p.m. Although Keio is out of the race for the pennant, this game being the oldest collegiate rivalry in the country is expected to be played before another capacity throng of 70,000.

While all three games can be termed "crucial," the Meiji-Waseda fracas promises the fans the most in thrills. If any team has a chance of slapping back the league-leaders, it is Meiji with a hard-hitting outfield and pitcher Fujimoto, who has improved with every game.

Waseda as usual will rely on the strong right arm of Ishiguro to turn back the Meiji sluggers. Working in every one of Waseda's games, Ishiguro has pitched a steady brand of ball and should trouble the defending champions.

The Hosei-Keio game is expected to be a pitching duel between the left-handers Yuki of Hosei and Takatsuka of Keio. Standing but a game behind the Waseda nine, the Hosei team will be out to win their eighth triumph and the possibility of finishing the season with the leaders.

DANES ISSUE WARNING AGAINST DEMONSTRATIONS

Reminded of King's Request For Friendlier Stand Toward Germans

Domei

COPENHAGEN, June 11.—The Danish Ministry of Justice yesterday issued a proclamation warning that demonstrations by the Danish people against the German Army of Occupation will be punished by fines or prison sentences ranging up to two years.

The Ministry of Justice appealed particularly to the younger people not to forget King Haakon's proclamation asking for a friendlier attitude toward foreign troops.

"Due to the increased demonstrations against the German occupation troops by insulting shouts or waving of banners and the flag of the other belligerent power, it is, therefore, necessary to adopt stronger measures against incidents which might ruin Danish-German relations," the proclamation added.

Agricultural Economy of Europe Bolstered by German-Hungarian Agrarian Agreement

Transocean

BERLIN, June 8.—Continually favorable development of continental European economics in the week from June 2 to 8, is reflected by the extension of the German-Hungarian agrarian agreement which is putting Hungarian agriculture more in with German requirements.

Last year Hungarian oilseed cultivation had already been increased by 50 per cent over that of 1939. This year it was again increased by even more than 50 per cent over that of 1940.

Hungary's bread grain cultivation has consequently been reduced by 16 per cent which in view of the excellent European crop situation is regarded as unobjectionable.

Hungarian farmers welcome Germany's readiness to increase by more than 100 per cent last year's imports from Hungary of fruits and vegetables.

Favorable harvest prospects in bread grain in Rumania and Bulgaria, including the latter's newly-acquired land, are also welcomed as very satisfactory as well as fodder grain harvest reports in southeast Europe and Germany herself.

With 13,750,000 acres under cultivation, Rumania has established a new record in this respect.

Much attention was paid during the week under review to the annual report of the German Railways, showing a considerable increase of traffic in 1940 over that of the previous year.

Receipts from passenger and luggage traffic, for instance, increased by 43.8 per cent to 2,430,000,000 marks. Freight traffic increased by 25.2 per cent to 4,720,000,000 marks.

The German Stock Exchange was somewhat surprised by a decree postponing the payment of loan reserves from surplus dividends until after the termination of the war which first caused weakening of stocks. This setback, however, was only of short duration, and the following day already showed all-round recovery.

The favorable condition in the money market in Germany, indicated by a reduction of the private discount rate by ⅛ per cent, helped much to overcome disappointment.

PEIRON BOAT RACE TO BE HELD TODAY

Ancient Nagasaki Water Festival Will Have Traditional Rites of Old Japan

Peiron, the most unique and exciting boat race, which is originated in southern China, is scheduled to be held in Nagasaki today as one of the annual national features in Japan. The event is reminiscent of the days when Japan used to carry on foreign trade with Dutch and China under the Tokugawa shogunate (1603-1868) with Nagasaki as the only open port.

The race is so unique and desperately contested that it has become a national feature, attracting fans from distant cities. In former days, it was often occasioned by violent clashes between the crews participating in the race. In those days, the boat used for the event was as long as 100 feet in length, which was manned by a crew of 60 or 70 young men. The old custom of keeping up the morale of the crew during the race by beating gongs and drums in the boats is still preserved.

The boat used for the race is a remarkable craft, suggestive of ancient whaling boat. It is believed that it is a essentially of south China origin. The regulation size of race boat employed now-a-days is 35 feet in length and four feet and three inches in width at its middle section. The stern is required to be above water by three feet and five inches to four feet.

The bowsprit of the vessel is painted black while the bulwark vermillion and white. When it is speeding on the water, it is somewhat in the likeness of a centipede in action. More than a dozen boats participate in the race in turn.

The vessel is manned by 36 men and propelled by paddles, which are about three feet long with the blade of about seven inches to one foot wide. Of the 36 members of the crew, 31 are paddlers, one bailer, one coxswain, one captain and two musicians. The 31 paddlers and the bailer take their seats on both sides in the boat in even number. One of the musicians who is in charge of the gongs, takes his place in the middle section while the other in the stern with the coxswain and captain. The role of the musicians is to beat the gongs and drums to have the paddlers keep time with the music in paddling and also to stimulate and invigorate the morale of the crew in the heat of the race.

The event takes place over the race course of about six kilometers on the river, which traverses Ashi-machi in parallel with the western side of the Nagasaki bay. The contest covers one way this course, but sometimes takes two laps of it. The members of the senior crews are in the prime of manhood, being from 25 to 40 years of age, while those of the junior crews from 17 to about 22 or 23. The crews of each group will have races among themselves.

Begins at 8 a.m.

The race will begin at about 8 a.m. and continues until late in the afternoon. The most spectacular events in the program for the day are those between the senior crews. They put up fierce contests over the course of six kilometers in the midst of blasting noises of gongs and drum. Each race is participated in by two or three boats, flying pennants of different colors at their bowsprits for identification.

When all is ready, each vessel line up itself at the starting point with the other contestants, waiting for the signal. Simultaneously with the gun firing, the captain of the crew gives a signal for the go and begins to shout "Peiron peiron ye, peiron peiron ye" keeping time with the noises made by gongs and drum beaters, which are responded by the paddlers who ply their paddles with hissings of "shi, shi, shi," more than once suspended in the past on that account. In those days, fans used to send some food and drink to their favorite crews by special vessels while the contest was being staged to refresh their members and encourage them in the hope to enable them to fight out the issue to victory.

Then the vessels begin to glide on the water with a remarkable speed in the midst of roaring cheers arising from hundreds of thousands of spectators on both banks of the river. The course is long and it requires each member of the crews to mobilize all his strength and skill to outstrip the other crews in the race. When they come in sight of the goal line, the shouting of the captain is quickened and the paddlers make supreme efforts with their paddles to keep time with it.

In former days, a crew often steered into the race course of the opponent it outdistanced to show off its superior ability and at the same time to discourage the members of the outstripped crew. This tactic was prohibited by the police because it sometimes caused a serious dispute and violent clashes between the members of the crews involved in the midst of the contest. In fact, the peiron boat race was more than once suspended in the past on that account. In those days, fans used to send some food and drink to their favorite crews by special vessels while the contest was being staged to refresh their members and encourage them in the hope to enable them to fight out the issue to victory.

Cries of Joy Sound

It was often the case that the members of winning crew, who were overwhelmed with joy raised war cries in the presence of those of the vanquished crew, and taking out their vessel from the water, they danced about with the craft in celebration of their victory.

The race boat is constructed with as light materials as possible and in just such a manner in an effort to reduce the resistance of water to the minimum degree. The members of crew even burn the surfaces of the bottom of their crafts to obtain such an effect.

Their racial love of purity asserts itself when they go about the task of preparing their crafts for the annual race. They keep their vessels absolutely pure and clean, guarding them with almost a religious zeal from any danger of defilement. They even would not have women approach their crafts on account of an idea that woman was once thought to be impure.

The paddlers wear thin white shirts and the their heads with Japanese towels in the fashion known as hachimaki, but in former days they were stripped, except their loins. The musicians were beautifully dressed in colorful thin silk kimono.

Under the Tokugawa shogunate regime (1603-1868), Japan was practically a closed nation, permitting foreign trade only with the Dutch and Chinese peoples with Nagasaki as the open port. Under these conditions, Nagasaki was the only port of access for them to come in contact with Japanese traders. The Dutch and Chinese cultures penetrated into the country from this port until Nagasaki became famous as a part of the country affected by an exotic cultural atmosphere.

It was in those days of the Tokugawa regime that the Peiron boat race became an annual feature of Nagasaki. It is believed to have been introduced to Nagasaki by the Chinese. There are various versions as to the origin of this sport, and one of them is traced to the sudden and unfortunate death of Chuyuan, a nobleman at the Chinese imperial court, who fell victim of a slander and exiled to Shonan by the Emperor. Out of his grief for this misfortune, he finally plunged himself into a river to end his life. The people in his neighborhood rushed upon the scene, paddling several boats with hands and pieces of board as they had no time to go and get regular cars, in their attempt to rescue him, but in vain. From this time on, they held the annual boat race on the water by using paddles to comfort the spirit of the unfortunate nobleman.

FRANCE INDIGNANT AGAINST TRAITORS

Telegram of Colonial Secretary Damns Action of Wavell And de Gaulle

D.N.B.

VICHY, June 13.—More than once English and de Gaulle adherents had tried to induce the French population in Somaliland to forsake France, according to a report of the French news agency. Only recently, with empty promises, did General Wavell make another attempt to win over French Somaliland for the cause of de Gaulle. The answer of the Governor of Djibouti, however, was well deserved. The message he sent to the French State Secretary for the Colonies, Admiral Platon, was answered by the following telegram of the Admiral:

"Have received your report on the letter General Wavell wrote to you from Cairo with abominable offers he made to you as well as your words on the indignation aroused about the Syrian invasion in French Somaliland such as was also the case in the French Metropolis as well as in all the other colonies. The French Government knows the discipline, sense of honor, and loyalty of all Frenchmen under your command and sends you its felicitations.

"I confirm to you that there are no German troops in Syria. General Wavell knows this too. The de Gaulle traitors are once again not fighting against Germans, but are attacking their French brethren although de Gaulle swore never to take up arms. It is in the hands of General Wavell—at least temporarily—to starve our colony which is being besieged for one month and even let small children die from hunger, as the British blockade does not allow the most vital articles to pass the blockade. But he cannot prevent Frenchmen from pillorizing the British blackmail, which they can only despise, and from accepting a challenge of traitors and former allies wherever it may be.

"Thus, as General Wavell said, negotiations have in fact become useless. The home country is watching with loving care the threats against our colony. It knows that all Frenchmen with a feeling of duty are rallying around our Chief of State, Marshal Petain, and around the French flag in unyielding determination to defend the honor of France."

French Against Blockade

Transocean

VICHY, June 8.—A French official broadcast yesterday once more vigorously protested against Britain's attempt at winning the war by starving out the European Continent.

No one denied, the broadcast declared, that Britain had the right to use her fleet for preventing importation of war materials and importation of certain raw materials by belligerents.

Britain, however, tried to starve out all Europe. Time and again Britain has defended her policy by declaring that there was danger that food shipments for France would eventually reach Germany. Did Britain really think that the German army and the German nation could be forced on their knees by a hunger blockade?

A glance at a map, would show Britain that the entire European continent is at Germany's disposal with regard to food supplies.

No one could be foolish enough to believe that Britain had the power to stop Germany's trade with Russia and Turkey.

Germany's fuel supply was also guaranteed, since Germany is now able to get all the oil she wants from Rumania.

In view of the measures for preventing importation into France, Spain and Portugal of frozen meat from Argentina, coffee from Brazil and grain from the U.S. one must wonder, however, whether the British blockade is not merely intended to subject the countries of Britain's former allies or friends to strong political pressure, concluded the French broadcast.

HOSEI, KEIO DRAW; MEIJI NIPS WASEDA

League Leaders Dumped by Fighting Meiji Team; Hosei Misses Win by Inches

Hosei and Keio battled to a nine-inning 2-2 draw in a Big Six League baseball game Saturday afternoon at Meiji Shrine Stadium. In the second game of the day, Meiji awed the capacity throng of 75,000 by putting on a grand rally in the fifth to score all four runs to blank the league-leaders, Waseda, 4-0.

After tying the count at 2-all in the sixth, the Hosei nine failed to cash in on a grand chance in the ninth. With no outs and a teammate on second, the next three Hosei batters were victims of Yamamura's slants to go out via the strike-out route.

Both nines rank up six hits, but the Hosei attack failed miserably in the crucial ninth session. Urichida walked, stole to second and there was stranded as Yamamura came up with grand pitching to leave Ikeda, Tagawa and Torimaru waving at his fast ones.

Hosei had to battle to keep clear of defeat, Keio scored two runs in the third. Nagara opened this inning by singling sharply to right field and when Torimaru dropped the shortstop throw on a double-play ball of Nemoto's tap, all hands were safe.

Kakehi was an easy out but Ohdate chased home Nagara for the first run with a hit to left field. Uno walked to fill the bags, and Betto's tap was muffed by Yamagata, and Keio's second run registered.

Keio's starting pitcher, Righthander Shiraki, was hit too lively to go the route, and in the sixth was replaced by Takatsuka. However, two hits and a walk off Shiraki and a timely single off Takatsuka resulted in two tallies for Hosei to even the count.

Both teams resorted to numerous changes to break the stalemate. Keio used a grand total of 17 players in all capacity, including three pitchers, while Hosei retaliated with Yuki their stellar southpaw in place of Sato and 13 others in an attempt to gain the margin.

EXPORTS TO PHILIPPINES PLACED UNDER LICENSING

Supplement to Already Existing Scheme to Guard U.S. Commodities

Domei

MANILA, June 14.—President Manuel Quezon has been informed by Joaquin Elizalde, Philippine Resident Commissioner at Washington, that the United States Department of State has decided to apply and immediately put into effect the general licensing system to all shipments to the Philippines, it was learned here today.

Mr. Elizalde's report reportedly said the United States will exclude arms and munitions, tin scrap, helium, mercury and diamonds for industrial use from the licensing list.

The measure, it was understood, has been taken up in order to implement the already existing United States licensing system affecting exports to the Philippines.

Meanwhile, all United States exporters, under the new rule, it was said, will have to inform the Commerce Department of numbers under which the goods they desire to export are listed in the general licensing list, instead of applying for licenses for exports.

The History of Nippon

best that the adjacent and distant peoples have been able to produce.

Scholarly Approach

Perhaps some departments in Professor Akiyama's work are overlaid with enthusiasm and presented in a coloring of contemporary political thought. Not always does the writer furnish authority for his contentions, which is the scholarly approach. Even if the book is Japan's history of itself, by itself, supported by reference to source, admission of weakness as well as protestations of strength, could have made solidly for conviction. When the author says "Few nations, if any, possess a history with as much human character as Japan," it might have been better to clarify the vagueness. His reference to the Japanese inherent love of nature is hardly sufficient explanation. That the Japanese are close to the earth, simple and natural in their outlook and manner of life, is, however, quite true, but this position is not unique.

When writing of South America, in giving a world-wide background to the history, the author says the Spaniards destroyed Inca civilization.

In the course of world-wide historical review as the background to his work, Professor Akiyama makes some statements which would have been better if illustrated by evidence. For instance, the claim that the Portuguese in those trading activities which carried the flag throughout the world, were financed by German capital. And that Japan was not discovered by the Portuguese but "it was largely due to the direction and guidance given by the seafaring traders of Japan that enabled the Portuguese to advance from India to Malacca, to China and finally to Japan." That seems to be putting undue stress on the importance of Japanese faring. That they did establish trade with what is now Indo-China, Thailand and Malaya is a matter of repute, and they would have described their country to adventuring shipmasters. Nevertheless that does not take away the fact that Portuguese first made a Japanese landfall.

Active Commercial Nation

He speaks of Japan, at that time, (200 years before Vasca da Gama rounded the Cape of Good Hope) as the "most active commercial nation in the eastern world." This is a very large claim which would be disputed by the Chinese, Persians and Arabs. It does not add to the air of authenticity. There is sympathy and even admiration for a man who seeks to put his country's best foot forward, but not beyond historical proof. As he phrases it, the introduction of the Iyeyasu period removed "the greatest obstacle to Dutch and Portuguese expansion in the Far East. . . . No longer was there any power to prevent them from hoisting their flags over various Oriental lands which Japan had opened to commerce." Would the distinguished historian seriously say that Japan was in any position to resist the foreigner trading into China in that remote period? Or that Japan really opened the Far East to commerce? Even the condition of hermitage under Tokugawa Iyeyasu is presented in a somewhat praiseworthy light, as "an era of undisturbed domestic peace."

In one measure the author can be supported, when he speaks of the Japanese giving a remarkable demonstration of human vitality (as a hermit nation) and patient industry, which are characteristics of the Japanese today. "It was this vitality" he says, which "developed Chosen, Taiwan and Manchoukuo," and "contributed vastly to the transformation of the once-barren lands of western United States and Brazil into areas of great productivity."

Domestic and World Affairs

Over-enthusiasm distinguishes many of the references to Japan's accomplishment in domestic and world affairs, and the distinguishing characteristic of modesty among the Japanese, is not apparent in the work. The author, however, is animated by a stimulating belief in his people and his nation. The effect upon foreigners who read the book may be impatience with some of the conclusions. For instance, great as was the Meiji Restoration, it is difficult to believe that the Japanese, in stepping out into the world, consciously "returned for inspiration to the past, to those institutions and principles which were the product of its native history and to adjust these to the realities and exigencies of the new situation." . . . Then he speaks of "the swiftest unrevolutionary socio-political change the world has ever seen," a supportable conclusion. It was possible he says, because "there had existed for 25 centuries a political principle which was native to and fundamental in Japanese history, the principle of Government centering in the Imperial Throne."

Step by step the reader is taken along through the centuries in an enthusiastic revelation of events, and with a wealth of material not found in other compilations. One gets the impression of strong continuity among the Japanese, of an unchanging strength and a ceaseless striving. There is a blend of restlessness and content in the story thus unfolded. As foreign readers pursue the record they do come to the conclusion of Japanese greatness due to doggedness, to unity, to the spirit of cooperation, to an unmixed race which has preserved its character and in power through singleness of purpose, is going forward. Changes in Japanese history have been skillfully woven. After going through this work foreigners here and abroad will be enlightened as to the facts of Nippon history and the causes which underlie its development. (G)

Japanese Cooperation

It was not known until very recently, except to a few Japanese economists, that Japan has the historical claim of being the first country in the world to develop an organized form of cooperation. This organization was brought into being in 1840 or nine years before Frederich Wilhelm Raiffeisen inaugurated in Rhenish Prussia his Darlehnscasse or loan banks, the year in which by the consensus of expert opinion is definitely fixed the beginning of systematic or organized cooperation in Europe. What is even more remarkable, this cooperative organization still continues to operate and even flourishes with a growing membership, its centenary having been celebrated in November last year.

The name of Yugaku Ohara who founded this cooperative remained practically unknown in this country until 1928 when His Majesty the Emperor, on the occasion of his coronation, granted him the posthumous honor of the senior grade of the 5th court rank. Although this was hardly surprising to those economists who had had occasion to look into Yugaku's work, it was not until several more years had passed that general interest began to be taken in the work achieved a century ago in a corner of this country and in the life of its author which is stranger than fiction.

Yugaku was born in 1797 at Nagoya. He was the second son of a councillor or one of those highest in feudal rank and closest to his lord. Beyond this, next to nothing is known of his early life since he had reason not to disclose it even to his greatest intimates. However, it is known that he early attained proficiency in swordsmanship. His accomplishment was proved in his 17th year when he proved himself more than a match for the very man who had taught him fencing, his master being the first and last man to fall under his sharp blade.

Yugaku's trouble began when his father arranged his betrothal with a young woman whom the fencing master had unsuccessfully been suing. The disappointed man challenged Yugaku to a duel which cost him his life. The young samurai who had killed his lordship's fencing master forthwith prepared himself to atone for his deed by self-dispatch. But his father was more thoughtful and publicly disowned him, thereby saving his son's life and his family by making it impervious to legal procedure.

With a few gold pieces given by his father as a parting present and a pair of swords, the disowned child left his home on a journey which was to continue for many years but was never to bring him back to his parents. He first went to Kyoto where his Confucian scholarship secured for him a place in the noble family of Kujo. From there he went to Osaka and next up Mount Koya to be initiated into the learned lore of the Shingon sect of Buddhism. When 23 years of age, he was in Suo Province studying Japanese classics under Yoshiki Kondo, a well accomplished scholar of more than local reputation. In a year or so he again started out on a long journey that was to consume a decade and take him to many parts of the country. Throughout his extensive traveling he is said to have made his living by his art of reading faces. It is said that Yugaku always kept on his person three small gold pieces out of what had been given by his father to serve as a gratuity for whoever should dispose of his remains after his death which might come anywhere and anytime.

A great turning point in his life came in his 33rd year when he visited for the second time a Zen monk named Teiso on Mount Ibuki. This monk, unlike other votaries, went from place to place helping farmers till the soil, sow seeds, clear the paddies of weeds, and reap their crops. Working with this monk, Yugaku learned the science of rice cultivation and the value of the cereal itself. "One grain of rice," taught the Zen priest, "when it falls in the soil, produces 24 sprouts and later as many stalks. In the fullness of time these stalks each bear 300 grains of rice, in other words, one grain of rice will produce 7,200 grains in one season."

On this basis of growth, one grain of rice in the following year is to produce 51,840,000 grains and in the third year 373,248,000,000 grains or, computed in terms of ordinary measurement, 67,863 koku and a fraction. "In the fourth year," said the religious teacher, "the yield from one original grain will multiply to 488,651,563 koku on which the whole population of the country will be able to live for twenty long years." "And yet," continued the priest, "people have no compunction whatever about throwing away a grain of rice. Those who eat rice with no more sense, like you yourself, are worthless mechanisms for producing only dung."

When Yugaku parted company with the good priest he was determined to turn his scholarship and experience to the good purpose of popular education. In Shinano Province where he broke his journey next, he set up a private school which proved very successful. But it was not until in 1835 he came to village called Nagabe in Shimosa Province, not far from the fishing town of Choshi, that he decided to settle down there to a more permanent kind of work.

The farming village he chose by mere accident for his abode happened to be in one of the fiefs controlled directly by the Shogunate. The magistrates and bailiffs sent out there thrived by receiving bribes from the gamesters who, under their connivance, operated gambling houses, going from town to town. The farmers, on account of a series of famines, had been reduced to extreme circumstances. Many had deserted the countryside and more about to do likewise, so that an increasing amount of acreage formerly under rice was running to waste. Those who stuck to their family farms were fast losing them because of the funds they had to borrow at a usurious rate.

Yugaku who came to Nagabe set up his private school and called it the "Hakkoku Kyokai" (Church), naming it after the place chosen for the purpose. Here he gathered farmers and their wives twice each month and taught them what he knew about rice cultivation and what he believed to be the true way of life. In 1840 he set out on the economic improvement of the village by setting up a local association on a basis of cooperation. Each member was asked to contribute one "tan" of land or 5 pieces of gold toward the initial fund, and the association was called "Senzo Kabu Kumiai," meaning an organization to guard against the loss of lands bequeathed by their ancestors.

The lands thus placed under collective control and management were permanently secured to the members who collectively worked. All the revenue from the land was reserved never to be distributed. Those who worked on the collective farms were paid by the association for the amount of labor put in. Only when the share for each member reached 100 ryo in value was a member free to withdraw half this amount in case his family faced a financial crisis. Otherwise, the reserve fund was never to be touched. This rule is observed to this day.

The agricultural economist who developed this plan was no less determined to lead his followers in moral life and conduct. Those who wished to follow his leadership were made to take an oath never to be guilty of any of the following offenses: gambling, adultery, greediness, heavy drinking, litigation, whore-mongering or indulging in frivolous forms of amusement. On the other hand, they had to pledge to be always industrious, dutiful to parents, kind to kinsmen, loyal to the country, grateful to their ancestors.

The man who did so much good for the village failed to see the successful outcome of his own undertaking. He was falsely accused of dangerous thought on the reports turned in by gamesters who had reason to be revenged on the man who had turned so many people from the gambling houses. Yugaku was summoned to Yedo and after a trial was condemned to self-confinement of 100 days under duress. Upon his return to the village he found that some of his followers had returned to a dissolute life. He thought deeply how he might impress the importance of his teaching on them. His conclusion was that his death alone would do this. In 1858 he committed disembowelment in true samurai fashion. Before his death he wrote a note saying that if his followers missed him or his leadership they should never be guilty of the moral backslidings which had pained his heart most deeply. That the lesson taught in such a peculiar fashion was not lost is shown by the growth and prosperity today of the farm cooperative with which Yugaku's name is always to be identified.

SUEZ CANAL STRATEGICALLY VITAL RECTANGLE GUARDED BY LAND, SEA

Straight and Narrow Water-Way, Joining Red Sea and Mediterranean, Is Key Artery in Europe

By PHILIP JORDAN

N.Y. Times

Between Suez at the extreme northeastern point of the Red Sea and the synthetic town of Port Said on the Mediterranean lies the most valuable, one of the most vulnerable and one of the two most strategically important rectangles in the world. (Panama is the second.) It is 101 miles long and a few hundred yards wide. Within the borders of those few hundred yards there runs from north to south a sweet-water canal, a railroad, a superbly surfaced motor highway, electric cables and the Suez Canal.

It is for the possession of the Suez Canal that armies have been fiercely battering one another in the mountains of Greece and on the hot Libyan plateau, for it has always been the German conception that once Great Britain was driven from military control of the canal the whole structure of its imperial might would dissolve and that the home island would thereafter yield easily to a conquering force.

This conception of the canal's strategic importance vis-a-vis London is not a new theory. As long ago as 1911 a German writer, Dr. Paul Rohrback, in a book, "Die Bagdadbahn," wrote: "England can be attacked and mortally wounded by land from Europe only in one place—Egypt. The loss of Egypt would mean not only the end of its dominion over the Suez Canal and of its communications with India and the Far East but would probably entail the loss of its possessions in Central and East Africa.

Intrinsically Correct

It is with full realization that this statement is intrinsically correct that outposts of the immediate British defense of the canal have been fighting hundreds of miles from its magic waters—in Libya and in Greek territory. There are the Royal Navy, the Turkish Army, the Imperial forces in Palestine and Transjordan and, wherever there is air above, the warplanes of the Royal Air Force.

But this rectangle of land and water is still defended in no small degree from headquarters in the lovely canal city of Ismailia, about half way between the two seas, which the canal joins, where a coordinating British force of all three fighting services maintains a regular defense patrol of sufficient strength to insure—within the numerical limits of troops available to General Wavell—the canal's immunity from serious attack.

At regular, very shortly spaced intervals—it would be unwise to say how often—the canal is swept from end to end for mines, its greatest danger, for even the most vigilant air patrols cannot with certainty guarantee to prevent the enemy's flying into the canal zone at night and laying mines in the waters of this great international maritime highway. Targets are easy, for Egyptian nights, even when the moon is small, can have a splendor and brilliance found nowhere else and even at the darkest hour the visibilty is often tremendous.

No ship, about the integrity of whose papers and purpose there is the slightest doubt, is allowed to enter the canal before it has been searched from stem to stern, from truck to keel, but, even so, there is always the chance, however slim, that it may have concealed about it undetected apparatus for minelaying.

Wartime Danger

Such precautions are not always considered sufficient, as I had the opportunity of observing shortly before the Italian entry into the war. A Soviet freighter loaded with cement passed through the canal from north to south. On arrival at Suez it received orders from its Government to turn around immediately and go home. No chances were taken with a ship whose load and circumstances were considered suspicious. An armed guard was placed on its bridge and a naval escort preceded and followed it, while along the canal bank a Bren gun carrier accompanied it and there was a bomber overhead. Thus it journeyed from Suez to Port Said, where the army abandoned it to the care of other escorts until it had reached the three-mile limit.

An often exaggerated wartime danger to the canal is the ship whose captain has orders to scuttle it or set it on fire. So close a watch is kept on all shipping that passes through that if such a case were to arise there would always be time for tugs to push the sinking vessel to the bank before the ship was able to block the main passage. As the main channel, which is that part of the canal 42 feet deep, verges in width just under 200 feet, which is nearly half the total surface width, it will be understood that there is plenty of space in which to maneuver sinking or fired ships so that they will not interfere with legitimate traffic.

Although Britain is defending the canal in its own most vital interests, Britain is in fact under international law responsible to all nations for its safety. Britain is the international guarantor that in both war and peace the canal shall be available to ships of all nations.

Maritime Canal

In the original 1888 convention which defined the policies on which the canal was to be operated, its signatories—Great Britain, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Spain, France, Italy, the Netherlands, Russia and Turkey—named the Ottoman Empire as guarantor, but at the end of the last war, when Turkey was no more than a defeated and disarmed nation, this duty was demanded by and granted to Britain. But the convention was not otherwise modified and indeed, Article I—although somewhat ironic at the moment—reads: "The Suez Maritime Canal shall always be free and open in time of war as in time of peace to every vessel of commerce or war without distinction of flag." It adds: "The canal shall never be subjected to exercise of the right of blockade."

There are, however, ways other than military of keeping unwanted vessels out of the canal. Three days before Italy came into the war an Italian ship loaded with 5,000 tons of arms arrived at Port Said en route to Massawa in Eritrea. A convenient "mishap" occurred suddenly at the southern end of the canal and the vessel's transit was delayed 24 hours. As a result it never reached Massawa: half-way down the Red Sea a British destroyer discovered it.

Function Remains Intact

In this war when the Mediterranean is a battlefield, the Suez Canal ceases almost entirely to function as an artery through which vitality and strength are pumped into all the component parts of the British Empire (other than those of the Western Hemisphere) which go to make it one living body. It is true that through traffic has almost ceased, but it is true also that the Imperial Armies of the Nile, who fight equally for the integrity of the British Isles as for that of Egypt, could not be adequately supplied if it did not exist.

Mr. Roosevelt's recent declaration that the Red Sea is now a one to which American shipping will be admitted underlines this point heavily.

Communication between the ports of Eastern Africa and Egypt, little more than primitive, certainly could not supply the tremendous consumption demands of General Wavell's far-flung forces. Were there no canal there certainly would be no Red Sea ports, such as Suez or Port Tewfik across the bay, capable of handling the fantastic tonnage which now passes through their warehouses, capable of shifting it rapidly by rail to whatever destinations the various cargoes are consigned. If the canal did not exist no modern army in Egypt could hope to defend itself against forces operating on interior lines of communication. Its fall to the enemy would mean the end of resistance in the Middle East and perhaps in the African continent entirely.

Integral Part

Nor could it hold out if Cairo were to fall, for Cairo is an integral part of the canal's anatomy. Just as the canal is itself an artery, so is it kept alive by a vein of its own: the sweet-water canal cut from the Nile at Cairo to Ismailia and thence bifurcated to Port Said on the north and Suez on the south.

This sweet-water canal (although no water in the world can less deserve the name) provides the whole area with its only water supply. If it were cut—and it is at the mercy of whoever is master of Cairo—the canal zone could no longer support human life; its cities would revert to the desert whence they were wrenched with so much labor and tears; gradually the canal would silt up; the silences of so many thousand years would come down once more on the melancholy brackish landscape through whose wastes Napoleon once dreamed of cutting the canal that a practical visionary from his country finally achieved. Not that Napoleon and de Lesseps were the first men to realize how great might be the benefits such a canal could confer on mankind: such a passage had been a human dream more than 14 centuries before it became a reality.

I have traveled the entire length of the canal many times by ship, road and airplane and it has a glittering wonder whose excitement never decays into the commonplace. This surprising lack of monotony is an added wonder, for almost as soon as Port Said and Port Fuad are left behind, the left bank is nothing but a sandy plain with no feature cut into its waste, but across whose farthest horizon the august mountains of Sinai rise like a shadow into a sky that seems infinitely more remote than any other that presents itself to human gaze. From one end of the canal to the other perspective and outline hardly change.

Frontier of Asia

Although visions conjured by the monotony of the left bank are the more enticing—is it not the frontier of all Asia—the right bank should properly demand the traveler's attention. Port Said itself did not exist 70 years ago: it is, therefore, a phenomenon whose impact the most unromantic traveler must feel when first seeing Egypt, a country nearly all of whose present inhabited cities belong to remotest antiquity. Where it stands was marshy land on which de Lesseps tnrew the results of his titanic dredging and on that foundation this already legendary gateway to the East sprang hurriedly into being.

It is an island connected only by means of a bridge with the narrow belt of land that divides the right bank of the canal, the highway and the railroad from Lake Menzaleh, in whose tideless waters the shabby fishing vessels of the more prosperous fellaheen net those delicious prawns that are Egypt's only contribution to the gourmet's calendar.

To look from a ship's deck at trees which there border the canal and see above their branches the masts and sails of feluccas in the then invisible lake is to know that mad dreams can sometimes become real; for, because it is inconceivable that trees, great highway and railroad are in fact running for nearly 30 miles along a spit of land that is no more than a partly artificial causeway, it seems as though those boats were moving steadily across dry land.

Same Illusion

The same illusion is to be had just north of Lake Timsah where the canal broadens suddenly at Ismailia. Here the traveler who stands among the sand dunes looks toward Mount Sinai and is unable to see the canal waters, although they are only a few feet below him. Suddenly then to see the greater part of the hull and all the upperworks of a 20,000-ton liner approaching is to be convinced that it is some new kind of mechanical marvel crawling across the sand.

Two places only on the canal have an appeal of their own: Kantara and Ismailia. Kantara was the peacetime terminus for the trains that link Europe more closely to Egypt than ships in its ports, for on the sides of their sleeping cars were placarded the names of every important European station through which they passed on their way from Calais, left some seven days earlier.

Ismailia at this time of year is canopied with the purple flowers of innumerable Jacaranda trees and the scarlet flowers of the equally innumerable flame trees and carpeted with the green grass that is one of the most remarkable of all the achievements of the canal company. It is a healthy, finely planned city placed down in the middle of the desert. It is the administrative capital of the whole of this commercial empire—the financial capital was Paris—and with the exception of British troops and naval personnel and of parasitic undertakings such as stores and hotels, it is inhabited solely by the company's employes.

Twin Pylons

South of the town and towering above it on Jebel Mariam, as though to remind us that however permanent the canal may be we are at least mortal, are the twin pylons of the world's highest war memorial. It commemorates those who fell in the successful defense of the canal against the Turks in 1915, when the dread enemy actually succeeded in embarking in its waters.

At the extreme south lie Port Tewfik and Suez, two valves through which the British Empire, soon to be joined by the United States, admits essential nourishment for the imperial armies.

It is right that they should be. De Lesseps conceived his canal as a victory over malignant nature that should bring greater freedom to all men and it is the abiding determination of those who came after him and accepted his trust that it should not be betrayed.

New Camera Accessory

One of the best known types of German cameras, the "Plaubel-Makina," is now being equipped with an auxiliary plate on film holder, which does away with the necessity of the constant and troublesome changing of negatives, often resulting in the spoiling of a certain amount of film. Above all, it is not necessary with this new device to wait until the entire number of 36 exposures have been made, with which the camera is loaded. The holder is so constructed that it can be used with any camera or Kodak taking 6×9 pictures.

CRICKET UNDER WAY AT YOKOHAMA CLUB

Season's First Game Features Good Bowling, Bad Fielding, Lots of Fun

The vice-captain's team defeated the captain's side by 117 to 38 in the first cricket match of the year at the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club on Saturday afternoon.

Vice-Captain H. J. Bird played a prominent part in his teams' victory with a fine 32, retired. Another major factor in the defeat of the captain's side was the good bowling of P. H. Lord, Major K. S. Himatsinhji and W. L. Foggitt.

Better fielding by the losers would have made the game much closer, a number of catches being dropped. As is often the case, the batsmen who would have been out made good use of their renewed lease on life to add considerably to their scores.

The winners batted first, and after the first three wickets had fallen for 30 runs, Bird was joined by J. A. Sargeant, and the 50 mark was passed before the latter was caught by L. N. Haum. G. H. D. Bell then came in, and he made a fine stand with Bird. Their partnership boosted the score to 95, at which point the latter retired to give the remaining members of his team a chance to bat.

The remaining wickets fell fairly rapidly, the next six falling for 22 runs. Bell was the undefeated batsman, his score being 24, not out.

The captain's side started very poorly, the first four wickets falling for as many runs. The fifth was obtained when the total was 11 and two more fell at 13. It looked like a complete rout when 8 wickets were taken for 14 runs, but a stand was made at this stage.

J. M. da Costa was then joined by E. I. da Silva, and these two combined to make the score 31 before the latter was bowled by Foggitt. However, the tail did not wag for long, the next wicket falling without a change in the score, and then S. Stephens, the captain, joined da Costa. The former made five runs before being bowled by J. A. Sargeant.

The four highest scores were obtained by the winners. Sargeant followed Bird and Bell with 19, while Foggitt obtained 15. Da Costa was the leading batsman for the losers, turning in a 14, not out. He was followed by Devin, with 9.

The best bowling average was made by Sargeant, who obtained a wicket for one run. Next came Lord with 3 wickets for 4 runs. Himatsinhji followed with 3 for 9, while Foggitt got 3 for 14. For the losers, da Costa had four wickets to his credit, while Stephens and H. A Chapman obtained two apiece.

L. N. Haum fielded well, making three good catches and not missing any hits which came his way.

Twenty four players turned out, which resulted in both sides using 12 men instead of the regulation 11. This good turnout for the first game augurs well for cricket at the Y.C. and A.C. this season.

Some of the men who played at the club for the first time turned in creditable performances, and hopes are high that a good eleven will represent the club in the interport and the Hamilton Holmes Trophy matches. The bowling, especially, was good for so early in the season, and several newcomers gave promise of a high standard in this department of the game.

Both skippers used a number of bowlers in order to find talent. Stephens, especially, gave prospective bowlers on his side a chance to display their wares. Had he, a veteran bowler, taken on more of this work himself, the score would no doubt have been closer.

An informal dinner dance, at which a six-piece Hawaiian band supplied the music, was held at the clubhouse Saturday evening, with more than a hundred members and friends attending.

The baseball and mixed softball games scheduled for Sunday had to be postponed on account of rain.

The summary of Saturday's cricket game follows:

NEW YORK, June 12.—Bill McKechnie's Cincinnati Reds and the New York Giants continued their neck-and-neck race for third place in the National League race today when the Reds eked out a 1 to 0 win over the Boston Braves and the Giants took a 2 to 0 decision from the Chicago Cubs.

The Reds tallied in the opening inning of their game with Boston and thereafter both clubs were caught in one of the tightest hurling duels so far this year.

Harry Craft singled to start the inning out. Frank McCormick drew a free pass to first, advancing Craft o second. Ernie Koy then pounded out a sharp single and Craft raced home with the winning run.

Paul Derringer went the full rout for the Reds and held Boston to five safeties, while Johnson also hurled five-hit ball for Boston. The Reds made one error during the game, but it did no damage.

Giants Blank Cubs

Bill Lee pitched six-hit ball for the Cubs while his mates were collecting eight hits off "King Carl" Hubbell, but Lee had two bad innings and the Giants won, 2 to 0.

The Giants scored first in the opening inning when Dick Bartell and Norman Young drove out sharp singles. Mel Ott drew a free pass to first base and Harry Danning connected for a long fly which permitted Bartell to score. Lee settled down, however, and refused to give up any more runs in that inning.

In the fourth inning, Mel Ott again drew a free ticket to first and scored on Bill Lee's wild throw to second which rolled deep into field.

There were no other National League games scheduled for the day.

Arrival of Nippon Ship Carrying Silk to Mexico Stirs Embroidery Work

Transocean

MEXICO CITY, June 10.—When the Japanese steamer Naruto Maru arrived at a Mexican port this week with 2,514 boxes of first quality Japanese silk, the Mexican fine embroidery industry was given a new lease on life, it was learned here today. Lack of silk cloth and thread had practically brought this Mexican handwork industry to a standstill. In July the steamer Kiyokawa Maru is scheduled to arrive with 1,818 more boxes of art silk, and in August the Rakuyo Maru will bring another shipment.

NAZI HOUSES AFTER WAR TO CONTAIN REFRIGERATOR

Dr. Ley Gives Instructions That Popular Model Be Constructed Speedily as Possible

D.N.B.

BERLIN, June 15.—In his capacity as Reich Commissioner for Social Building of Houses, Dr. Ley has decided that all flats and houses to be built after the war by the National Socialist State will contain a refrigerator as part of the equipment.

It would, however, be hard to realize this aim at the present market prices for efficient refrigerators which cost from 300 to 800 marks each. Dr. Ley has, therefore, given instructions that a popular model be turned out with as much speed as possible. The preliminary operations are already being carried out in collaboration with the Working Community for Developing a Popular Refrigerator at Goeppingen.

This organization has been at work for some years past, and has found that a thoroughly practical type of refrigerator can be turned out at a cost of 150 marks. This type would have all technical perfections. When, however, all dwellings built by the Reich contain such a refrigerator, the scales would be enormously greater than had been assumed, and the trade has already made proposals for popular refrigerators costing between 50 and 60 marks.

U.S. TO SUSPEND TAXES APPLIED TO P.I. EXPORTS

New Bill Introduced by Senator Tydings Would Not Affect Independence Program

United Press

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Senator Millard E. Tydings, Chairman of the Territories and Insular Affairs Committee yesterday introduced "by request" the new Administration measure to suspend taxes hitherto applied to exports from the Philippine Islands to the United States.

The bill would suspend export taxes on Philippine products shipped to the United States for one year without modifying or altering the essential Philippine Independence program.

Representative Dan McGehee said that he would introduce an identical bill in the House. Representative Leo Kocialkowski, Chairman of the House Insular Affairs Committee, said he would give full support to the bill and would convene his Committee shortly to hold hearings.

Under the Independence program, the Philippines agreed to pay to the United States during the five year period from 1941 to 1946 graduated export taxes to enable them to adjust their economy toward complete independence when full U.S. import duties would be applicable. Because of the effect of the European war on P. I. economy, and participation by the Commonwealth in the U.S. export control program, however, the Commonwealth had asked that the graduated tax be suspended for one year.

Transocean

PARIS, June 10.—Two French fishing boats were recently attacked by British aircraft, newspapers in Paris reported this morning.

One of these boats, while far out in the Atlantic, was machine-gunned and bombed by a British tri-motored fighting plane. One of the missiles tore a hole in the hull and the boat sank within three minutes. The crew took to the lifeboat and were rescued by another fishing vessel.

Another French fishing vessel, operating 13 miles away, was attacked by a British fighting plane. Four bombs were dropped but they all missed the ship.

NEW YORK, June 14.—"Marse Joe" McCarthy's New York Yankees gained a full game on the league-leading Cleveland Indians today when the blasted out a 4 to 1 decision over "Blazin' Bob" Feller, ace of the Tribesmen's pitching staff.

It was the sixth straight win for the Yankees, and brought them to within three games of the junior circuit's leadership. The defeat was the first that Feller has suffered this year at the hands of the Yankees, and was his third loss of the 1941 season.

The Yankees tallied first in the opening inning when Tommy Henrich poled out a four-bagger. They added another in the third inning which was enough to win the tilt, but sent two runs prancing across the platter in the fifth to ice the game.

Robert "Red" Rolfe started the inning out with a safety, after which Henrich was given a free pass to first and Rolfe advanced to second. Feller cut loose with a wild pitch, advancing both Rolfe and Henrich. Charlie Keller connected with the next offering, collecting a sharp single, and both Rolfe and Henrich crossed the platter with runs.

Atley Donald went the route for the Yankees, yielding but three hits while Feller and Harry Eisenstat, who replaced him in the eighth, gave up six safeties to the Yankees.

The Chicago White Sox moved up to within .004 percentage points of the third-place Boston Red Sox when the "Windy City" club pounded out a 5 to 2 decision over the Boston club.

The Red Sox took a 1-0 lead in the third inning, but the White Sox tied it up by counting in the fifth. In the eighth, the Red Sox scored once but the White Sox came through with a blistering four-run rally.

With the bases loaded, Michael Tresh collected a single, Louis Finney, Red Sox outfielder, fumbled the ball and Bill Knickerbocker then poled out a long fly to give the White Sox their four runs.

Edgar Smith went the full route for the White Sox and yielded 10 scattered hits. The Chicago hitters also collected ten hits, but had them when they counted most.

The St. Louis Browns took an easy 7 to 2 decision from the Philadelphia Athletics behind the seven-hit pitching of Eldon Auker.

The Browns lashed out 12 safeties during the game, led by Walter Judnich who collected two doubles and a single. Eight hits by the Browns yielded six runs in the first two innings, giving St. Louis a long lead. They scored twice in the first inning and four in the second. The Athletics scored twice in the ninth inning for their only tallies of the game.

The Detroit-Washington game was rained out.

AMISH SECT YOUTHS WORRY AUTHORITIES

All Are Conscientious Objectors And Are Determined to Refuse Military Service

I.N.S.

MILLERSBURG, Ohio June 15.—Ohio's peace-loving Amish stand ready to go to war today if Uncle Sam tells them to, but no power on earth can induce them to fight.

White-bearded, Patriarchal Bishop Elam Yoder, spiritual leader of one of the numerous Amish clans near here, took time out from his farm chores to make this point clear in explaining why thinly-populated Holmes County leads the state of Ohio in the number of conscientious objectors.

Informed that draft board officials at Millersburg predict that final classifications will show 40 per cent of the country's 1,900 registrants listed as objectors, the Bishop spread his gnarled hands and groped for words to express himself in the unaccustomed language of the "Auslander."

"We Amish are good Americans, good citizens," he said stoutly. "We shall continue to be obedient to our rulers, to pay taxes to them, to pray for them. But a Christian cannot take up the sword. Love must be the ruling force in all human relations. It is wrong to take life under all circumstances."

Rich Farmland Area

The Bishop stood in the open doorway of his great white-painted barn, with long rows of stalls filled with blooded cattle behind him. Outside the warm April sun shone on acres of rolling farmlands, the richest in central Ohio.

"Do you mean," asked the writer, "that your young men wouldn't resist even if an invading army swept through this valley, drove off you stock, burned your houses and barns, laid waste your crops, ravished your womenfolk?"

The Bishop didn't flinch at the brutality of the question. He smiled and replied patiently, his gentle voich rich with its Pennsylvania-Dutch accent: "No. The point you Auslanders seem not to understand is that when we say non-resistance, we mean non-resistance to the end."

After spending many hours among the quaint bearded men of the Sect of Ammon, who still wear home-spun 17th century garb and who ask of the outside world only that it leave them in peace, the writer was convinced that, incredible though it may seem, the venerable man spoke the simple truth. No human agency can compel these folk who, as a class, are Ohio's most prosperous farmers, to bear arms against their fellow man.

Would Refuse to Fight

Bishop Yoder and thousands like him here in the heart of rural America would not raise a finger against even a brutish foe who would threaten everything they hold dear: Their lush acres and sleek herds and fine big white houses and enormous barns bulging with the fruits of their toil. Nor would even the wanton dispoilage of their daughters and wives move them to acts of violence.

They are the plain people, the Amish, whose ancestors fled Europe more than 250 years ago in quest of a lasting peace in the new world, and who pushed on across the Alleghenies to establish their promised land in the undulating wooded country of North Central Ohio. Numbering tens of thousands in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Nebraska and the Dakotas, they form today the biggest single bloc of "non-resistant" citizens in the United States, and have presented Uncle Sam with one of the worst headaches he has got out of the selective service program.

The plain truth of the matter is that the military authorities would be tremendously pleased if a way could be found to grant legal exemption from service to all Amishmen. What to do about them has been one of the most vexatious problems confronting the War Department, and today the Government is pleased no end that these men of peace appear to be developing a program of their own that probably will prove satisfactory to everyone.

Reject Military Business

Faithful to the tenets that for centuries have made them a people apart wherever they have dwelt on the earth, the Amish simply refuse to have any part in the strictly military business of national defense. True, their young men have registered with the local draft boards, but simply because it is the law and their bishops and preachers have taught them to obey it.

But there the matter rests. All are conscientious objectors. If their objections eventually are over-ruled and they are called up for training, they will offer no resistance. They will go off to camp with other draftees. But they will refuse to don the army uniform, and they will not carry a gun.

"Our congregations hope to be able to finance camps where our sons would work in labor battalions or on farms designated by the government," the Bishop said. "But they would refuse to accept pay for even this kind of service, just as they did in the first World War."

The Bishop went on to explain that the Amish policy of non-resistance differs in many respects from other experiments in mass political rebellion, such as the movement led in India by Mahatma Gandhi, but in common with the teachings of the little Hindu it embraces the philosophy of non-violence and the imposition of the will without resort to any instrument of force.

Mass Disobedience

Like Gandhi's followers, the Amish confine their weapons to mass disobedience of certain laws in an effort to create a nuisance value sufficient to cause the government to give in and let them have their way. The Amish do pay taxes, but they refuse military service in any form, oppose public education beyond the eighth grade, and will not accept public duties such as holding office and serving on juries.

Bishop Yoder has four sons, two of whom are bearded, and therefore married and have families and are draft-exempt. But the other two are beardless, and therefore unmarried and presumably eligible. But the Bishop is hopeful that neither will have to serve unless it be in one of the "pay-their-own-way" objectors' work camps, plans for which are being formulated by the church.

1,000,000 British Women

LONDON, June 14.—By today about 1,000,000 young women will have registered for industrial service. Women born in 1918—armistice babies of the last war—are registering today. The first registration of women in Britain took place on April 19 when those aged 20 were concerned.

HAITI IS EXAMINED AS RUBBER SOURCE

West Indian Island May Soon Contribute Share for Vast Needs of America

The planned development of rubber plantations in Haiti would add another to the ten countries in the Western Hemisphere already supplying rubber to United States manufacturers, says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society.

"While Haiti has not been a commercial source of rubber," says the bulletin, "experiments have proved that the commodity will thrive there. In 1923 scientists of the Department of Agriculture came upon several species of rubber-bearing plants at Bayeux, including about 300 Hevea or Para rubber trees. These Haitian plantings date back to about 1903.

"Last year Central and South American countries shipped to the United States more than $3,000,000 worth of rubber, but this was only one per cent of our total purchases of 800,000 tons.

Malaya Leads

"British Malaya sold the most rubber to the United States last year—$165,000,000 worth. The Netherlands Indies provided over $112,000,000 worth, and Ceylon was third. Three-fourths of the rubber goes into automobile tires.

"In 1830, Brazil had supplied the world-wide demand. Today all the rubber from Malaya, Netherlands Indies and Ceylon is of Brazilian ancestry.

"Sir Henry Wickham, English explorer, brought 70,000 seeds from the Hevea rubber trees of the Amazon valley to the Royal Botanic Gardens of Kew, London suburb, in 1876. Two thousand seedlings were later shipped from Kew to Ceylon, and after the Ceylon experiment has proved successful, trees were planted in Malaya, and in Sumatra, Java and Borneo.

"When Brazilian rubber prices rose to $1.50 a pound in 1905, it further stimulated growing in the East. Ten years later nearly 3,000,000 acres had entered into competition with Brazilian planters, and the descendants of Sir Henry Wickham's seedlings were soon supplying 75 per cent of the world market. British restrictions further increased Netherlands Indies plantings. Altogether 8,000,000 acres are now growing rubber in the East, supplying over 90 per cent of the world supply.

Some in Florida

"Continental United States produces no rubber commercially, but southern Florida has been found adapted to the growing of Hevea or Para rubber trees, free from disease. The guayule shrub, from which Mexico last year supplied the United States with over $850,000 worth of rubber, grows along the Mexican border, in the Big Bend district of Texas, in Arizona and California.

"During the first World War, blockaded Germany extracted some rubber from the sow thistle. Latex, the milky fluid source of rubber in the rubber tree, also occurs in milkweed, goldenrod and other common plants.

"Rubber itself had limited commercial possibilities before Charles Goodyear, in 1839, discovered the process of vulcanization, making rubber stronger and more elastic, as well as less dependent upon temperatures. Another contribution of the United States was the discovery and promotion of processes and uses that have greatly increased the demand. The United States today consumes more than half the world output, and has used as much as 80 per cent of production."

BRAZILIAN PAPER SCORES BRITISH SYRIAN INVASION

Another Scheme for Subjecting Alien States to Conquest

Transocean

RIO DE JANEIRO, June 11.—The invasion of Syria is simply another of the well-known British actions of subjecting alien states to conquest, declared the paper Gazeta de Noticas yesterday.

The pretext offered by the British to the effect that German troops were in Syria was considered disproved by the word of Marshal Petain, in whom one could place far more trust than de Gaulle. The British themselves were fully aware of this fact, the paper continued. British leadership was, however, compelled to do something in the line of action which appeared somewhat startling in order to give a new impetus to the low morale of the British population, who saw their only rescue in aid to be given by the U.S. For this help Britain was now perpetually wailing.

The paper opines that a real blow that would give new courage to the British could not be given to Germany since Britain has already had a number of opportunities of becoming acquainted with the strength of the German giant, from the Norwegian fjords down to the mountains of Crete.

In view of this circumstance the British were obliged to attack French Syria in the hope of conquering this country within the shortest space of time by means of employing strong British forces.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Joe McCarthy's New York Yankees extended their winning streak to seven games and moved up to within two games of the American League lead when they downed the Cleveland Indians 3 to 2, here today

Joe DiMaggio supplied the winning run with a circuit drive early in the game. It was the 28th straight game in which Joe had collected at least one hit.

The Yanks collected all of their runs in the first three innings. Hits were scarce with the Indians collecting six and the Yanks five.

The Boston Red Sox took both ends of a double header from the White Sox knocking the Chicago club down into the second division. The Red Sox won the opener 8 to 6 and the night cap 6 to 4.

Though "lefty" Grove received credit as the winning pitcher for the opening game he was on the mound for only three innings. Grove was injured by a line drive off the bat of Joe Kuhel, forcing him out of the game but at the time the Red Sox were holding a five run lead.

Ted Lyons went the full route for the White Sox and was nicked for 15 safe blows.

In the night cap the Red Sox rallied in the sixth and seventh frame to overcome Chicago's early lead. Boston converted 11 hits into six runs.

During the second game Bob Doerr, Taffy Wright and Ted Williams hit homers.

The Detroit Tigers divided a double header with the Washington Senators, losing the opener 7 to 5 and then coming back to win the second game, which was stopped in the sixth by darkness, by a 4 to 2 count.

The Senators led throughout in the opener. Frank Higgins committed three errors in the third inning to establish some kind of a record, however, the Senators could not come through with any runs in the inning.

The Philadelphia Athletics, with an eight run rally in the eighth, trounced the St. Louis Browns 10 to 4.

Bob Johnson ran up his string of homers to 13 and his team-mate Frank Hayes also came through with a circuit drive.

The second half of the Browns-Athletics double header was postponed by rain.

National League

Bill McKechnie's Cincinnati Reds crawled into third place in the senior circuit today when they took both ends of a double header from the New York Giants.

Both games were hard fought and well played with the Reds coming through with hits in the pinches better than the New Yorkers.

Elmer Riddle turned in his fifth mound victory of the year when he took the opener by a 5 to 2 score. Riddle held the Giants scoreless until the eighth when both runs were allowed. Hal Schumacher started on the mound for the Giants but got off to a bad start by allowing two runs in the first inning. Two others hurlers attempted to silence the Reds' bats.

Bill Webber was the hero of the second game, clouting out a homer in the late innings. Four of the Cincinnati runs were pushed over in the eighth frame.

The old reliable Bucky Walters was on the mound for the Reds and held his foes to seven hits and allowed no runs after the first inning. Three New York hurlers yielded ten safe blows.

Leo Durocher's Brooklyn club advanced to within one game of the senior league lead when they downed the St. Louis outfit 8 to 1 in the first half of a double header. However, the gain was short lived because the Dodgers dropped the second half of the bargain day bill by a 3 to 0 count. The Card's lead was preserved by Howard Krist who hurled a two hitter while his mates were getting at three Brooklyn hurlers for three runs.

Lou Riggs shone in the opener when he knocked the ball out of the park in the ninth inning. The blow came with two mates on base and netted the Dodgers three runs.

Bill Posedel tamed the Pittsburgh Pirates by a 5 to 1 score and allowed only five hits while the Boston Braves were nicking five Pirate hurlers for 14 safe blows. The Braves led throughout and their big inning was the fourth when two runners crossed the plate.

The second half of the scheduled Boston-Pittsburgh twin bill was rained out.

The Chicago Cubs took the first half of their double bill with Philadelphia by a 6 to 0 score but the Phillies came back to even the count with an 8 to 4 win in the night cap.

The Cubs started the day with a bang as the first four batters connected with singles and oon chased Thomas Hughes to the showers.

In the second game the Phillies scored all of their runs in the eighth inning. Dan Litwhiler, a rookie from Baltimore, led the batting attack with a homer and pair of singles.

Another captain's versus vice-captain's teams cricket match will commence at 2 p.m. Saturday. With the vice-captain's side having won so easily in the first game last week, there will be several changes in the line-ups. It is expected that several new players will make their Yokohama debut in this match. These include A.H. Ballantyne, R. Meyer and E. V. Thomas.

The first item on Sunday's full program will be the baseball game between the SKF and the Y.C. and A.C. nines, which is scheduled to start at 11 a.m. The SKF ladies' softball team will oppose the Y.C. and A.C. squad in the next event, which will begin at 1 p.m.

In past years a number of close and exciting baseball and softball games have been played between the SKF and the Y.C. and A.C. squads, and Sunday's tilts are expected to prove no exception to the rule.

Softball fans will have their fill of their favorite sport on Sunday as there will also be two mixed softball games that afternoon. The second contest of the tripleheader will be the clash between the Solons and the Cardinals, scheduled for 2.30 p.m. Immediately after this game is concluded the league leading Ancient Mariners will play the second place Pirates

If the Ancient Mariners win they will be assured of first place in the final standings, but if they lose, the Pirates will obtain a tie for the lead, necessitating a playoff for the championship. The Ancient Mariners gained a close 7 to 6 victory in their first encounter with the Pirates, and another battle royal is expected on Sunday.

DE GAULLISTS ARE OPPOSED

Ex-Servicemen Defy Propaganda Acts And Uphold Vichy in Syria

Transocean

VICHY, June 14.—The Ex-Servicemen's Association of Marseilles and the Department of the Alpes Maritimes staged a mass demonstration against the propaganda activities of de Gaullist elements, according to reports received here from Marseilles.

On the same occasion the ex-servicemen deposited a wreath at the war memorial and stressed their solidarity with their French brothers fighting against the British in Syria. The president of the association read out a message to Marshal Petain, assuring the latter of devout loyalty on the part of the members of the association.

RUMANIA-BULGARIA RAILWAY OPERATING

Direct Rail Connection Recently Completed Through Ferry Train Aids Both Countries

Transocean

BERLIN, June 15.—With the resumption of the direct express train service between Bucharest and Sofia in the week from June 9 to 15, a new phase of economic and political cooperation has been reached—which is of no little importance to European economic collaboration.

The new Bulgarian ferry "Sofia" across the Danube was built at the shipyard of the Gute Hoffnungshuette on the Rhine. Two specially constructed piers for this ferry were also built by the Germans.

The closer German-Bulgarian cooperation has now led to the establishment of a joint German-Bulgarian Agricultural Research Institute in Bulgaria. Of its two managers, one is German and the other Bulgarian. It will collaborate closely with the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute in Berlin.

The increasing European economic cooperation showed itself also in the expansion of the German "bourse for orders" in Paris. At this bourse, French industry not only receives orders but is also acquainted with the latest German technical methods and processes.

The artificial silk exhibition organized by the French industry during the week under report showed the influence of the German processes.

Preparations for mass production of synthetic wool are under way in the new synthetic wool factory in Switzerland. After the first samples proved satisfactory, it was decided last week to start mass production immediately. A second synthetic wool factory in that country will start operating in the autumn while Switzerland's largest factory of this kind will be ready for production in spring, 1942.

Compulsory labor service was introduced in the Netherlands last week. A total of 50,000 boys, grouped into 160 detachments, will be available annually for labor service. Dutch Jews, however, are excluded.

In view of the ever greater depletion of the world's tin resources, a new welding process has been developed by the Allgemeine Electrizitaets Gesellschaft, which has aroused much interest here. A pair of "welding pliers" makes it possible to replace the finest soldering work by welding in one-fourth to one-fifth of the time. This new process was shown in the week under report. Its usefulness in the wireless industry and jewelry-making was demonstrated.

DOG MOTHERS TIGER CUB

Mongrel Shows No Discrimination in Caring for Abandoned Kitty

I.N.S.

SACRAMENTO, California, June 2.—Motherly instinct knows no bounds, and Maggie, a mother dog of no certain breed, now has a family of three—a black pup, a white pup, and a striped kitty.

The tiger kitten, now the adopted child, is of royal birth and was "royally" neglected by its parents, Aggie and Rajah at the Griffith Park Zoo at Los Angeles. Its mother refused to nurse the new-born cub and it was nearing death when zookeeper Charles Kern temporarily acted as stepmother.

He massaged the little fellow and for two hours fed it with goat milk mixed with whiskey. Soon it showed signs of life and the search was started for a wet nurse.

One dog refused to nurse a tiger with her pups, but Maggie showed no such prejudice. She cuddled and sustained life where others failed. She was a mother.

GERMAN-JAPANESE SOCIETY FOUNDED

New Organization Gets Under Way in Presence of Ambassador Oshima

Transocean

HANOVER, June 16.—The founding of a branch of the German-Japanese Society in Hanover took place yesterday in the presence of the Japanese Ambassador to Berlin, Lieutenant-General Hiroshi Oshima.

The Japanese Ambassador arrived, accompanied by Admiral Foerster, President of the Society, shortly before the Beethoven concert began which was conducted by the well-known Japanese conductor, Count Konoye. The orchestra played the Fifth Symphony of Violin Concerto in D Major and the Egmont Overture.

After the concert, Ambassador Oshima accompanied by Regional Leader Lauterbacher went out to the square in front of the Opera House to witness a review of Hitler youth. He was greatly cheered by the crowd.

Toasts were exchanged at the banquet which followed, in which the desire for the well being and prosperity of the Japanese Emperor and the people and of the Greater German Reich and its Fuehrer was expressed.

The climax of the day was the act of founding of the Society's branch, which took place in the Knight's Hall of Leine Castle.

In his address, Regional Leader Lauterbacher pointed out that Ambassador Oshima was well known in Germany, who by his frequent visits to Berlin and Vienna had been able to acquaint himself with German life. He had always thought of close German-Japanese relations. In order to bring this about, a branch of the German-Japanese Society was now being established in Hanover.

Mr. Oshima thanked Herr Lauterbacher for his words and expressed his gratification that such a branch should be founded in Hanover—the center of German cultural life. He expressed his wish that this new branch would strengthen German-Japanese cultural bonds.

Thereupon, Admiral Foerster spoke on the German-Japanese Society and said that this was the fourth branch at the dedication of which he had been present.

When Ambassador Oshima left Hanover he was again greatly cheered by crowds lining the streets.

LOUIS KAYOS CONN AFTER POOR START

Young Irishman Outboxes and Outpunches Champ Before Haymaker Stops Him in 13th

Domei

NEW YORK, June 18.—Almost on the verge of defeat for 13 rounds, Joe Louis, world heavyweight boxing champ, back-peddled to keep out of range of Billy Conn, the contender and former world light-heavyweight boxing champ, who battered the bewildered champ at the Polo Grounds tonight.

Fifty-thousand hysterical fans cheered, yelled and booed, according to their respective moods as the invincible Joe Louis fought a losing battle until the 13th round when he scored a lucky knockout, ending the fight and again proving, by a very slight and doubtful margin this time, that he was still champion of the heavyweights.

Billy Conn, contender and relatively a new-comer in the choice bracket of the fighting world, came within a hairs-breadth of carrying out his firm conviction that he had devised a system which the Brown Bomber would not solve.

Although the majority of the boxing world believed Joe Louis to be without equal and in no danger of losing his crown for years to come, Billy Conn, youthful Pittsburgh boy who comes from a fighting family, spent years carefully studying the champ's habits.

Conn believed Joe Louis maintained his post on top of the boxing world by his unbelievable rapid recuperative powers and he claimed that all challengers so far have managed to stop the champ temporarily with a killing blow but that they have failed to follow up and finish the killing.

Conn developed a strong right and left hand punch, and he trained continuously to follow up after he had landed the telling blow.

In tonight's fight Conn fed deadly lefts and rights with telling effect and for 12 rounds, delirious fans believed the Brown Bomber had at last met his match and would hit the canvas for the count in the same manner in which he has sent all of his challengers.

FIRST IMPORTANT STORY OF HESS MADE BY BRITISH

Former Nazi Believed He Could Return With Peace Plans To Hitler

Transocean

STOCKHOLM, June 13.—First important disclosure from the British side concerning the flight to Scotland of Rudolf Hess was made in a speech in Scotland by the Lord Provost of Glasgow, Sir Patrick Dollan, yesterday.

He declared that "I am able to disclose the truth about the Hess affair. This truth will help you to realize how hard we have to fight in order to subdue the National-Socialists.

"Herr Hess came to us as a convinced National-Socialist and a true follower of Herr Hitler. He came feeling certain that he could spend a few days in Scotland discussing his peace proposals with a certain group and he believed that he could surely return to Germany in order to submit the results of his negotiations to Herr Hitler.

"This is the whole truth.

"I know that Hess is sorely disappointed that he is now a prisoner," Sir Patrick Dollan concluded.

SMALL INCISIONS HIT

Physician Condemns 'Buttonhole Surgery' in Human Operations

I.N.S.

DENVER.—"Buttonhole" surgery, a practice in which surgeons attempted to keep an incision as small as possible while operating, has fallen into disrepute in the profession, it was asserted by Dr. Max Thorek, professor at the Cook County Hospital in Chicago.

Dr. Thorek, who addressed the Colorado Guild of the International College of Surgeons in Denver, said:

"Some years ago, surgery had a legion of buttonhole makers—and I was a legionary. We used to vie with one another to see how small we could keep an incision and still remove what we set out to remove.

"An incision that was larger than a buttonhole was considered the work of an amateur. Removing an appendix through such an incision may have been a neat mechanical trick, but it was not good surgery.

"Today, we realize that the first requisite for surgery is room in which to work, and a surgeon's skill is no longer judged by the smallness of his incisions."

Mile Relay, High Jump Record Shattered by West Coast Collegians

LOS ANGELES, June 18.—Two world records were established yesterday in the annual dual track and field competition of the Pacific Coast Conference, it was reported here today. The University of California relay team of J. Reese, F. Froom, C. Barnes and G. Klemmer, bettered the world record in the one mile relay by the time of 3 minutes 4 seconds, and Lester Steers of the University of Oregon established a new world record of 6 feet 11 inches in the high jump.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The fighting New York Yankees knocked over the league-leading Cleveland Indians again today to run their string of consecutive wins up to eight games.

The Yanks won by a 6 to 4 score, and Joe DiMaggio continued his sensational hitting by recording his 29th consecutive game in which he has garnered at least one safe blow.

The batting star, however, was Joe Gordon who clouted out a homer in the fourth inning with one mate aboard.

In the second inning, Infielder Frank Crosetti was spiked by Hal Trotsky of the Indians and was taken from the game. Two stitches were necessary to close the wound in Crosetti's right arm.

The Indians were leading by a one-run margin when the eighth frame rolled around, but the Yanks saved their record by pushing over three runs.

In the only other game scheduled in the American circuit, the Washington Senators eked out a 3 to 1 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

The Senators did not make it out of the league cellar, but had the satisfaction of knocking the Tigers down from fourth to fifth place. The idle Chicago White Sox moved up into fourth spot.

The Senators won the game in the fifth when a double by Roger Cramer and singles by John Lewis and John Welja netted two runs.

Kendall Chase went the full route for the Washington club and allowed only eight hits. Louie Newsom and Archie McKain handled the mound duty for the Tigers.

National League

"Big Bill" Lohrman turned in one of the finest games of his major league career when he shut out the Cincinnati Reds with three hits today. The Giants took the game by a 6 to 0 score but they still need one more win to replace the Reds in third place in the senior circuit.

The Giants did all of their scoring in the first three frames, getting two counters in the first, one in the second and three in the third.

The great Johnny Vander Meer started on the mound for the Reds, but soon gave way in favor of Gene Thompson. Lloyd Moore and Joe Baggs also saw mound duty for the Reds before the game was over.

Piling up an early lead, the Chicago Cubs downed the lowly Philadelphia Phillies by a 3 to 1 score.

The Cubs collected lone runs in the first, second and sixth innings and registered 10 hits during the game from the offerings of two Phillie hurlers.

The Phillies made a determined effort to overcome the lead in the ninth but with the bases loaded Stanley Benjamin hit into a double play to end the rally. Joe Marty, Merrill May and Bennie Warren all collected singles during the ninth inning but Marty was the only Phillies to get home.

The other four clubs had a day off either because of wet grounds or because of traveling.

SITUATION IN AUSTRALIA IS DESCRIBED BY NEGISHI

Foreign Office Secretary, Who Returns on Canberra Maru, Says Food Is Ample

The O.S.K. liner Canberra Maru docked in Yokohama early Wednesday morning from Brisbane, Australia, carrying aboard a very light passenger list including eight Japanese evacuees and Kuniyoshi Negishi, Foreign Office secretary, who accompanied the first Japanese Minister to Australia, Tatsuo Kawai, from Japan in February this year.

Foodstuffs are ample in Australia but due to the present decreasing ship bottoms from Britain, the prices of tobacco and beer have trebled this year, Negishi said when interviewed by the press.

"Munitions factories are rising up in many places in Australia with Melbourne as the center while aircraft factories are turning out training planes and middle-sized bombers. The Australian Labor Party is going into power in Australia, which demands special attention," Negishi said, adding that the arrival of the Japanese Minister, Mr. Kawai in Australia has eased to a great extent ill-feeling entertained by Australian people toward Japan.

changed. We intend to devote ourselves to cooperate with Your Excellency's country in its development. This, I believe, has been further confirmed through the present visit to Japan of Your Excellency. It is our hope that Your Excellency's country will fully appreciate the intentions of Japan and proceed with the fostering of the actual power by placing confidence in the Japanese Government. It is my earnest desire that through our mutual assistance and cooperation peace will be ushered into East Asia as quickly as possible. We are indeed jubilant over Your Excellency's visit to Japan. I take this opportunity to express my hopes for the future development of Your Excellency's country and to pay my respects for the efforts made by Your Excellency and the members of his suite."

President Wang, in response, gave an address which in substance was as follows:

"We have been very much impressed by the elaborate banquet given us by the War Minister and the Chief of the Army General Staff and the cordial address by the War Minister. It is a great honor and pleasure for me to be able to meet again Generals Doihara and Suzuki whom I have not seen for the past ten years. I met General Sugiyama in Peking two years ago and General Yamada in Nanking also two years ago. Generals Nishio and Abe who are also here have given me their assistance during the past one year. The War Minister has just pointed out the complicated phase of the international situation. However, we could easily tide such a situation over if Japan and China will act as one and cooperate in the spirit of the Sino-Japanese Basic Treaty and the joint Japan-Manchoukuo-China Declaration. Our future is bright, I believe. War destroys everything but it also gives us light. We have met an unfortunate affair but succeeded in securing one very good result and that result is no other than construction. By construction I mean the construction of a New Order in East Asia. During the past one hundred years foreign countries invaded the Orient and the only country that could stand this aggression was Japan. How Japan has not only to pay attention to her own national security but also to that of other countries in the Orient. The foreign policy of aggression not only caused internal strifes in China but also gave rise to disputes between China and Japan. It is a matter for regret that this had resulted in the extension of the dispute between the two countries. Foreign powers have recently been tending to utilize the remaining influences in China's interior to widen the wedge driven between Japan and China and to protract the current dispute. We have to destroy such selfish efforts to maintain the old order, and create a new order and bring in coexistence and co-prosperity. Japan is already concentrating her full energy to the task of creating a new order and my compatriots intend to proceed in the same direction and toward the same objective. In Japan, the strengthening of the National Government is being very much talked about and we have the same hopes. The reason why the strengthening of the National Government is necessary is that we share the responsibility with Japan with a greater force.

"Since the return to Nanking of the National Government last year I have consistently told my people that they must work hard and try to become good friends and collaborators of the Japanese people. This could not be realized if the two peoples were of a different mind. If one of them is weak nothing could be achieved. The strengthening of the National Government is not only in the interests of China and Japan but also in the interests of East Asia. The National Government desires to share the responsibility for the creation of New Order in East Asia with Japan. I have been very much encouraged in this regard by the present visit to Japan. For the rest of our lives we intend to devote our efforts toward proceeding in the same direction with Japan."

U.S. TO START FIGHT COMING SEPTEMBER

Asahi Correspondent Reports President's Plan to Open Hostilities With Axis

Military observers at Washington believe that President Franklin D. Roosevelt is intending to open fighting against Germany and Italy about the coming September. The military preparation of the United States is not yet completed, but no nation would wait until armament perfection to start a war, and thus the United States will commence fighting in the Atlantic at the proper moment, though the military authorities are fully aware of the imperfect preparation.

The above is a gist of a special report cabled by the Asahi correspondent at Washington.

When the United States starts fighting Germany and Italy in the Atlantic, at first there will be only minor conflicts, and then in the middle of next year when her heavy bomber production is increased, she will commence real fighting. The construction of the two-ocean fleet with 35 capital ships cannot be so easily accomplished as the heavy bomber production, and it will take until 1946 or 47. Therefore, although the United States proposes to fight the Axis, Germany and Italy will be her direct enemies, treating Japan as a secondary "honorably enemy," the Asahi correspondent further says.

The defense and armament program of the United States, which is now under execution, is explained by the Asahi correspondent as follows:

U.S. Program Explained

It was since July last year that a great expansion of the Army and Navy air forces was commenced under the President's order. The first objective was to build 35,000 military planes, but since then the budget was increased to $7,000,000,000 and the mark was set at 50,000 planes. Then recently an additional budget of $2,650,000,000 was approved by the Senate for constructing military planes, and under the new budget, a total of 56,000 planes are to be constructed.

A radical opinion in the United States is insisting upon making the United States air forces independent of the Army and Navy and to increase the full strength to 80,000 planes. But according to the present plan, 50,000 planes will be divided into 46,000 planes for the Army and 4,000 planes for the Navy.

The monthly airplane production increased from 547 in July, 1940 to 1,324 in May this year, the total for those eleven months reaching 10,171. Those planes are said to consist mostly of bombers and fighters. The production capacity is rapidly increasing, and in June this year it is said to have been more than 1,400, and at that rate the annual production would be 16,000 planes. Then, the capacity will be increased to 2,500 planes monthly in the coming autumn, with an annual output of 30,000 planes.

40,000 Planes Annually

By the middle of next year the annual capacity will reach 40,000 planes. The total production of 5,947 planes in the first five months of the present year equals the total for 1940.

There are 47 companies producing airplane bodies, 11 producing motors and 6 producing propellers. The production equipments of these plants increased 247 per cent in the recent two years.

The production of airplanes in the United States is advancing at a very rapid rate, but the completion of the great air fleet of 10,000 Consolidated four-motored air fortresses proposed by the President will not come quickly.

American military experts estimate that the output of four-motored heavy bombers in Germany is 1,000 to 1,500 monthly (total airplane production 4,000 to 6,000 planes monthly), and therefore even upon the realization of the production of 500 planes monthly now aimed at by the United States, her airplane production will be less than one-third of Germany's. The two new types of heavy bombers Germany used in the Balkan and Crete campaigns are attracting much attention in the United States.

Heavy bombers now being constructed in the United States are very large in size, but it is doubtful whether they can compete with German heavy bombers. Charles Lindbergh said that it would take several more years for the United States to approach the airplane production capacity of Germany.

Demands on Stalin Reach Washington

Union is in no position to reject German demands for the time being, negotiations might be concluded in favor of Germany.

Meanwhile, commenting on the conclusion Wednesday of new German-Turkish friendship pact, the journals expressed belief that the treaty undoubtedly has given Germany a free hand in the Near East, obstructing further attempt of British solidarity with Turkey.

SOFIA, June 16.—Following the recent increase of wages of Bulgarian industrial workers by 10 per cent, as already reported, also the wages and salaries of workers and employes of private commercial companies will be increased as per July 1, by a decree of the Bulgarian Ministerial Council, which is based on the law for civilian mobilization. SKF BASEBALL TEAM BEATS Y.C.A.C., 10-5

Club Girls Win in Softball Contest by 20 to 5—Rooting Sections Active

SKF Industries of Japan, Ltd. and the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club broke even in their games on Sunday at the latter's grounds, the former's baseball team winning by 10 to 5 while the club girls won the softball contest by 20 to 5.

In the baseball game, which was played first, the Y.C. and A.C. nine gained a one run lead in the first inning, but their opponents staged a five-run rally in the second stanza to forge ahead and were never headed from then on.

The Y.C. and A.C. girls stepped out in front in their contest against the SKF ladies with one run in the initial canto and steadily increased their margin as the game progressed.

Makes Good Start

The Y.C. and A.C. baseballers made a promising start. Eastlake, the lead-off batter, worked Oneda for a free ticket to first and then stole second. Haum, the second man up, laid down a sacrifice bunt to advance the runner to third. Harriss then bunted along the third base line as Eastlake streaked home to work a well executed squeeze play.

The SKF players staged a rally in the second frame. Shimamura and Miki both got singles, the former going to third on the latter's hit. Then Miyano walked to fill the bases. Fred da Silva struck out the next two men, but Tanaka singled to bring in Shimamura and Miki. Yokoichi walked to again load the sacks. A single by Tsukuda and a double by Oneda brought in three more runs before the side was retired.

Harriss took over the Y.C. and A.C. hurling assignment in the third inning and held the Tokyo players scoreless in the third and fourth frames, while the home squad made one run in each of these stanzas to reduce the deficit to two runs.

In the third inning Harriss started off with a single and took third on Devin's double. Da Silva also made a hit to bring in Harriss, Devin taking third. However, the next two batters grounded to the infield and both Devin and da Silva were caught at the plate to stop the rally.

In the fourth frame Eastlake got another free ticket to first, and again stole second. Haum also walked, and pulled off a double steal with Eastlake. The latter scored as Harriss grounded out.

Big Fifth Inning

The Tokyo squad had their second big inning in the fifth, making four runs on five hits and a walk. Miyano singled and the next man grounded out. Nagai dropped one over second and Tanaka walked to fill the bases. Yokoichi hit to right, scoring Miyano and Nagai, while Tanaka took third. The next batter rolled to second to make it two out after Yokoichi stole second. Successive hits by Oneda and Shimamura brought in Yokoichi before the third out was obtained.

The home team got their next run in the seventh stanza. Harriss was safe at first on an infield error and stole second. After the next two men were retired Harriss made for third as da Costa grounded to the infield. A bad throw to first evaded the baseman and Harriss came all the way home on the miscue.

The SKF nine made its tenth and last run in the final canto. Oneda was safe at first on an error. He stole second and reached third on another miscue, crossing the plate after Miyano had flied out.

In their last time at bat the Y.C. and A.C. players also made a point. Da Rosa got a free pass to first when he was hit by the pitcher. He stole second and then came all the way home on a bad throw to first for a putout attempt.

Ladies' Softball

Apparently stimulated by the vociferous cheering of their supporters, the Y.C. and A.C. ladies' softball team made 17 hits to win their game with the SKF girls by a comfortable margin.

The Tokyo players also had a goodly number of rooters, but their vocal efforts to encourage their team were drowned out during most of the colorful contest by sheer weight of numbers of the boisterous club members.

The ungentlemanly Y.C. and A.C. fans razzed the visiting girls unmercifully, although it must be said that they cheered when they made good plays. They picked on the pitcher especially, and obviously unused to this type of conduct, she issued 16 walks. Her teammates also were unnerved for they were guilty of six miscues.

The home squad made seven errors, but allowed only as many walks. The opposition also was held to only one hit by the club hurlers, Vera Albeck and Teresita Planas, the safety being made off the latter in the seventh inning. Miss Planas also held the opposition scoreless during the last five innings with good support from her teammates.

The winners scored once in the first inning and made four runs in both the second and third cantos to gain a 9 to 3 lead. Both teams made two runs in the fourth, after which the SKF girls were blanked. The club players however made five in the fifth, one in the sixth and three in the seventh to make up their total of 20.

Batting honors went to Helen Lord with four hits in six official trips to the plate. Vera Albeck was next with three hits in five attempts. Obtaining two hits each were Juliet Daribier, Mary Stevens and Teresita Planas. Chi da Costa, Lena Salter, Germa Andreis and Maria Prohaska each got one.

Erica Parendieck made a record which will be hard to beat. She obtained a base on balls five times in succession, and scored on the first four of these occasions to gain the highest individual total of runs. Mary Stevens played a great game at third, while Lena Salter made a good showing behind the plate.

Miss Kazawa proved to be the hitter on the SKF team by obtaining the one safety on her side. Miss Hoshi fielded some inaccurate throws to first in smart style to effect putouts, while Yuri Yamamori pitched quite well considering the razzing she received from the opposition's supporters.

NEW YORK, June 21.—The New York Yankees set a record at the stadium yesterday when "Flea" Rizzuto, rookie shortstop, busted the old pill out of the park for the Yanks' 28th circuit smash in 17 consecutive games, but a mean customer named Paul Trout, who hurled for the Detroit Tigers, was tight on the mound and when the game was over the Yanks were on the short end of a 7 to 2 count.

The bombers did not mind so much however, because the Indians lost a mean 1 to 0 battle of the Washington Senators, leaving the penant situation in the junior league virtually unchanged, especially since all first division clubs had a dismal day.

The National League situation was a little different, however, because the St. Louis Cardinals took a 6 to 0 win over the New York Giants while the Brooklyn Dodgers dropped a 4 to 1 encounter to the champion Cincinnati Reds. The win placed the gas house gang three full games in front of the field.

In the 13-inning thriller at Washington both Kenny Chase and Al Milnar pitched shutout ball for a dozen innings but Milnar made the fatal mistake in the 13th of starting the frame with a base on balls to Jimmy Bloodworth, Washington infielder.

Al Evans, Washington back-stop decided this was the time for more heroics so he promptly belted one of Milnar's offerings for a sharp single which sent Evans all the way to third. This made the Indian infield a little jittery.

Up came Mr. Chase with a light tap to the infield. It was an easy pickup for infielder Lou Boudreau but in his haste to catch Evans at the plate his heave was wide and there went the ball game.

The Yanks set another record as Joe DiMaggio got his daily hit for the 34th consecutive game, but the orchids went to Paul Trout, of Detroit, Terrehaute and Sandcut, Indiana.

Mr. Trout not only limited the Yankees to eight scattered hits but also helped himself to two safeties in addition to driving in a pair of runs and scoring one himself.

At Boston the cellar resting St. Louis Browns hammered the third place Red Sox for a 13 to 9 win. The Brown artillery fire was led by George McQuinn, Wally Juddnich and Chester Laab who collected a homer apiece in addition to clouting hits of other dimenisons.

Also vicious was the manner in which Connie Mack's Athletics trimmed the fourth place Chicago White Sox. The Mackmen jumped on the Chicago lads for a seven run lead in the first two innings, from which the Sox never recovered.

When the carnival before the home fans was over the Athletics had the Sox whipped 11 to 5.

Ernie White, rookie St. Louis hurler from Columbus, got full credit for the Cardinals 6 to 0 win over Bill Terry's Giants. In the course of the afternoon all the Giants could garner off Ernie's offerings was a pair of hits. His mates, meanwhile, sewed up the game in the second inning by scoring two runs on an error and two singles.

At Cincinnati a three run splurge in the fourth inning enabled the World champions to trim the second place Dodgers 4 to 1. "Hot Potato" Hamlin, the usually reliable Brooklyn pitcher, became suddenly cold in that inning when Bill Werber singled and the McCormick duo—Frank and Myron and walker each clouted a homer.

Bill Lee, the veteran Chicago hurler, though he had a win in the bag but with a 3 to 2 lead in his pocket he made the mistake of throwing a home-run ball to the dangerous Max West. Max socked the ball out of the park to knot the count, and in the first alf of the tenth the Braves clinched the game when a double by Gene Moore sent the aging Paul Waner across from first for the winning run.

Another close game was played at Pittsburgh where the Pirates defeated the Phillies 2 to 0 behind three hit hurling of Joe Bowman. The only scoring in the game occurred in the second inning when a double, a single and a force out yielded two runs.

MARINERS CHAMPS IN Y.C.A.C. BASEBALL

Season Winds Up as Seafarers Lick Pirates 7-1 for Title

Final Standings

	P	W	L	RF	RA	Ave.
A. Mariners	6	5	1	60	39	.833
Pirates	6	3	3	58	45	.500
Solons	5	2	3	50	67	.400
Cardinals	5	1	4	62	79	.200

The Ancient Mariners won the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club mixed softball league championship by beating the Pirates, 7 to 1, on the club grounds Sunday afternoon. The Solons and the Cardinals did not play as they were both out of the running for the championship.

Both teams were held scoreless for eight of the nine innings, and it was one bad canto, the fifth, in which the Ancient Mariners scored all their runs, that spelled defeat for the Pirates.

After three stanzas during which neither side could get a point, the Pirates gained their sole run in the fourth frame. The first batter grounded out, and then Bill Blamey reached first on an infield error.

Ernest Eastlake grounded to the pitcher, who threw to second to force out Blamey. The fair shortstop who covered second was knocked over when the runner slid into the bag, and she dropped the ball. The men on the bases then worked a double steal, and then the fleet-footed Blamey stole home.

Beyond Great Hopes

Realizing that a defeat would result in their being tied for first place by the Pirates and necessitate a playoff, the Ancient Mariners came up to bat in the fifth determined to at least tie the count, but the results were far beyond their greatest hopes.

Dolly Tanner, the first batter, got a walk, and then Captain "Hessy" Heseltine singled. Chi da Costa also got a free ticket to first, filling the bases. Dave Harvey grounded to third and Mrs. Tanner was forced out at the plate on a fielder's choice.

Then Joe da Costa drove out a liner which an infielder found too hot to handle, Heseltine making the tying run on the play. "Lefty" Beatty poled out a three-bagger to score Harvey and the two da Costas, who are brother and sister. Beatty then followed Blamey's example by stealing home for the fifth run.

Percy Lord singled through the infield and then stole second. Professor Bird came through with a hit and Lord rounded third. He slid home to beat out the throw to the plate, and on learning he was safe declared that the run was worth having some of the skin on his hip scraped off from sliding. The chances are that some Mariners' fan has sent him a cushion as a token of appreciation for his noble effort, to relieve the situation. (Oh, Lord!)

The professor jogged to second during the proceedings and then took third on an outfield error. Bird winged his way home with the seventh run when Dante Dentici hit through the infield.

Neither side came close to scoring during the remainder of the game, both the seafarers and the buccaneers only advancing a runner to second on one occasion.

But for the fatal fifth inning the game would have been a battle royal, and the Pirates might have won by 1 to 0. Charlie Meyers held the Mariners to only one hit until the fifth frame, and also did not allow any in the sixth. Captain "Bucky" Harriss took over the hurling assignment in the seventh, and not a single seafarer reached first while he was on the mound. He also struck out three of the nine batters who faced him, as well as getting the sole hit made by his team.

Beatty, portside pitcher of the Mariners, allowed just one hit during the entire game and did not give a single base on balls. Although he made no strikeouts, he received great support from his teammates, and in six of the nine innings the Pirates were retired in one-two-three order. The buccaneers stepped into the batter's box 31 times in all, only four more than the minimum.

All the Mariners played well. Teresita Planas turned in her usual fine game as shortstop, Joe da Costa played well at the hot corner and Dante Dentici made a good catch in left field at an important stage of the contest.

Umpire's Hard Day

Umpire George Edmondson had a hard day, being an arbiter in all three ball games played at the club on Sunday.

Members of the winning team will be the guests of the rest of the league at a dinner to be held in the near future. Plans are now being made to hold an informal dinner party on Friday, July 4, American Independence Day, when the annual Tokyo-Yokohama Americans softball game will be played at the club. Should the plans materialize, the mixed softball dinner will be held in conjunction with this event.

The line-ups were as follows:

INAUGURATION HELD FOR LUSO-NIPONICA

New Portugal-Japan Society Is Founded With Prince Takatsukasa as President

The inauguration ceremony of the new Sociedade Luso-Niponica (Portuga'-Japan Society), established under the patronage of Baron Takaharu Mitsui, Dr. Naojiro Murakami, Tokuichi Kuribayashi, M.P., Kikuji Yonezawa, former Japanese Minister to Portugal, Ken Yanagisawa, former Charge d'Affaires in Portugal, and His Excellency Dr. Luiz Esteves Fernandes, Portuguese Minister to Japan, was he'd Wednesday afternoon from three o'clock at the Peers' Club.

Mr. Yonezawa acted as chairman at the ceremony, and the first person introduced was Mr. Yanagisawa, who was asked to describe how the former Society was dissolved and the new one established. During the course of his explanation, Mr. Yanagisawa particularly emphasized the necessity of deeper, stronger and closer cultural ties between Portugal and Japan, and how the new Society was established to facilitate these necessities on a firmer and more stable basis.

Minister's Efforts

He also mentioned the untiring efforts of Dr. Fernandes, who put himse f out in every possible way to hasten the establishment of the new Society. Marquis Yorisada Tokugawa was another person mentioned among those who had assisted in establishing the new organization.

After the president, vice-presidents, directors and committee members were appointed by the chairman, an address was made by Prince Nobusuke Takatsukasa, president of the Society.

During the course of his address, Prince Takatsukasa mentioned the fact that Portugal and Japan first came into contact 400 years ago, and the first products of Western civilization which had come to Japan had been through Portugal. Praising the cultural background of Portugal, he mentioned how much Japan had benefited from that country.

"It is, indeed, a great pleasure and honor," he said, "for me to be appointed president of this new Society, which brings closer these two countries which have such glorious historical traditions. Both nations are on the road of continuous progress, and for these two rising nations, which have such a significant historical background, to unite in cultural cooperation is, indeed, meaningful. I am looking forward with great expectations to the future activity of the Society."

A message of felicitation sent by Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka was read by Tamau Sakamoto, head of the Eurasia Bureau of the Foreign Office.

Message From Matsuoka

Besides congratulating the inauguration of the new Society, the Foreign Minister said Portugal is the oldest country with which Japan had contact in the past, and how three Portuguese, who had been washed upon the shores of Tanegashima island in 1542, were responsible for the introduction of firearms to Japan. Also was mentioned in the message the fact that Portuguese ships were among the first to visit Japan, and Portugal was among the first countries to have trade relations with this country.

After relating the historical relations between the two countries, Mr. Matsuoka's message said that in view of the fact that Portugal is in the Eastern hemisphere the two countries should have particularly close relationship, and although international relations are in an exceedingly precarious situation today, there is absolutely no reason why the relations between these two countries cannot continue in a spirit of friendship, understanding and cooperation.

"I am absolutely confident that under any circumstances the two countries can be on the best of terms, and I hope that this Society will have a glorious future in its meaningful activity," the message concluded.

The address made by Dr. Fernandes, Portuguese Minister to Japan, is as follows:

Fernandes' Address

"It is with a feeling of extreme satisfaction that I have the honor to be present at this inaugural ceremony of the new Sociedade Luso-Niponica, which today has happily been reborn under the patronage of so many distinguished personages.

"It is fitting that I should take this opportunity of referring, with great appreciation, to the activities of the former society, whose labors in the field of historical research on 16th century Luso-Japanese relations have, as you are doubtless aware, been highly appreciated in both Japan and my own country.

"I am quite certain that we can expect great things from the men, all of them of undoubted merit, who compose the new organization. I feel certain also that, thanks to the more intimate understanding which our new organization will provide, the relations between Portugal and Japan, a ready centuries old, will be still further deepened.

"In international life, as in the life of individuals, mutual knowledge is an indispensable prerequisite to perfect understanding. It is in this conviction that I ask you all to join me in wishing the Sociedade Luso-Niponica a successful future, and I have the honor to thank His Excellency Mr. Yosuke Matsuoka for his kind words which I deeply appreciate, expressed in the message which was read by Mr. Sakamoto on this occasion. I express also my best thanks to His Excellency the Brazilian Ambassador and the many other distinguished persons attending this ceremony for their presence here on this occasion."

Actors Will Join Savings Movement And Urge Thrift Among Theater-Goers

Cooperation of the dramatic circles in the national savings movement to attain the ¥13,500,000,000 mark was requested by the mobilization department of the Tokyo Municipal Bureau at a meeting held Wednesday at the Takaratei restaurant, Kojimachi.

Savings unions were established among the 2,350 town communities in the city by the mobilization department which also has encouraged the monthly savings system among women, religious and public welfare organizations. Members of the commercial and industrial unions and the central market receiving an annual income of over ¥30,000 are being persuaded to form a savings union among themselves where they will be required to save a sum of ¥100 or over monthly.

Members of the Dai Nippon Actors' Association such as Ennosuke Ichikawa, Kanya Morita, Chojuro Kawarazaki, Miss Kikuko Murata, Shotaro Hanayagi, Miss Ritsuko Mori, Tokizo Nakamura, Yaozo Ichikawa, Miss Michiko Oye and others attended the meeting.

The necessity of savings was stressed by Toshio Kimura, chief of the second section of the mobilization department, who explained his talk with simple illustrations. He also recommended the people in the dramatic circles to form a savings union among themselves.

The representatives were requested to stress the importance of savings before the public on the stage. The representatives pledged their cooperation in this respect. Similar requests will also be made to other art and cultural organizations.

STUDENTS' LABOR SERVICE SUMMER INSTRUCTION OUT

Education Ministry Gives Plans During Meeting With Presidents of 43 Universities

Instruction regarding students' labor service during the coming summer vacation were given by the Education Ministry during the meeting of presidents of 43 universities throughout the country held at the official residence of the Education Minister, Tuesday.

After discussions on students' training organizations, the following matter was presented by a representative. "When an organization requests the labor service of students, what would be the most appropriate attitude to be taken by the school authorities concerning it? The Education Ministry replied in this respect, that its policy regarding mobilizing students for labor service at the request of an organization, is to advise the school concerned of the advisability of the proposition. Therefore, schools are recommended to report to the authorities when they receive requests at this kind from varied organizations.

The request for students' labor service by organizations might be encouraged to be granted by the Education Ministry from the standpoint of students' training system, or would be would be left in the hands of the school concerned. The school also might be persuaded to refrain from accepting the request. In all cases, matters related with students mobilization should be first consulted with the Education Ministry. The above attitude of the Education Ministry regarding unification of education is being watch with deep interest in circles concerned.

U.S. ATTICS CLEARED FOR GIFT TO BRITAIN

Presents of Every Imaginable Sort Sent to England—Money Also Given

United Press

LONDON, June 17.—A look at the list of gifts to Britain's evacuees, bomb victims and members of the Army, Navy and Royal Air Force reveals that a lot of American attics have been cleared during the past year—all to the benefit of the men and women who are fighting Britain's war.

Leaders of the English-Speaking Union, which has been cooperating with the American branch of its organization as well as with other United States charitable organizations in collecting clothing and materials of every description to aid the war effort, said that only very rarely have they been sent gifts which could not be used by someone somewhere.

What might have been Uncle Ned's old cornet which looked like it had been kicking around an attic for many years, now is doing duty in an army band which lost all its instruments in the evacuation of Dunkirk. Junior's football, which he left in the basement when he went to college, might now be doing service on a field near a Canadian encampment where American volunteers are teaching their British cabinmates the rudiments of the game.

Trouble with Garment

"There has been only one garment which we have had trouble placing," a spokesman for the Union said. "This was an old Prince Albert frock coat, lined with red, which we just can't seem to give away. It really is a well-tailored excellent garment, but no one seems to wear the things any more. I can't imagine what it was doing in America."

More than 65,000 garments and thousands of other gifts have been received from all over the United States. Most of the garments are hand-knitted stockings, sweaters, gloves and mufflers. They represent an enormous amount of knitting, purling and stitching by thousands of women in America who sacrificed countless women-hours of bridge to get the articles finished.

Gifts have been received from Colorado mountain towns, from Chicago, Milwaukee, Roanoke, Va., New England, Cleveland, Cincinnati and California. Some of these are marked "To the men serving on the 50 United States destroyers" which were granted in the airbase exchange. Others are designated for the men of the coastal life saving service or the Royal Air Force. But most of them are just sent to be distributed where they are most needed.

Money Sent Also

Besides the gifts of garments, Americans have sent more than $5,000 in cash to the Union as well as 14 American ambulances, money for first-aid mobile posts, one complete surgical unit, a mobile feeding post and mountains of Red Cross and hosital supplies.

Not the least important has been the offers of hundreds of homes in the United States to care for British children for the duration of the war.

"The American gifts have been more wonderful than it is possible to imagine," one organization official said. "The clothing is always freshly cleaned and the people in the United States seem to have a second sight when it comes to giving things. Whenever we need little girl's dresses, or sturdy trousers for boys, or shoes for bombed firemen or layettes for babies—in fact, about anything possible to imagine, we know we usually can count on them being in the next shipment. They usually are."

Lives Made Happy

These gifts have served immeasurably in brightening the lives of the fighting forces as well as the evacuees and persons who have lost their homes. Dolls, toys, magazines, books, pingpong sets, dart boards, tennis racquets, cricket bats, all have been distributed from the American donations. Cigarettes, tobacco, candy, and even fruitcakes and cookies which could be safely shipped without spoiling have been sent.

Children who receive gifts of toys and clothing from the Union often have written thanking them—these letters are passed on to America. The letter of nine-year-old Robert Jefferies is typical. He wrote: "Dear Friend, Thank you very much for the sweater . . . I like to hear bombs . . ." An enclosed picture showed Robert swaddled in a too-large football jersey. He obviously was very proud of the large white number "37" sewn on front and back.

The Union said these letters would be forwarded to children in America.

BAN ON U.S. CONSULATES

Offices in Greece Occupied by Italians to Be Closed

Transocean

ROME, June 21.—United States consulates in those parts of Greece which are occupied by Italian troops will also be closed, according to a statement made by competent quarters at a press conference yesterday. A question whether the closing of the United States consulates, which had been demanded by Italy, also included the United States consulates in Greek territories occupied by Italian troops, was answered in the affirmative by an official spokesman. All United States consulates in Greece will thus be closed, since the closing of the American consulates in those parts of Greece which are occupied by German troops, has already previously been officially announced in Berlin.

Nice Work Done! We're Proud of You!

These girls from Gunma and Hokkaido, a contingent of Red Cross nurses returned home Thursday, 2:25 p.m. They served unflinchingly for two years on the China front. Here they are in attention before the facade of Tokyo Station before disbanding to write anxious letters home as two of them are in the lower picture.

Sword Collecting Returns to Vogue

Kyushu during the Bun-ei (1264-1275) and the Koan (1275-1287) eras all the more stimulated this tendency, encouraging the swordsmiths of the time to produce swords which were more effective and serviceable in actual fighting.

"The sword of this kind is technically called by those interested in Japanese swords the Joo-Joei type. The blade of this type, unlike those produced during the Heian period for fighting from horseback, appeared more powerful, being much broader and not tapering toward the point. Its length ranged from three to three feet and a half. With this weapon, the warriors of the Kamakura period fought with the Mongolian soldiers.

"The feature of this sword is that the point of the blade is rather stubby, instead of being sharp like that produced during the Heian period. It is for this reason that the blade is said to have the 'boar-neck point.' During the supremacy of the Hojo family as he de facto head of the Kamakura military regime, the sword of this type was very popular. It is proverbially known among lovers of the sword today that the sword with the 'boar-neck point' is invariably sharp of edge.

"Kuritaguchi in Kyoto produced many prominent swordsmiths during the Kamakura period. They were reputed as the greatest experts in the country in tempering steel. This group supplied the Imperial swordsmith shop of the Emperor Gotoba with many of its members as tutors in sword forging.

Magnificent Heirlooms

"Kunitsuna was a swordsmith of the same school who came to Kamakura at the invitation of the Hojo family. Others who came to this political center to live were Saburo Kunimune and Sukemichi of the Bizen province. These three men were the ancestors of the swordsmiths of Kamakura, and left many magnificent pieces to posterity. The celebrated Goro Nyudo Masamune may be regarded as one of the professional descendants of this trio.

"Let us now see how the Japanese sword of the Kamakura period underwent further change. When the Mongolian armies landed on Kyushu, the warriors under the Kamakura regime fought them with the swords of 'boar-neck point,' but the shortcoming of this weapon was discovered as a result of this conflict and it was rectified after the campaign. The blade of 'boar-neck point' was thick and efficient in cutting something hard such as, for instance, the iron helmet worn by the warrior of that period, but it could not cut the armor made of leather worn by the Mongol warriors.

"In the light of this fact, the swordsmiths of the time began to forge a sword with a thinner blade and longer point. This was also necessary because the point is liable to break easily, and if it is sharpened by a whetstone, the tempered edge at the point could be whetted off in a short time. The new style of sword was equipped with a longer tempered point. Among the famous swordsmiths in Kamakura were Tozaburo Yukimitsu and his celebrated son Goro Masamune; and they assisted by the able disciples, went about the task of perfecting the sword of this type."

SULPHONAMIDE USED TO CURE WOUNDED

British Discover Way to Save Thousands From Death or Amputation

I.N.S.

LONDON, June 25.—Miracle cures are now being performed by a new treatment of war wounds in many London hospitals today.

The treatment first proved effective on a large scale when the B. E. F. returned from Dunkirk and since then thousands of air-raid casualties have been saved from death or serious operations.

Just before the commencement of the war, research chemists produced the now famous M and B 693, which greatly reduced pneumonia mortality.

In voluntary hospitals, honorary research workers concentrated upon studying its uses. Then came the development of M and B 693, a more active form of this sulphonamide preparation.

Instead of a death rate of about 95 per cent among soldiers with seriously infected wounds, as was the case in the Great War twenty-five years ago, doctors have saved the lives of many hundreds who were badly injured.

Stops Bacteria Reproduction

This new development of sulphonamide stops, instead of killing, the reproduction of bacteria in wounds, but does not damage the natural defenses of the body.

A surgeon at one of London's largest hospitals, describing his experiences in treating three hundred wounded men from Dunkirk, said that one soldier had a compound fracture of the left leg and gangrene had set in. In the last war this would have been fatal, but within 24 hours of the application of sulphonamide the wounded man had improved.

At one hospital 65 casualties were admitted, all of a serious nature. Before the war it would have been necessary to consider a series of amputations, but because of this new miracle treatment not one amputation was necessary.

Still Praying for Heaven

I.N.S.

HOUSTON, Texas, June 20.—"Aunt Isabel" Oliver, Houston negro mammy, is still waiting to go to heaven as she's prayed for so often. Now 102 years old, she's currently recovering at a hospital after amputation of a leg. She worked until two years ago, when she developed a chronic case of diabetes. Until that long-deferred day when "de Lawd sees fit to take me," Aunt Isabel plans to spend her time making quilts.

Publicity Minister Of Wang Gives View

civil strifes have broken out one after the other and the successive Governments have had no definite platform to guide the Chinese masses.

"When China was opened to foreign trade and commerce China began to suffer from aggressive foreign influences and for fear that it may involve herself deeply started to court such countries' favors. Besides getting only a superficial view of foreign culture China has lost the most brilliant achievements of her past culture. In order to effect an inter-change of Chinese and Japanese culture, in the future, we Chinese people must make her past cultural achievements a foundation on which China's new culture is to be set up.

"On the other hand, China must also absorb Japanese culture to augment the construction of a new culture of our country and use her efforts eventually toward the creation of a new East Asian culture. This will be the reason why Japanese and Chinese culture is being studied in East Asia and its influences being spread to the field of other world culture."

Just What He Ordered

I.N.S.

CAMP CLAIBORNE, Louisiana, June 21.—One of the main pleas of a draftee is the request for more mail and news from the old homestead and the immediate vicinity thereof. Cooperating to the fullest, a young Des Moines, Iowa, miss who saw Private Dean Foster's picture in an Iowa newspaper wrote the following letter to draftee Foster: "I have hopes that this letter will reach the spot, making sure that you answer it, even if you do have a girl back home. And I think my picture will make a nice decoration on your wall."

NATIONAL FORESTS PRODUCING LUMBER

Over a Million Idle Acres in United States Now Reap Timber Crops

I.N.S.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Over a million idle acres of America's vast national forests are now producing timber and other forest crops, according to the United States Forest Service which surveyed the results of tree planting in 30 states.

Plantings during 1940 of 146,942 acres brought to a total of 1,048,892 acres the national forest land reforested or converted into timberland within the last few years.

Most of the work of planting was done by the Civilian Conservation Corps under Forest Service guidance.

In light of huge demands for lumber in many defense industries, especially housing and aircraft, this reforestation program is of vital importance to national security, Forest Service officials pointed out.

Vast Housing Demand

Department officials also indicate that in the housing industry alone more than 650,000,000 board feet of lumber will be required for warehouses, airfields and supply depots. Reforesting areas with spruce will be a boon to the aircraft industry in view of increased uses of this wood in airplane manufacture, they said.

About 3,000,000 acres of national forest lands still need replanting so that damage from fires and past neglect of land can be corrected, the survey pointed out.

Over 74,000,000 acres of privately owned forest lands, an area equal to the size of Italy, present a much larger reforestation problem, according to the Forest Service.

Officials computed the five-year average costs of the reforestation program in the national forests and included charges for labor, materials used in growing the trees in nurseries, ground preparation where necessary, and planting of an average of 855 trees per acre. The cost amounted to $11.50 per acre, including a few cents per acre for essential fire protection. Thus, the department illustrated, in 50 or 60 years the Government will obtain good net returns from planting on areas where commercial timber is being grown.

Cooperative Deposit Plan

The Forest service also reported that a plan called the "cooperative deposit plan" has become very useful in reforestation. This method used particularly in the north Pacific region of Oregon and Washington manages most practicably in those areas where clear cutting slash burning, and replanting are used.

With the sale of decadent and overmature timber the Forest Service requires the operator to deposit a certain sum of money in a cooperative fund which will be used for replanting.

The north central national forests, according to the Forest Service was the largest area planted during 1940. Second ranking went to the southern region national forests. The largest single forest planted was the Manistee National Forest, located in Michigan,

He went on to point out that Czechs residing in Britain were forced by this latest British measure into most servere conflict with the Reich under whose protection the Czech State had placed itself.

ARGENTINA DISSATISFIED WITH AMERICAN TRADE

After 20 Years of Trading Country Has Adverse Balance of 3,000,000,000 Pesos

Transocean

BUENOS AIRES, June 18.—Argentina is not willing to neglect its former markets in Europe after this war, Argentine Minister of Finance Dr Carlos Alberto Acevedo declared at a luncheon given by the United States Chamber of Commerce at Buenos Aires yesterday.

The Finance Minister expressed dissatisfaction over the adverse trade balance Argentina has with the United States, which is not buying sufficient of the country's agricultural products. The resu't is that after 20 years of trading Argentina has an adverse balance of 3,000,000,000 pesos.

More active participation of the United States in solving the problem of the trade relations between the two countries is necessary. The commercial difficulties of the Argentine will be alleviated only when it regains its European markets or when the United States buys more of its products, the finance minister concluded.

ROBINSON PREDICTED AS FUTURE CHAMPION

He's 1941 Edition of Kid Chocolate—Has About 20 Pro Fights With No Loss

I.N.S.

NEW YORK, June 18.—The next lightweight champion of the world is going to be a skinny colored kid named Ray Robinson, from New York's Harlem district, and he should make it before Santa Claus starts trucking to town.

There are no guarantees given with the above for we stopped giving those gold-edged certificates because of the strange things that happen to fights in New York like bum decisions, injuries and other unforseen items. But if everything runs strictly on the level we don't see how this 1941 edition of Kid Chocolate can miss.

Montgomery Aims at Welters

There's another little colored fellow around the East named Bob Montgomery who gave Lightweight Champion Lew Jenkins plenty of leather hell not so long ago, but he's a heavier set lad and probably will concentrate on welterweights and their champion, Fritzie Zivic, in the future.

Robinson is a picture fighter. He has legs and arms like broom-sticks but punches like an electric trip-hammer with either hand. He's fast as a streak of light and he can dance and box and take it. There was some doubt about the latter until he hit the deck a few times recently and climbed up to belt his opponent out.

Robinson Only a Kid

He's only a kid and has been fighting professionally less than a year. He started in the Golden Gloves three years ago against his wishes. Ray didn't want to be a fighter but was brought over to the Salem-Crescent Club, cradle of New York's Negro amateur stars and introduced to the coach, one George Gainesford.

Gainesford watched him work and told him to forget about a ring career. "Too skinny" was the verdict. "Come back in another year," said George.

He Fulfills Promise

That was all right with Ray. He had fulfilled his promiss to friends by giving the boxing game a whirl . . . now he was free to tap dance and dance, the main things he liked to do for recreation.

Gainesford didn't forget the boy. He had seen something, and a year later he went and found Ray and took him around to different clubs in town showing him the important things a boxer must learn. This schooling by observation went on for four months, then Robinson went into the gym and started to work.

He became the sensation of amateur circles winning 80 odd fights, some 76 of them by knockouts. He never was beaten. He toured the East and Canada getting valuable experience in different bootleg amateur bouts and then swept to successive titles in the Golden Gloves of 1939 and '40.

Ray Is Undefeated

Robinson has fought about 20 bouts since turning pro and has not beaten. He's scored more than a dozen kayos and recently stiffened the popular Timmy Tygh of Philadelphia twice, the second time in one round. He asked for a chance at Jenkins three months ago but was turned down by promotor Mike Jacobs who felt Ray was not yet a sufficient "box-office" draw.

The kayos are piling up, however. Ray has learned very fast in pro ranks and you can bet—if he fights Lew or whoever is champion this fall or winter—you'll see a new title holder.

Ogura Is Financial, Industrial Veteran

national defense industries." He goes on to point out the difficulties of the fixing of prices in relation to the cost of production and says: "In regard to this question I express my sincere hope that the moral standard of the industrialists will be elevated."

Mr. Ogura knows the psychology of businessmen perfectly. He knows that output increase can never be accomplished by unreasonable methods. He knows perfectly well that the only way to increase the industrial output of the nation is to stimulate the financial leaders to willingly take an active part in the program. He also is perfectly aware of the fact that if one mistake should occur when raising the commodity prices, it would be the cause of an irretrievable inflation, which would put the financial world into a panic. Consequently, he is taking a careful middle path as not to bring about any inconsistencies or be too onesided in any policy he may take, and in this way realize a revision in controlled economy.

As an individual Mr. Ogura is a mild gentleman, who reminds one of a philosopher, and at the same time gives one the feeling, when talking to him, of a spring breeze softly blowing on your cheeks. He is well read in the Chinese classics, he is also gifted in composing Chinese poetry and he has a cultivated taste in everything. I have mingled a great deal with prominent businessmen in the Kansai, but I have never once heard anyone speak ill of Mr. Ogura.

The great mission and responsibility which Mr. Ogura has shouldered in establishing a new order in East Asia is similar to that of the late Dr. Schacht. What will Mr. Ogura, who is the Dr. Schacht of Japan, accomplish and leave behind in the history of Japan's wartime economic structure? The combination of Mr. Ogura, and Admiral Toyoda, newly appointed Minister of Commerce and Industry, and also Lieutenant General Teiichi Suzuki, new president of the Cabinet Planning Board, will render distinguished service in the establishment of a high defense State. Mr. Ogura, who is already an aged man, has rendered great service to the financial and industrial world of Japan, and I feel sure that he is satisfied to be given the opportunity to forget himself and serve his country anew. I sincerely pray for his health and success in carrying out the great responsibility he has shouldered.

The Green Meadows of Ukraine

Ukraine is the storehouse of Southern Russia. Its green meadows are already ripening to be harvested in July. How symbolic of it is the extended arm of the statue of one of its men who rose up from the soil, Kaganovich, which seems to say: Here we are overlooking the broad plains of rich Ukraine.

AUTO RACING SIRED AMERICAN AVIATION

Allison Engineering Company Noted for Its Liquid-Cooled Engine Started as Garage

I.N.S.

INDIANAPOLIS, India, June 18.—If American aviation in the days to come is responsible for stamping out war credit automobile racing with an assist.

Auto racing actually sired what is today one of the most vital cogs in the defense program—the Allison Engineering Company, of Indianapolis, which is building motors for the Army's speediest airplanes.

The huge plant, now comprising an area of about seven city blocks and employing approximately 20,000 persons, grew out of a little brick garage built to provide elbow room for a handful of race car mechanics and engineers.

Story Goes Back to 1905

The story goes back to 1905 when Indianapolis was a hot-bed for dirt track racing and the old "Nationals," manufactured by Arthur Newby, were in their prime. Prominent in the story are such names as James A. Allison, Carl Fisher, Norman H. Gilson and Newby.

Auto racing fascinated Fisher, a natural-born promoter, who was associated with Allison in the Prest-O-Lite Company. He induced Newby to send two Nationals out in a 24-hour test to smash all existing automobile speed records held by the Renault, a French made car.

Young Engineer Selected

Newby named Norman Gilman, a young engineer, as his racing manager, and the Nationals broke all existing records, but Fisher was not satisfied. He prevailed upon Allison, Newby and Frank H. Wheeler, a carburetor manufacturer, to join with him in building what is now the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, scene of the annual 500-mile race.

The first race was held in 1911. Lured by the rich prizes, foreign drivers came to Indianapolis to compete. But in 1915 the war put an end to foreign competition. Subsequently Fisher decided to import several French Peugots, but these were not enough and Speedway chieftains began making copies which were called "Premier."

Small Structure Built

Allison erected a small one-story brick structure which he called the Allison Experimental Company to take care of the Premier-Peugot crowd and the mechanics moved in in 1916. And thus was born what later was to become the Allison plant of today.

Gilman was hired as engineer and superintendent of the original plant with the idea of turning out Premiers for racing. When the United States entered the first World War, however, the Allison plant went into general machinist work and helped indirectly on the old Liberty airplane motors.

Government Orders Obtained

After the war orders began to come in from the Government to rebuild hundreds of Liberty engines and it was in 1920 that the plant became the Allison Engineering Company. It was Gilman's contention that plant should be devoted henceforth exclusively to airplane motors and he got a chance to institute this policy when General Motors Corporation bought the plant after Allison's death in 1928 and made Gilman president.

Gilman set his engineers to devolping a liquid-cooled airplane engine. The Allison motor was designed and now is being produced in mass quantities for both the Army and Navy. The Army interceptor plane which recently traveled almost 500 miles an hour in a test in California was powered by Allison engines.

New Comet Discovered In Lyra Constellation By Student of Italy

Transocean

ROME, June 19.—A new comet has been discovered by an Italian student of Como, Il Messaggero reported today. He discovered the new comet, which is of undeterminen magnitude, in the sign of the Scorpion. The observatory at Bologna was able to confirm his discovery and make out the comet in the constellation of Lyra. Two photographs were secured of the comet. It has a tail of enormous dimensions and is rushing with tremendous speed toward the northern sky.

CAPITALISTS SCORED BY BRITISH ENGINEER

Denounces Greedy Profiteers And Government for Leaving Troops in Lurch

Transocean

STOCKHOLM, June 22.—Serious accusations were made by the President of the Society of British Engineers at its annual conference at Llandudno against the Government's policy and the profiteering greed of big industrialists in Britain. According to the Times, the President declared:

"Crete was not the first time that British industry left our soldiers in the lurch. Those persons who believed that patriotism was just another word for profit are responsible for all this. The Government is still imbued with old ideas and allows a few people to live at the expense of the rest. The worst thing is that the Government is a National Government only in name. However, in its way of thinking it has remained as before the active political executive of British industrial magnates.

"As yet workmen have not been given the right due to them in war-time. The big capitalists and with them the British Government are responsible for the circumstances that the British armament industries are badly managed and that their production is dropping.

"The retreat from Crete is more than a military blunder. One of the roots of this defeat must be sought in the ranks of British industrial magnates."

This indictment of the British system of Government and the fact that numerous British Trade Union Delegates from the Labor Party have gone over to the Communist People's Convention has caused the greatest discomfort in British Government circles, it was reported from London.

INFORMATION BODY ISSUES NOVEL MONTHLY JOURNAL

Will Be Pasted at Conspicuous Spots Throughout Country—Many Readers Expected

A monthly newspaper to be pasted on walls and shop windows has just been issued by the Board of Information which yesterday sent out 60,000 copies dated July 1, to government offices, railway stations, schools, hotels, factories, department stores and neighborhood units all over the country.

The paper has the width of four pages of the common dailies carrying news stories and pictures printed in two colors. As expected by the Board, a copy of the paper put up at a suitable spot will be read by at least 20 person a day, or 8,400,000 men and women in a week throughout the country.

The present number contains two main stories, the one by Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye under the title "Now for Our Resolution," accompanied by a picture of a scene in an arms factory representing a party of workers engaged in the manufacture of shells, and the other the synopses of world's events during the four years since the outbreak of the current China Affair. All events are explained in brief easy language with a map attached so that the reader will be able to point to the country where a particular event occurred.

SPORTS FOLLOWERS HAIL DRAKE MENTOR

Big Bill Easton, New Track Coach, Acclaimed for Producing Goods in Cinder Meet

I.N.S.

DES MOINES, Iowa, June 18.—Big Bill Easton, genial Hoosier track wizard, today has mounted the top rung of sports popularity in the few months he has had charge of Drake University's runners and muscle men.

Easton, who succeeded Pitch Johnson as track and field coach and direction of the Drake relays last year when the latter went to Stanford University as track mentor, has been acclaimed a double-barreled success. The 1941 relays, the first of the Des Moines track classics the new director ever attended, saw eight records smashed and attendance near the all-time high.

But even more satisfactory to track-mad Drake, Easton put a record-shattering two-mile relay quartet into competition.

The 1941 Drake two-mile relay team of Harold Albee, Forrest Jameison, Bob Barsalou and Lowell Baal was the first Bulldog quartet since the first year of the relays, 1910, to establish a record at their own meet. With the exception of the half mile team of 1912 and the distance medley team of 1937, this 1941 relay squad is the only Drake team to come in first in any of the university section team events since the first meet.

Easton came to Drake from Hammond, Indiana, high school, where his teams had made something of a name for themselves in Hoosier prep circles.

He figured the biggest factor in making the Drake relays an even greater success would be the production of at least one Drake relay team that would win and otherwise be a credit to Des Moines and Iowa.

He decided to concentrate on the two-mile relay. By the time the outdoor season started, the Drake runners were ready to start their record breaking which reached a climax when they raced the two miles in 7:41.8 at the Drake meet. Previously, they had set a new standard of 7:47.6 at the Texas relays and a mark of 7:58 at the Kansas relays.

Confident that Bulldog winner will draw more winning athletes to Drake, Easton is mapping out a more ambitious program for his runners in the next few years. He has entered his runners in a quadrangle meet with Army, Dartmouth and Columbia in 1943 and in a track meet in Hawaii the following year.

PHONE OPERATOR HONORED FOR LONG-TIME SERVICES

Worked for Bureau 45 Years—Says Customers Were Polite In Olden Days

Miss Suma Kori, superintendent of the Kyoto Central Telephone Bureau, who has served 45 years as a telephone operator, was decorated with the seventh rank of the higher civil service by the Government upon retiring from service due to old age.

Miss Kori, at present 61 years of age, first served as an operator at the Kyoto Telephone Bureau when only 18 years old, receiving 15 sen a day. She has been active as a telephone operator during her 45 years of service and was recently appointed as a superintendent of young telephone operators.

Remaining single during the long years, Miss Kori described her past experiences at her home at Kyoto in an interview with the Asahi as follows:

"When I entered in the service of the Kyoto Telephone Bureau in 1898, there were only 300 persons having telephones in the city. There were only some 10 telephone operators then. Long distance calls were effective to Osaka and Kobe at that time. When I tested the telephone every morning by calling up a person saying, 'This is a test call. Can you hear me?' the receiver always replied, 'Thank you. I can hear you very clearly.' Users of telephones became rude in conversation from the end of Meiji period."

WHEN IS TIP NOT TIP?

New Judgment Handed Down by Los Angeles Court

I.N.S.

LOS ANGELES, June 5.—When is a tip not a tip?

When it is given to a car hop, those pretty uniformed waitresses at drive-in eating stands.

For then the tip becomes a part of her wages.

So declared a ruling written in the record of Superior Judge Charles D. Ballard's court which declared that tips can be considered wages for the girls and that employers, while they must guarantee that the car hops make at least $16 a week, need not pay the girls anything if their tips exceed that amount.

Yokosuka

A recent issue of the Taiheiyo (Pacific), a vernacular monthly published in the interests of the Pacific countries, carries an interesting article on Yokosuka by Mr. Kenzo Harima. The article, covering the history of the naval port town from its pre-Meiji days, throws an interesting sidelight on the industrial development of the country.

The Yokosuka Dockyard adopted its present name in 1871, its official title previously being the Yokosuka Iron Works (Seitetsu Sho). Its origin is traced back to the year 1864 or four years earlier than the restoration of Imperial rule and to the action of Tadamasa Oguri, Minister of Foreign Affairs and Finance of the Tokugawa Shogunate. It is a matter of historical fact that he proposed the ambitious plan of establishing at Yokosuka a shipbuilding yard adequate to produce craft equal to those foreign craft which were haunting Japanese waters around these times, and an outlay of a million gold pieces was made from the depleted coffers of the Shogunate for that object.

The enterprise proved rather startling to all those who knew the financial condition of the Shogunate. But Oguri who had been one of the Hemmi mission sent to America in 1859 was keenly alive to the need of defense. He believed that the Shogunate, honeycombed with intrigues and internal strife, would never be capable of any permanent plan unless there were some driving force like himself.

His plan, despite opposition, was carried through. But the Shogunate, lacking technical talent, left the whole matter of planning and building the yard in the hands of Leon Roches, the French Minister. Of the close relationship that had been developed between the Shogunate and France enough has been written. A French engineer who had been in charge of the construction of a gunboat at Shanghai was employed through the recommendation of the French Minister, and in 1865 he arrived at Yedo. Consultations between the French Minister and engineer and leading members of the Shogunate resulted in the formulation of a definite plan for a shipyard. Orders for construction material and equipment were forthwith placed with French manufacturers.

According to this plan, the site for the plant was to be provided by cutting open the hillsides at Yokosuka and reclaiming part of the neighboring waters. The entire ground was to be prepared at the capital outlay of $2.4 million over a period of four years. That the whole planning was done under the direction of the French engineer is not to be doubted. The proposed plant was to consist of a shipbuilding yard and also a yard for repairing steamships and giving technical instruction to Japanese laborers. Another plant was to be erected at Yokohama for iron moulding and tempering, model making, with machine shops, and the manufacture of anchors and boilers, and other accessories. All these sections were placed under the direction of French engineers who arrived in 1866. The Shogunate supplied 200 convicts to work on the undertaking.

Although no account is given of the wages paid for these workmen, records are left of what was paid to the French employes. The chief engineer received a yearly salary of $10,000. The pay for the subordinate officers and engineers ranged from $5,000 a year to $150 a month. The French workmen brought from Toulon, Brest and other shipyards in France were each paid from $60 to $75 a month. The officials and laborers from France are given at 11 and 26 respectively in number.

Some account of interest in the same connection is found in "Naval History" by Rintaro Katsu, who was largely responsible for the development of the navy under Shogunate regime, if it was worthy of the name at all. The plan for the Yokosuka yard, according to the same source, was on the lines of a reduction of the French naval yard at Toulon to the scale of two-thirds of the original. The budget decided on by the Shogunate amounted to Francs 2.2 million which was itemized as follows:

Boilers and machine tools	F. 600,000
Boiler accessories	200,000
Civil engineering machinery	400,000
Steam cranes	100,000
Industrial metals	300,000
Transport cost	100,000

Although the items as given in the budget are not clear, because of changes in technical terms adopted by the Japanese since then, they are at least sufficient to indicate the scale and character of the enterprise launched at Yokosuka some 80 years ago. The outlay of Francs 2.2 million was at the time equivalent to approximately Mexican $370,000.

The Shogunate plan reads in part as follow: "The tools, machines and materials of European style to be used at the yard, because unprocurable in the country, should previously be specified by the chief engineer and ordered through foreign merchants at Yokohama. These purchases would be placed in storehouses under the charge of Japanese officials. The French employes, whenever in need of them, should be supplied therewith in exchange for warrants. . . . With regard to the repairs of shipping or the manufacture of any article, in all cases instructions should be sought from the chief engineer."

The first vessel built at the new yard was a 30-horsepower steamer which was christened the Yokosuka Maru after her birthplace. In October, 1866, the second ship, of 10 horse-power, was built with materials manufactured at the Yokohama Iron Works. The completion of these boats was formally reported the same year to the French Navy Minister. But the difficulties experienced in the new undertaking were evidently disheartening at times. For the official record of the same year says: "The Japanese workmen who have familiarized themselves with European technique continually leave the yard where only unskilled laborers are left to work, with the result that work is retarded. If things are to go on like this, even when the shipyard is completed, from what parts of the country are we to secure labor familiar with Western engineering work?"

That the situation turned out better than anticipated was shown by the outcome. Patience and perseverance overcame difficulties. From the modest beginning extended the works to which the country now turns with pardonable pride. But although many know that Japan learned the art of cotton spinning at Lancaster, very few know that she owes her shipbuilding industry to France.

Through Sense of Sight

The sense of direction of birds of passage has long been known and tested, but how this sense is caused is still a matter of conjecture. According to recent experiments made by the well-known German naturalist, Dr. Oscar Heinroth and his wife Dr. Kaethe Heinroth, carrier pigeons trained to deliver messages find their way through their sense of sight. For example, when a number of young pigeons were taken to different places about 15 miles distant from the dove-cote, they all flew home within the space of a few hours. When the experiment was repeated with the same birds, it was noticed that they found their way back in a few minutes.

It was further observed that all of these pigeons first spent some time in flying in circles around the point from which they started, and then when there was still daylight, were able to choose the right direction with unerring accuracy. On the other hand, at night or in foggy weather the birds were not able to find their way back home, and usually ended up in a strange dove-cote. When similar tests were made with young pigeons in which they were required to fly home over a distance of about 25 miles, only about half of them came back, and when the same experiment was tried at 40 miles, not a single one of the young birds was able to find its way home, and was never seen again.

New Ice Grottoes Discovered

Three Salzburg geologists have recently discovered a number of large caves and grottoes formed during the Ice Age in Unters-Berg, a mountain with an altitude of 1,975 meters in the vicinity of the well-known German health resort of Berchtesgaden. In these grottoes are fine examples of stalactites and stalagmites, some of them more than 12 feet long.

NEWSPAPER INDUSTRY IN JAPAN READY TO FORM NEW STRUCTURE

Every Effort Given for Bringing Commercialism Into Harmony in Line with National Policy

By HIDEO ISA
The Japan Critics' Association

Condensed from the Nippon Hyoron, June issue, 1941, and translated by Contemporary Opinions

The crying need for the construction of a high power defense state is demanding the enforcement of totalitarian control in every branch of industry to the exclusion of liberalistic profit motive. The outcry echoed and re-echoed throughout the nation for a new national structure is for the purpose of bolstering up totalitarianism in lieu of liberalism. The newspaper industry is no exception.

The press has not yet completely liquidated its profit motive, but it is no longer possible for the press to be run solely in pursuit of profits, partly because the State has exerted unremitting efforts to turn out newspapers in strict conformity with the country's war aims, but because the newspaper owners, fully realizing the seriousness of the prevailing situation, have volunteered to get out their papers in tune with the national tendency.

Inasmuch as the newspaper industry is still essentially based upon capitalism, the profit incentive cannot be entirely disregarded even though the publishers or the proprietors may be imbued with high aspirations. Hence the dire necessity for bringing commercialism into harmony with national policy, and the owners of newspapers in the past few years have over-taxed their brains for the attainment of this end. However, this problem can no longer be solved by individual efforts of newspaper owners, how hard they might try. It must be threshed out under a completely new formula, and the entire newspaper world realizes this.

What is the new formula then? Reconciliation of commercialism of newspapers with national policy by collective force of the entire newspaper proprietors or publishers with the support of the Government is the new formula. With the recent formation of the Newspaper Alliance, an autonomous control organization of the entire press in this country, this reconciliation is now on the eve of realization.

Fruit of Labor

The Newspaper Alliance was not formed overnight but is the fruit of hard labor of all concerned since about the year before last. However, the Newspaper Alliance is still in an embryonic stage with its inaugural meeting still to be held and its officers remaining to be formally appointed. But, in view of the fact that the draft Articles of Alliance have now been approved by the Inaugural Committee and that the prospective officers can be named with a certain measure of accuracy, a safe arrival of the Newspaper Alliance can now be predicted with certainty.

The simplest way to know the aims of the Alliance would be to have a glance at the Articles of Alliance. Article 2 of the general provisions says, "The Alliance, as an autonomous control organization of the newspaper industry, aims at the achievement of its national mission through the development of the industry." For practical purposes Article 3 provides; (1) The Alliance shall make suggestions or recommendations to the Government in connection with control of the press; (2) The Alliance shall make investigations relative to improvement and development of editing and management of newspapers; (3) The Alliance shall furnish capital and assistance for the development of the newspaper industry; (4) The Alliance shall also undertake the training and education of newspapermen; and (5) The Alliance shall regulate the supply and allot quotas of printing paper and other necessary materials.

The projected autonomous control of the newspaper industry is based upon national policy, and for this reason Article 15 provides "Counsellors and directors of the Alliance shall be recommended by the Premier", by virtue of which clause the Government has retained the right of voice in the Alliance. Thus excluding the possibility of the Alliance deviating into liberalism or commercialism.

Now Article 10 of the Articles of Alliance dealing with the staff officers of the organization provides for 1 chairman of the Board of Directors, 12 directors, a certain number of counsellors, 2 auditors and 50 councillors. The most likely members of the staff officers, according to reports so far available, consist of Inosuke Furuno, president of the Domei News Agency, as Chairman of the Board of Directors, Shigeharu Matsumoto, Managing Editor of the Domei News Agency, Taketora Ogata, editor-in-chief of the Asahi, Shingoro Takaishi, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Tokyo Nichi Nichi, Matsutaro Shoriki, president of the Yomiuri, Tokichi Tanaka, president of the Chugai Shogyo, Bunkichi Miki, president of the Hochi, all metropolitan papers, and Shingo Nagaye, president of the Fukuoka Nichi Nichi, Yoshio Abe, president of the Hokkai Times, Ichiro Oshima, president of the Shin Aichi, Ippei Mori, president of the Nagoya Shimpo, and Jiro Ichiriki, president of the Kahoku Shimpo.

Superior Position

Particular attention should be paid to Article 18 which reads "The Domei News Agency shall furnish one director and a councilor," by dint of which clause the News Agency is placed in a superior position to all the newspapers, for if these officers should be actually appointed, Domei will have a councillor in addition to the Chairman of the Board of Directors and will thus retain a strong voice in the Alliance, especially so as such influential chain newspapers as the Asahi and the Nichi Nichi are permitted to send only one managing officer.

In any case, it is epochal in the annals of the newspaper industry in Japan that all the journals throughout the country should thus unite themselves into one organization for the explicit purpose of effecting control over the press and regulation of the supply of newsprint and other materials. The newspapers in this country are, therefore, destined to undergo marked changes both in appearance and content. How the journals are going to change can be judged by the way they have already changed in the past four years since the outbreak of the Sino-Japanese conflict, and it appears as though the birth of the Newspaper Alliance has very little to do with this aspect.

As everybody knows, the newspapers have abolished the issuance of the evening editions on Sundays and national holidays, reduced the number of pages and advertising space. Moreover, the contents have now become a national policy type, and the newsmen are also recasting themselves into the nationalist mould, and it is to be taken for granted that this tendency will be further strengthened in future.

The newspapers are now faced with a scarcity of paper, and it is really this problem that is demanding a new setup in press circles rather than the necessity of regimenting the press for keeping in line with the national policy. Restrictions on the consumption of newsprint were issued four times during the past three years, and it is now reliably reported that the Government is going to regulate the consumption of newsprint again next June.

Paper Shortage

Chief among the causes of paper shortage may be noted the stoppage of importation of foreign paper, curtailment in the production of home-made paper due to shortage of labor and raw materials, and great increase in consumption. The restrictions so far made on the consumption of newsprint have been the result of entanglements of these varied causes, but it is noteworthy that shortage of transportation facilities is now constituting a new cause of further regulation of the supply of printing paper. As is well known, the manufacture of newsprint is at present almost monopolized by the Oji Paper Manufacturing Company.

Most of the company's paper mills are situated in Hokkaido owing to the raw materials being available on the spot, and their manufactures in the past were transported by sea to the mainland, but this has now been changed to overland transportation, resulting in a decrease of transportation capacity. At any rate, further regulation of the consumption of newsprint is of an urgent necessity, and the Newspaper Alliance about to be hatched will have to tackle this problem, together with the individual efforts of the publishers. But there cannot be any marvellous way of coping with the situation, and at best there is no other way but to put into practice what have already been discussed in the past, namely: (1) an eight-page daily, including the evening edition; (2) reduction or abolition of the provincial editions; (3) establishment of a monthly press holiday; and (4) reduction of the advertising space.

The eight-page daily system, including the evening edition, is already being adopted by the Yomiuri thrice a week, while the Asahi and the Nichi Nichi and other papers are now following the example on Mondays. The probabilities are that this system will generally be adopted throughout the week.

The provincial editions were originally published for the purpose of increasing subscribers, but now that leading journals are attempting to increase their subscribers due to the necessity of saving newsprint, the provincial editions have more or less become a white elephant. But their outright abolition is liable to produce a large number of unemployment among reporters and linotypists, and for this reason the publishers are likely to go about this problem gradually.

Weekly Press Holiday

The question of a monthly press holiday has long been discussed, but this has not been adopted so far owing to varied circumstances of each newspaper. In this connection it would be more feasible and advantageous to enforce a weekly press holiday, say every Monday, than a monthly press holiday. In fact, the writer is in favor of a 10-or 12-page daily, instead of the eight-page system and of designating Monday as the weekly press holiday.

The Yomiuri took the lead in reducing the advertising space, and it is now followed by the Asahi and Nichi Nichi. It is the duty of the press to attach more importance to money-eating news than to money-making advertisements, but as we say, "too much is no better than too little," and it will do no good to badger advertisements too much, for in many cases advertisements are worth reading too.

Locomotives for Agriculture

Small locomotives can be used for many purposes in agriculture, where they save time and labor. It is of course necessary that they be well-adapted to the special requirements of their hard use. At the Vienna Spring Fair, a small locomotive was shown that has already proved itself in a different serial construction, but which has now been fully adapted to the requirements of agricultural use. Impulsion is by means of a 5 HP Diesel or 8 HP Otto motor, wherewith on a level track a tractive load of around 10 tons gross weight can be drawn. The chain, heretofore exposed, now runs entirely covered in an oil bath, and instead of the former one brake, there is now a brake on the secondary shaft and a foot brake, wherewith a considerable greater running security can be reached on hilly land with heavy loads. A special division of the weight makes it possible for one man to shift the locomotive without a turntable to a side track.

Food Injection Improved

A method of supplying predigested food by injection into the veins or under the skin has been developed by Nobel prize winner Dr. G. H. Whipple and his associates at the University of Rochester (N.Y.) School of Medicine. By this method casein, one of the solid constitutents of milk and chemically a protein, is treated with an enzyme, papain, which splits the casein into simpler constituents so that it resembles the protein materials normally occurring in the blood plasma. These materials can be dried to a golden-yellow granular material rich in nitrogen. It is easily soluable in water and can be sterilized by filtration.

The casein digest has been used on experimental animals with success, the animals maintaining their nitrogen balance and gaining weight. The fats and carbohydrates of their diet were given by mouth and the protein requirements were supplied by the predigested casein injected directly into the vein or under the skin.

After the casein digest entered the blood stream it was operated on by the body processes in the same way food taken into the stomach is digested, and was changed into new normal blood-plasma protein just as effectively as if the protein material were eaten.

A method of supplying proteins other than by mouth has been desired for a long time because persons seriously ill and requiring proteins frequently are unable to tolerate them in their diet. Ordinary blood plasma has been administered in cases of shock but it has never been considered as a nutrient substance because the supply is too limited.—N.Y. Herald Tribune.

Improved Method of Zinc Plating

The use of burnished zinc as a plating for iron and other metals in place of nickel and chrome plating has proved a great success. It has been demonstrated that these zinc precipitates are an excellent protection against rust, and in this respect are quite as good as those of cadmium. The plating process of immersion is rapid as it is accelerated by comparatively highly condensed electric current. This fact accounts to a great extent for the practical economic value of the process. The burnished and shiny precipitate is a great improvement over the former well known grey zinc finish.

ST. JOSEPH'S NINE BEATS Y.C.A.C. TEAM

Collegians Win 4 to 0 in Return Game at Bay City Club Grounds

The St. Joseph's College baseball team defeated the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club's nine by 4 to 0 in a return game at the club grounds on Sunday afternoon.

As was the case in the previous encounter, the students' alumni battery of A. Brown and W. Jones was the major factor in their victory. Brown held the home squad to two hits, and only on one occasion did the club players come really close to scoring. The S.J.C. battery also did some timely hitting, being responsible for half the total of runs.

Pete Kipp, the club hurler, was touched for nine hits, but kept them fairly well scattered. Poor support by the infield gave the students two of their four runs.

First Run Made

St. Joseph's made their first run in the second inning. Jones, first man up, drove out a three-bagger and scored as Ed Eymard grounded out.

In the fifth the students added two more points to their total. J. Ravetta was safe at first on an error. Brown singled, Ravetta going all the way to third. After Brown had stolen second Y. Kiyono also singled to bring in Ravetta and send Brown to third. The next batter flied out to left and then J. Gomes made a hit, on which Brown crossed the plate.

Last Counter Scored

St. Joseph's got their last counter in the eighth on one hit and two errors. Eymard reached first on an infield miscue. A hit by Hans Wolschke resulted in Eymard being perched on third. The next batsman went down swinging and when Ravetta grounded out to second Eymard completed the circuit.

Besides limiting the Y.C. and A.C. attack to only two hits Brown struck out 11. Kipp also had 11 strikeouts to his credit, and one of the highlights of the game was when he struck out all three men who faced him in the fifth frame.

Two of the students gained batting honors, Wolschke getting two hits out of four and Kiyono obtaining the same number in five trips to the plate.

The two Rays, Devin and Lewis, each got one of the club's two hits, both of which came in the second stanza. Devin singled, stole second and went to third on Lewis's safety. After the next player struck out the Y.C. and A.C. tried a squeeze play. As the pitcher started his motion Devin streaked for home, but the batter's attempt for a bunt popped up to the catcher, resulting in a double play.

of Europe, he is supposed by some hare-brained people to be a champion of "Liberalism," "Pacifism" with a strong taint of "Anglo-Saxonism," whatever that may mean. The Count was once told such was a public view of him, and he laughed outright without contradicting or assenting and then said, "So it would seem." But if there is in Japan an honorable tradition of progressive, liberal statesmanship which may be said to have been started by Iwakura and developed to a wonderful efflorescence by Okubo and Ito, and faithfully maintained by the late Prince Saionji—the tradition of enlightened patriots who saw in affairs of State a field of service rather than of opportunity—Count Makino may be said to be no unworthy inheritor of such a tradition. If he has missed the highest meed of official career—Premiership—he did not lack so much the qualification for it as the political instinct to fight tooth and nail for power. Besides, he lacked a following of ambitious politicians at a time when such deficiency was almost fatal to political aspirants.

No lover of claptrap, no player to the gallery, the Count is apt to be ununderstood, if not positively misunderstood, by the general public which always can best appreciate those who are constantly in the public view. Even at the height of his flowering Count Makino was not "a man of the hour." The nature of his position—so near the throne—combined with his own "retiring disposition" made him eschew the spotlight. But he is a political permanency, so to speak, who is always before the public in some form or capacity. For more than 50 years he had been consistently in the confidence of the Genro—first, Ito, then Saionji—and one of the closest and most trusted servants of the Throne, be he in office or out of it, and as such, if he is not an active force in the political situation, he is always an influence like the veteran inkyo in the old house who, by merely consenting to live, sheds a benign effect on everyone around which one may feel but not clearly define.

BALL PITCHERS LIKE WIDE PLAYING FIELD

Large Pasture Means More Sure Outs but Batters Grumble It Cuts Their Average

U.N.S.

CLEVELAND, June 20.—The Cleveland Indians today have scheduled only 28 games in the municipal stadium for the coming baseball season.

This probably will meet with the approval of all league pitchers who can throw their nothing ball and rest assured that their outfielders, roaming the expansive prairie lands of the outfield, will easily turn home-run balls into sure-fire outs.

As for the Indian batsmen, those 28 games are 28 games too many. They prefer good old League Park with its inviting right field fence. In fact, they still feel that one of the reasons for their collapse late last year as a strong hitting team was due to the shift to the Stadium and the subsequent change in batting stance which Tribe batters underwent.

Hal Trosky, Indian first baseman, and Ken Keltner, Tribe third sacker, strongly believe that performances in the expansive confines of the Stadium were reflected in their batting averages.

After years of playing in League Park, Trosky had developed a pull toward right field. With the shift to the Stadium for many games, he was forced to alter his style so he could poke the ball into left field. "Consequently, I was off stride all the time," he declared.

Keltner found himself in the same predicament. When he first joined the Tribe wigwam, Keltner was able to pull his blows toward right field with deadly accuracy. In doing so, however, he lost much of his natural pull toward left field, which is customary for a right-hand hitter. Alternating between League Park and the Stadium threw him off his stride, he said.

A direct line from home plate to the left and right field bleachers at the Stadium is 320 feet. At League Park the distance varies. Left field is 374 feet and for the ball to land safely in the stands it must also clear a wire fence. Right field is only 295 feet from home at League Park. But unlike the Stadium, League Park has a fence along right field extending 290 feet to the score board from the foul line and rising 45 feet above the ground. A ball hit against the fence is always good for a single, usually a double and often a triple.

Buses Ban 'Lindy' Ads

PHILADELPHIA, May 22—The Philadelphia transportation system announces it would not accept trolley and bus displays advertising the appearance of Charles A. Lindbergh here because it considers the subject "too controversial." David N. Philips, Advertising Director of the system, said this decision was in line with a long-established policy of the company.

HAMILTON, Bermuda.—George M. Lott, Chicago tennis star, has been appointed by the United States Navy as director of athletics for a construction company's civilian personel of 2,000. The company is building a naval operating base here and employes are Americans. Up until the appointment, Lott was the tennis professional at the Belmont Manor Hotel here.

Won by Finland

HELSINKI, Finland, May 26.—Finland was recorded the winner over Sweden yesterday in the biggest single sports contest ever held anywhere.

Available returns from a three-week-long walking match indicated that about 1,500,000 Finns, constituting about 40 per cent of the nation's population, competed and defeated about 900,000 Swedes.

ANTI-JAPANESE SPIRIT RAMPANT IN PHILIPPINES

Chinese Depend on Goods Made Here but Keep 'Hate' Torch Alight

Carrying 172 Japanese women and children evacuees aboard, the O.S.K. liner Mexico Maru early Monday morning arrived at Kobe from the Philippines. On the same morning the O.S.K. liner London Maru also carrying three Japanese evacuees aboard arrived here from India.

Describing the recent situation in the Philippines, these evacuees told the press that the authorities of the Philippines are now under a ten-year plan taking various steps for organizing a high defense system.

They said that the Chinese residents in the Philippines now number about 150,000, most of them coming from Kwangtung and Fukien Provinces. Anti-Japanese sentiment among these overseas Chinese is stil unabated, but their daily lives are entirely dependent on business dealing in commodities made in Japan, they added.

In the meantime, the Japanese evacuees from India stated that the anti-Axis sentiment in India has recently grown sharper. With various manufactured goods from Europe failing to reach India, commodity prices in India are now gradually rising.

They stated, however, that light industries are developing with necessary raw materials being imported from Australia and New Zealand and that businessmen are also wishing to buy many daily necessaries from Japan.

Escape Frustrated

SAN FRANCISCO, May 22.—Hard steel and resourceful Paul Madigan, Captain of prison guards, kept four desperate life termers from cutting their way out of Alcatraz Prison, Warden James A. Johnston said today. The four convicts, described by Mr. Johnston as "all desperate and all plotters," worked nearly two hours and trussed up three prison officers yesterday in an attempted break from the mat shop at the San Francisco Bay island penitentiary.

Instructs Parachute Packers

OTTAWA—Groups of men are training as parachute "packers" for work at flying training schools operated by civilian companies under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, Royal Canadian Air Force headquarters has disclosed. The men are trained at parachute clubs or other private groups in the art of wrapping huge folds of silk into a compact parachute pack. At the conclusion of their training, they make one jump with a parachute they have packed.

CONTESTS CANCELED BY SPREAD OF WAR

Lawn Tennis Team Recalled From Trip to Germany—Swimming, Other Meets Affected

With the spread of the European war, Japan's international sports calender for the remainder of the year has suffered numerous cancellations and it appears that international matches will be few, if any, at least with the countries in Europe.

Already the Japan Lawn Tennis Association has announced that the tennis team of Goro Fujikura and Jiro Kumamaru, who were enroute to Berlin have been advised to cancel the journey and return, after playing a series of exhibitions in Manchoukuo.

The German and Hungarian swimmers, who were scheduled to arrive in late September at the invitation of the Japan Amateur Swimming Federation, and German boxing and soccer teams, which were to accompany them on a Nippon tour, will probably be postponed. Also the dispatch of a Nippon ski team, which was scheduled for this winter has also become doubtful.

Another event of much significance, a track and swimming meet between Nippon and German youths under 18 years, proposed by the Hitler Jugend to the Dai Nippon Youth's Association, will also inevitably be canceled.

Commenting on this problem, Mr. Ogawa, executive director of the Japan Amateur Athletic Association stated;

"Since the ski team is scheduled to leave in December, we are planning to wait and watch the international situation before making the final decision."

Tahakiro Sajto, director of the Japan Swimming Federation, stated.

"Our invitation to the German and Hungarian swimmers is likely to be canceled though we've asked them to come after September, if possible. A formal invitation from the Hitler Jugend has not arrived yet but I'm afraid it won't materialize."

In still another direction, but still a cancellation, is the recent announcement of the baseball department of Meiji University, that the team's scheduled playing tour to Hawaii this summer will not take place.

Fire Losses in U.S.

NEW YORK—Estimated fire losses of $29,330,000 in the United States during April brought the total for the first four months of the year to approximately $113,373,000, W. E. Mallalieu, of the National Board of Fire Underwriters announced. The board is observing its seventy-fifth anniversary this year with a campaign for a reduction of fire losses as a national defense aid. April losses were approximately 10 per cent more than in the same month last year, Mr. Mallalieu reported.

$1,190,000 Childs Gifts

TRENTON, May 21.—The New Jersey Supreme court held tax free today gifts of $1,190,000 made by the late Mrs. Emma Childs, widow of the restaurant chain founder, to two daughters. The ruling reversed a New Jersey prerogative court decision that the gifts were made in the contemplation of death and thus taxable by the State under the law. Executors of the estate had paid an $85,831 tax on the gifts under protest.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Joe McCarthy's New York Yankees scampered back into a theoretical lead in the hectic American League pennant chase yesterday by trimming the Philadelphia Athletics, 7 to 4 while the Cleveland Indians were taking a lacing from the Chicago White Sox, 6 to 4.

The idle St. Louis Cardinals, meanwhile, improved their standing slightly when the Brooklyn Dodgers dropped a bitter battle to the Boston Braves, 3 to 2. The Cards now lead Brooklyn by a full game.

In taking the leadership of the junior loop by a bare .006 percentage point the Yanks had the double pleasure of watching their brilliant outfielder, Joe DiMaggio, run his string of hits to 40 consecutive games. The standing record is 41 games.

As a matter of fact, Joe was the spear-head of the Yankee attack, contributing a double and a single. But honors also went to Charley Keller, the fleet outfielder, who poled out a homer with a mate aboard in the seventh inning.

As things now stand, Cleveland and New York are tied up in games won or lost but two more losses by Cleveland more than offset their two additional wins when reckoned under the mysterious machinations of the percentage book.

The Indians might have extended their sojourn in top position for more than 4 hours were it not for Don Kollaway, the White Sox infielder who came to Chicago from Posen, Illinois by way of Oklahoma City.

Kolloway went on a rampage. He knocked the pill out of the park twice, made the Tribe infield dizzy by stealing four bases and scored as many runs himself as the entire Indian lineup drove across the platter all afternoon.

At Washington, the third-place Boston Red Sox were upset by the Senators, 3 to 1. While the rookie hurler, Bill Zuber, was keeping Boston's nine bingles far apart, his mates gave him all the lead he needed in the first two stanzas. Singles by Jimmy Bloodworth and George Archie in the second inning accounted mostly for the pair of Washington runs which put the game on ice.

Another underdog had a good day when the cellar-resting St. Louis Browns trimmed the Detroit Tigers, 3 to 1, before the latter's home crowd. The 1940 American League champions held a one-run lead up to the ninth innings, but the Browns managed to knot the count in the final frame and went ahead to clinch the argument with a two-run assault in the first extra inning.

While showers kept the Cards and the world-champion Reds in their homes in St. Louis, the Dodgers missed a chance to regain the National League leadership when they lost a tough one to the Braves, 3 to 2. Leading 2 to 1 up to the fifth inning, the daffy ones saw the game slip through their fingers when Max West doubled and Carvell Rewell homered for the pair of runs which gave the Beantowners the argument.

What was odd about the National League games was the fact that all the scores were 3 to 2. At Wrigley Field, Al Butcher, the Pirate hurler, paved the way for his own demise by throwing away Phil Cavaretta's sacrifice, permitting Phil and Lou Stringer to move around the base paths.

At this point, Bill Nicholson, slugging Chicago outfielder, was purposely walked, but a fly and a force-out accounted for two runs which decided the game.

The lowly Philadelphia Phillies upset the third-place New York Giants at the Polo Grounds in a 12-inning thriller. New York jumped into an early two-run lead, but the Phillies knotted the count in the eighth. In the 12th, a pass to pitcher Tommy Hughes and singles by Dan Lithwhiler and Stan Benjamin drove across the winning run.

W. T. Craigie Advances to Finals in Men's Championship By Beating H. S. G. Batter

Despite the rainy season having lived up to its name this year, competitors in the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club tennis tournament have taken advantage of the dry days during the past fortnight to decide most of the semi-finalists and some of the finalists in the eight events.

W. T. Craigie advanced to the finals in the men's championship finals by beating H. S. G. Batter in a hard fought match which was close, as the score, 7-5, 7-5 and 7-5, indicates. J. Cornu defeated J. A. Dixon by 6-2, 6-3 and 6-3 to reach the semi-finals in the lower bracket. Cornu will meet the winner of the match between A. Katz and P. Aurell to decide who will play Craigie for the club championship.

In the men's championship doubles Aurell and Batter reached the finals by beating P. H. Lord and M. L. Russell, 6-0, 6-1 and 6-0. The losers gave the winners a much harder fight than the score would indicate, and the onlookers were treated to some excellent tennis. M. Jalenques and Cornu obtained a berth in the semi-finals by defeating C. E. H. Druitt and Dixon, 6-2, 6-4 and 6-2. The Jalenques-Cornu combination will play F. R. Harriss and J. der Kinderen to decide who will play against Aurell and Batter for the doubles crown.

Miss M. Laffin and Jalenques gained a place in the mixed doubles championship finals by obtaining a walkover from Miss L. Chapman and Aurell. The former pair will play Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Fachtmann for the mixed doubles title.

In the men's "A" handicap singles Batter earned a position in the semi-final bracket by beating Harriss in a hard fought contest by 6-2, 1-6 and 6-4. Batter will now meet E. I. da Silva to decide who will be one of the finalists.

Russell reached the finals of the men's "B" handicap singles by winning a hard uphill fight against L. A. M. Frank in the semi-final by 4-6, 10-8 and 6-2. Russell will play the victor of the match between W. R. Buckberrough and G. E. Beatty to decide the winner of this event.

C. Heseltine and Harriss beat Lord and Russell, 6-1, 5-7 and 6-3 to gain a berth in the men's handicap doubles semi-final. In a match between two pairs of brothers G. R. Fachtmann and M. V. Fachtmann defeated G. da Silva and J. da Silva, 6-1, 5-7 and 7-5. As the score indicates, it was a hard fought and close contest, the da Silvas rallying in both the second and third sets to almost gain the verdict.

Miss W. Dunning and Heseltine beat Miss T. Planas and F. Rodriguez, 6-0 and 6-3 to advance to the mixed doubles handicap semi-finals, and are scheduled to play Mrs. M. L. Russell and D. Dentici for the right to enter the final bracket. Mrs. G. R. Fachtmann and M. Fachtmann also made the semi-finals in this event by taking the measure of Miss H. Lord and L. A. M. Frank, 6-3 and 6-2. The Fachtmanns will now meet Miss Laffin and Jalenques to decide who will be the finalists.

Most progress has been made in the ladies' singles handicap, both the finalists having been decided. Mrs. Russell beat Miss H. Lord, 6-2 and 6-2, while Miss Dunning won from Miss M. Stevens, 8-6 and 7-5, to gain positions in the last round.

Recently an excellent driveway from Nagano direct to Maruike and Biwaike via Yutanaka has been inaugurated. (40 km.—1 hour and a half.)

On a clear day, fair Fuji-san, the Japan Sea and Mt. Asama can be seen in the distance. All the year round, the beauty of the Shiga Plateau is well presented as an ever changing kaleidoscopic scene of rare enchantment with an awe-inspiring vista of the beautiful countryside furrowed by a number of valleys.

Besides direct motor car and bus services, there is an electric car from Nagano to Yutanaka terminal, an entrance to the plateau, about one hour. From Yutanaka to Maruike pond, close to the Hotel Shiga Heights, 1 hour by bus.

Reds Cracking Up

United Press

BERLIN, June 28.—The gigantic Red Army front was rapidly cracking up in the face of the German panzer advance and incessant blasting of Soviet rear communications, according to latest information reaching usually reliable German quarters here yesterday.

Information indicated that despite fierce and often desperate resistance the Red Army was facing a major catastrophe, due to the rapidity and weight of the German thrusts.

There was reason to believe that the Germans had driven wedges deep into the heart of the Soviet front resulting in the whole Soviet army corps losing direct contact with each other or with the central command in Moscow. This was believed to be one of the main reasons why the German High Command was delaying in releasing details on the fighting, in order not to reveal to Red Army leaders facts which they themselves may possibly not know.

Meanwhile, late D.N.B. reports said that 120 Soviet planes were destroyed on the ground on the Soviet-Ukraine front by a single Luftwaffe squadron yesterday.

At another point on the front a single German gun destroyed 15 Soviet tanks. Bavarian Alpine troops met a Red tank division at another point, scattered it after heavy fighting and "captured a number of guns," said the report.

"During hand-to-hand fighting Bavarian troops destroyed more than 100 Russian tanks," said D.N.B.

In another sector a Red regiment which lost contact with other formations was "completely wiped out in stubborn and close fighting. The enemy's losses in heavy tanks, guns and vehicles was particularly large here," said D.N.B.

In the first great panzer battle astride the main road from Poland into the Soviet union it was said that a smaller German tank force completed destroyed 45 Soviet tanks.

A dispatch of the official German news agency D.N.B., said that Nazi fighter planes Wednesday engaged 70 Soviet tanks attempting to carry out a flank movement through woods and cornfields on German troops advancing along the main road into Soviet territory. German planes hurled bombs and machine-gunned the tanks, destroying 46. Nothing but smoking wreckage was left of the blasted tanks, said D.N.B.

A propaganda company dispatch for the first time reveals that German mountain troops from Narvik already had advanced across the Finnish frontier into the Kola peninsula, apparently with the objective of cutting off and capturing the important Russian port of Murmansk. There was no official confirmation, as yet, of foreign reports that the town already was in German hands.

AIZAWA, PRIDE OF OSAKA, MEETS LOCAL SENSATION

Both Sluggers Discard Skill For Kayo—Tokyo Boxer Has String of KO Wins

Taro Aizawa, pride of Osaka will meet Toshiryo Fukuda hard-hitting local sensation in a ten-round main event of a boxing card to be held Wednesday night at the Hibiya amphitheater. The program including two six-round semi-finals and five preliminaries will get under way at 6:30 p.m.

Both Aizawa and Fukuda are "heavies" who go in for strict slugging tactics. Fukuda has a streak of smashing knockout victories and has displayed power in both fists. He boast victories over such first rate leather-pushers as "Snake" Yamada and Toshio Aoki.

Aizawa, on the other hand returns to the local ring after an absence of some months. In the past he has met the best of the local boys and has shown himself to be a tough customer. A good bout is expected.

The semi-finals will have Asaji Futaba meeting Hideo Oki in one, and Ohtake, clashing with Akechi in the other. The preliminaries are lined up with one four-rounder and four three-round bouts.

20 Soviet Vessels Prepared to Carry Machine Tools to Russia From America

Domei

NEW YORK, June 30.—Nearly 20 Soviet vessels at present in American ports are ready to ferry United States' aid materials, presumably medicine and gasoline, to the Soviet Union through the agency of the Amtorg Trading Company, New York, (a Soviet firm), as soon as an official Soviet request for American aid reaches Washington, the York Times reported today.

The newspaper said the Amtorg company has been cooperating with the Soviet Embassy in Washington in an an effort to effect immediate shipments of United States machine tools, totaling $1,700,000, which have been stored in its warehouses for the past six months because of difficulties in obtaining export licenses from the State Department.

Although the machine tools are vital for promoting the Soviet Union's five-year heavy industry plan, the New York Times continued, Amtorg, in view of severe shortage of bottoms, will not spare Soviet vessels for the shipments unless the Soviet Government instructs the company to do so.

Meanwhile, shipping circles here expressed belief that purchasing of United States materials by the Soviet Union in the future is likely to be done on the cash-and-carry basis.

Waters to Be Mined

SOFIA, July 1.—Bulgarian territorial waters in the Black Sea will be mined at midnight, July 2, the Bulgarian army authorities announced today. Permission to sail in the waters must be obtained 12 hours beforehand by foreign vessels and no foreign ships will be permitted to enter the waters after 4 o'clock, the announcement warned.

JAPAN-CHINA PEACE IS STILL FAR AWAY

Conflict Has Taken Form of Total War, Makoto Komura Writes in Hochi

The China affair has come to be prolonged, and the establishment of peace in the entire territory of China is still far away, says Makoto Komura in the Hochi, in reviewing the China affair as the fourth anniversary of its outbreak is soon to come, on July 7.

Though neither Japan nor China has declared war, there is no doubt that the China affair is a war carried on with the entire national strength, continues the writer. The fighting line expanded from North China to Central China, and then to South China and interior points.

It has also involved French Indo-China and Burma, and has really taken the form of a total war as defined by Marshal Ludendorff of Germany. To the Chungking regime, it must be really a war of life or death. To Japan it is also one to be fought with her entire national strength, even though the military power that is exerted in the China affair be said to be only one-ninth or one-tenth of the total fighting strength.

Real Total War

The China affair, now entering its fifth year, has become a real total war or a war of the total national strength. It is not common in world history that such a gigantic war continues more than four years. It is a notable development that the China affair has entered the stage of a prolonged war.

Ever since the beginning of the war, Japanese forces have made devastating assaults on the Chungking army, Communist forces and guerrillas. Yet the Chungking side is still insisting on making resistance and attaining the object of the "scorched earth" warfare. While the Kuomintang Government under the leadership of President Wang Ching-wei is gradually perfecting its organization, and grasping the mind of the people, the Chungking government is following the downward path of finally becoming a mere local government. Yet the Chungking government showing no intention of surrendering to Japan or of compromising with the Kuomintang Government, and is intent upon disturbing the national peace, by denying the sectional peace between Japan and the Wang Government.

This is because the Chungking regime feels strong because of the vast hinterland area and the human and material resources that will enable it to stand negative resistance operations.

Anglo-U.S. Support

Then Great Britain and the United States cannot sever their relations with Chungking and are aiding it, making it appear as if they are quite unconcerned about their own positions which are now beginning to totter before the great offensive of the Axis Powers. Under such conditions the Chungking Government is trying everything to continue its resistance front.

However vast the hinterland of Chungking might be, and however large the material resources that they command might be, and however they might enable Chungking to continue the anti-Japanese resistance, the negative resistance of Chungking will have its limit and will confront a wall of obstacles that they cannot surmount, if its neighboring countries join the movement for establishing a new order in East Asia and come to bring pressure on Chungking from behind.

If such a change in the international situation cannot be expected to come, the prolongation of the China affair will result, and the establishment of complete peace in China including Chungking will be yet far off.

British to Discontinue Examination of Mails In Portuguese Territory

Reuter

LISBON, June 28.—The British Government is understood to have waived its belligerent right to examine mails sent between Portugal and the Azores and other Portuguese island possessions in the Atlantic. Letters may now go direct to addressees without censorship. Arrangements have also been made for speeding up considerably the passage of mails between Portugal and her African empire. These fresh concessions follow the introduction of a new system of British navicerts for small merchandise parcels between the United States and certain neutral countries, including Portugal, and will be welcomed by both business people and private correspondents—the latter are increasing in number with the continued strengthening of Portuguese island garrisons.

LITVINOFF MAY BE NAMED TO HIGH GOVERNMENT POST

Ousted Official to Handle Collaboration Among Russia, Britain, America

United Press

ROME, June 28.—The Popolo di Roma today published a dispatch from Ankara quoting Soviet diplomatic circles as stating that Maxim Litvinoff, former Commissar of Foreign Affairs, would shortly be named to a high Government post.

"It was understood that Mr. Litvinoff will be in charge of all problems in connection with collaboration among Russia, Great Britain and the United States," the dispatch added.

Mr. Litvinoff, former exponent of collective security, collaboration with the democracies and the League of Nations, was ousted from the Foreign Commissariat in 1939, and was replaced by Viacheslav Molotov—a move which led to the signing in August of that year of the German-Russian non-aggression pact.

be directed by Taguchi, noted screen director. For the production of some scenes in the picture, a group of actors and actresses will proceed to Peking shortly. Another war picture contemplated by the same company is Shonen Sekkohei (Boy Scouts), featuring Shiro Izome, Yoshiro Omori, Jiro Takano and Masahiko Murata.

According to an investigation, 166 motion pictures were released in the first six months of this year in the capital. Detailed figures are: Shochiku 30, Toho 25, Nikkatsu 31, Shinko 36, Daito 25, American pictures 10 and European films 9.

Three Japanese motion pictures have recently been decided by the Education Ministry to be unfit for showing before children under the age of 14. They are Aizo Ranma (Love and Hatred) by Daito Company; Kokoro wa Itsuwarazu (Heart Does Not Lie) by Shochiku Company, and O-oka Seidan Ashura Hime (Lord O-oka and Lady Ashura) by Shinko Company.

4TH OF JULY SPURTS Y.C.A.C. ACTIVITIES

Sports as Well as Socials Will Highlight Yokohama's Independence Day Program

Sports activities at the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club will get under way to an early start this week-end with part of the American Independence Day program being held at the club grounds Thursday.

Softball, cricket and baseball games, and a "Fourth of July" mixed doubles tennis tournament as well as matches in the club's lawn bowls and tennis tourneys comprise the three-day sports program.

An informal dinner and get together will be held in the clubhouse tonight from 8 p.m., at which the Ancient Mariners mixed softball team, winner of the club league, will be the guests of the other three squads. It will be one of the popular "sausages and mashed" affairs, and any club members and friends are welcome to attend.

A feature of the dinner and get together will be an amateur entertainment put on by a number of the club members. It is rumored that some of the fair members will present costume dances which are amateur in name only, while a male quintet which has had considerable practice in the men's refreshments room will sing some of the old favorites. Community singing will also be one of the events.

This afternoon a large number of the American communities of Tokyo and Yokohama are expected to be present at the club grounds to cheer on two softball teams representing the American Associations of the capital and the bay city. This contest will get under way at 3 p.m. sharp.

There is no doubt that the players will employ any means, fair or foul, to reach third base as a keg of beer will be placed near the hot corner and anyone getting that far will be able to help himself to the beverage as long as it lasts. With the scarcity of ale in these parts the captains of the two teams are afraid there will be a greater inducement to stay on third base than having the glory of scoring a run.

George Edmondson will be burdened with the doubtful honor of being the umpire, for if past "Fourth of July" games are a criterion, the players will argue practically every decision the arbiter will make.

The Yokohama line-up will probably include R. Perkins, C. Meyers, R. Devin, P. Kipp (captain), J. Goetzman, J. Blum, R. Lewis, E. Eastlake, R. Child, M. C. Cooke, S. Healey, S. Teaze, C. Ettele and Jones. The Tokyo squad has not been announced, but it is expected it will include a number of the players who made such a good showing last year.

On Saturday afternoon the intra-club Tokyo versus Yokohama cricket match, which had to be postponed a week on account of rain, will be played.

The capital will be represented by W. R. Bull, K. S. Himatsinhji, J. A. Sargeant, H. A. Bird (captain), J. R. V. Mason, G. H. D. Bell, A. E. Bell, P. H. Lord, E. V. Thomas, G. W. Gorman, F. da Silva, A. H. Ballantyne, R. Meher, G. Hoyer and Moysey.

The Yokohama line-up includes C. Heseltine, W. A. Tomlinson, J. da Costa, S. Stephens, (captain), G. E. Beatty, L. N. Haum, W. T. Craigie, R. W. Child, F. R. Devin, F. R. Harriss, M. L. Russell, W. Sa'er, S. G. Bielous, C. Fernandes and E. Eastlake.

An all-day mixed doubles "Fourth of July" tennis tournament will get under way on the club courts from 10 a.m. Sunday, for which entries must be made by Saturday evening. Those wishing to compete are to either sign their names on the notice board in the clubhouse or to get in touch with the tennis captain, Mr. J. Cornu, or the club secretary, Mr. L. N. Haum. The event is a sealed handicap affair, and the given points will not be made known until the event is concluded. The American Association of Yokohama will present the winning pair with the usual prizes.

On Sunday afternoon the Y.C. and A.C. baseball team will play the Wakakusa Club nine from 3 p.m. on the club diamond. The home team squad includes F. R. Harriss (captain), P. H. Kipp (vice-captain), L. N. Haum (manager), M. C. Cooke (coach), S. G. Bielous, W. Blamey, G. E. Beatty, J. da Costa, F. R. Devin, E. Eastlake, C. Fernandes, J. Koch, L. A. M. Frank, R. Lewis, F. da Rosa and F. da Silva.

CHUNGKING REGIME BEGINS DRIVE FOR MORE FUNDS

Gifts From Overseas Chinese Fall Off and Communists Make Attempt to Get Money

Domei

BANGKOK, July 3.—Desperate in collecting funds from overseas Chinese, the Chungking Regime is now planning to start a drive shortly for making up its funds for resistance on the occasion of the fourth anniversary of the outbreak of the current Sino-Japanese conflict on July 7, it ws reliably reported here.

The Chungking Regime's funds for the war of resistance have been greatly exhausted following the past four years of war.

The reports reaching here say that the amount of donations from Chinese overseas has recently sharply declined and that taking advantage of the situation, Chinese communists have been making various attempts to pull these Chinese abroad into the communist camp.

(Meanwhile, increasing are the Chungking Regime's activities here for collecting funds from the Chinese residents in Bangkok, and the Thai Government is keenly watching the activities of the Chungking Regime's agents here in order to prevent any disturbance of peace on the forthcoming anniversary of the Sino-Japanese conflict.

SPAIN TO ANNOUNCE VOLUNTEER DETAILS

Public Wholeheartedly Back Government's Move to Dispatch Her Sons Against Russia

Transocean

MADRID, June 27.—A manifest by the Spanish Government in connection with the formation of a Spanish volunteer corps may be expected any hour now, according to information received from reliable quarters in the Spanish capital. The strength of this corps has as yet not been fixed in detail. It seems certain, however, that 75 per cent of this corps will consist of veterans of the Spanish Civil War, 20 per cent of Spaniards arrested by Spanish Reds, while the remainder will be composed of various other volunteers.

The first batch of volunteers will probably leave on July 3. District Leaders of the Falange have in the meantime received the necessary instructions pertaining to the registration of volunteers. The registration and signing up of volunteers as well as the dispatch of formations is going on in full view of the public. Spanish volunteers will be fitted out with khaki uniforms, blue Falange shirts, and the Falange emblems and banners. There is no doubt that on the Spanish side everything is being done toward speed-up organization in this connection.

A high diplomatic official declared at a press conference held yesterday at the Spanish Foreign Ministry that the Spanish Foreign Minister, Serrano Suner, had received letters and telegrams from all parts of Spain, from National Revolutionary fighters, those arrested by Spanish Reds, militiamen, syndicates and youth organizations, expressing their readiness to join the fight for European civilization on the side of the Axis powers and their allies.

The victims of the Spanish civil War are now to be avenged in the battle against the party responsible for the Spanish Civil War—Soviet Russia. The Spanish Government had observed the attitude of the Spanish people thus expressed, with satisfaction. The entire Spanish nation had given their unanimous approval of the war against Soviet Russia.

PADEREWSKI IS HONORED

Exiled Polish Government Bestows Final Tribute on Late Patriot Pianist

Domei

LONDON, July 1.—The Polish Government-in-Exile yesterday drew up a resolution following the death of Ignace Jan Paderewski, Polish national hero and one of the world's greatest pianists, paying tribute to his patriotism and political and democratic greatness.

The resolution declared that the body should be taken to Poland "when conditions allow, to be buried in a place worthy of his historical merit."

(Friends of the great Polish leader, who helped found the Polish Republic after the World War, said that Mr. Paderewski's family in New York had requested that in accordance with Polish custom, Mr. Paderewski's heart be removed and be buried in Warsaw Cathedral after the war. The heart of Frederick Francois Chopin is also buried there.)

The Polish Government posthumously conferred on Mr. Paderewski the award of the highest Polish military distinction, "Virtuti Militeri." Mr. Paderewski died in the Buckingham Hotel in New York after falling ill last week following a public appearance in New Jersey.

U.S. 'NERVOUSNESS' GETS JOURNALISTIC LAMBAST

Madrid 'Arriba' Prints Ironical Jibes at 'Crisis Bill' in Sarcastic Article

Transocean

MADRID, June 30.—A new bill proposed to U.S. Congress, the so-called "crisis bill," was the subject of ironical remarks in yesterday's "Arriba." The paper declares that no one knows whether this bill relates to economic or military, crises, or simply to a crisis of nerves.

It seemed certain, however, the paper added, that this bill was to authorize the U.S. Government to dispatch to some corner of the globe armored divisions with everything that belonged thereto, i.e. journalists, press photographers, doctors, drums and trumpets and of course good quartermasters. If a Minister of Commerce in Afghanistan should have some differences with a British employe, then the U.S. anti-crisis division of Mr. Stimson would get busy as a kind of international police force.

This idea, says the paper, is of rather suspicious simplicity. The prerequisite for this plan, however, is that the world take U.S. law-makers more seriously than they do at present in order to enable Stimson's officers to carry out their task.

But to our regret, concludes the "Arriba," it must be stated that the peoples of the world are apparently willing to accept orders from these quarters and to watch with folded arms the actions of this "Crisis Division" from Cincinatti.

BUDGET FOR FISCAL YEAR MUST GET RETRENCHMENT

Officials of All Government Departments in Regular Meetings Believe So

Retrenchment should be the guiding policy of the Government in compiling the budget estimates for the next fiscal year in view of the increasing gravity of the world situation.

This opinion was expressed at the regular meeting of the vice-chiefs of all Government departments held from Thursday at the Premier's official residence.

Vice-Minister of Communications Tatsuo Yamada reported in detail on the present state of the national management of electricity while Chuichi Ohashi, Vice-Minister for Foreign Affairs, explained the international situation.

EXPERTS PRESENT U.S. DEFENSE DIET

Parley on Nutrition Studies Best Kinds of Foods for Americans to Eat

A minimum defense diet for Americans, recommending the kinds and amounts of food Americans should eat for good health on the basis of the most advanced knowledge gleaned from studies in this field of science was made public in New York at the three-day National Nutrition Conference for Defense, the New York Herald-Tribune reports.

The conference, called by President Roosevelt with 900 experts attending, was preceded with a radio discussion of the food problem by Paul V. McNutt, Administrator of the Federal Security Agency; Claude R. Wickard, Secretary of Agriculture; Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the United States; M. L. Wilson, director of the Extension Service of the Department of Agriculture, and Dr. Russell M. Wilder, of the Mayo Clinic, chairman of the National Research Council.

This broadcast, launching a major goevrnment health-building dietary program, coincided with the announcement by Brigadier General Lewis B. Hershy, acting director of the selective service system, that he had ordered state directors of that agency to send to local boards copies of a letter from Secretary Wickard which suggested consideration of draft deferment for agricultural workers because of the shortage of farm labor being caused by the drain for defense industries and the armed forces.

The Wickard letter distributed by General Hershey was viewed as emphasizing the importance of keeping enough primary food producers on their civilian jobs to provide the necessary daily diet allowances for every American and beneficiary of the lend-lease aid-to-democracy program as worked out by the food and nutrition committee of the Research Council. In brief, as outlined by Dr. Wilder in his broadcast tonight which was part of the American Forum of the Air program directed by Theodore Granik over the Mutual, network, this daily nutrition yard-stick calls for the following:

One pint of milk for an adult and more for a child; a serving of meat, cheaper cuts being just as nutritious; one egg or some suitable substitute such as Navy beans; two vegetables, one of which should be green or yellow; two fruits, one of which should be rich in Vitamin C, found abundantly in citrus fruits and tomatoes; breads, flour and cereal, most or preferably all whole grain or enriched; some butter or oleomargarine with Vitamin added; other foods to satisfy appetite.

Dr. Lydia J. Roberts, head of the department of home economics of the University of Chicago, who served as chairman of the subcommittee which assembled data from hundreds of nutritional studies and nutrition authorities for the compilation of these food-allowance recommendations, explained that many combinations of food meet these requirements.

"America is fortunate today that it has a large number of trained nutritionists who can translate these allowances into terms of foods available and practical in many parts of the country," she remarked.

Dr. Parran pointed out that "now, for the first time, the United States has definite nutrition recommendations from an authoritative national committee which has pooled all the available knowledge on foods and drawn a blueprint of the amounts and kinds of dietary essentials for good health."

"This is a yardstick which is a challenge to all of us," he said. "With the exception of families of the lowest income groups, this yardstick can be attained now. There is no narrow list of foods from which to draw. Ample allowance is made for geographical differences in prices of foods.

"Many diets today do not reach these standards. This is a dangerous situation. Our work is to bring the story of good nutrition to every American family. Those who can afford the foods recommended will want to include all of them. Those whose budget do not permit them to buy what they need are the responsibility of all of us. I expect the National Nutrition Conference for Defense to outline ways in which this new dietary yardstick can become a reality."

General Hershey's move to induce local selective service boards to adopt a lenient attitude to moderate the possibility of an acute shortage of farm labor was based entirely on the advisory letter from the Secretary of Agriculture.

Secretary Wickard pointed out that the government needed to assure an adequate supply of food not only for the United States, but also for Great Britain and other nations resisting aggression, under the terms of the lend-lease bill, and that to do this the country would have to increase production on some farm products while holding the present nevel in others.

The present farm-labor problem is very serious in some areas, and not so acute in others, he explained, for between April 1, 1940, and April 1, 1941, the supply of available farm labor throughout the entire country decreased 17.8 per cent.

"The most acute shortages are in New England and the middle Atlantic states," Mr. Wickard wrote. "The acute shortages of regular farm laborers in North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia center largely around defense activities. In Ohio, Indiana, southern Wisconsin and Illinois the shortage appears to be acute in the dairy and truck-crop areas, and in those areas surrounding defense activities."

In his memorandum sending Secretary Wickard's letter to state directors, General Hershey said: "The importance of agriculture in the national defense program cannot be overestimated. The most serious consideration will be given to the information contained in the following letter by all local boards in examining claims for occupational deferment by those engaged in agricultural pursuits."

APPOINTMENT OF JACKSON AS U.S. JUSTICE APPROVED

Tydings Opposition to Former Attorney-General Over-Ruled By Senate Committee

Domei

WASHINGTON, July 1.—The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday unanimously approved the nomination of Robert H. Jackson, former United States Attorney-General, as a member of the Supreme Court.

The committee overruled the protest of Senator Millard E. Tydings, Maryland Democrat, that Mr. Jackson was "unfitted by character, philosophy and judicial temperament" for the post. Senator Tydings charge was based on the accusation that Mr. Jackson failed to prosecute the columnists Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen, co-authors of the Washington Merry-Go-Round, for alleged criminal libel against Senator Tydings in radio broadcast.

NEW YORK, June 30.—"Blazin' Bob" Feller, ace of the Indian hurlers, went down to dismal defeat today at the hands of the lowly St. Louis Browns and the Tribesmen lost a full half-game to the idle New York Yankees. The Yankees now hold full two games on the Indians by virtue of four less losses than Cleveland although both clubs have won the same number of games.

The Indians scored three times in the first inning and once in the third to take a 4 to 3 lead as the Browns scored three times in the third inning. The Indians added two more runs in the fourth inning to take a long 6 to 3 lead.

The Browns, however, hit their stride in the seventh inning, bunching a single, three doubles, three walks, a bunt, a four-bagger and a wild throw to collect seven runs in a disastrous inning for the Indians. Feller was hurried to the showers at the height of the spree, to be replaced by Ralston Hemsley, who finished out the game.

Both clubs collected 10 hits during the game, but Cleveland could never make up for that one bad inning.

In the only other American League game of the day, the Detroit Tigers dropped a close 7 to 6 decision to the Chicago White Sox.

The White Sox scored one in the second and twice in the third to take a 3 to 1 lead over the Tigers, and then added one in the fifth and one in the sixth to run their lead up to 5 to 2 as the Tigers added one more in the sixth. Detroit, however, came back with a single score in the seventh and two in the eighth to knot the count at 5-all.

The White Sox collected a walk, three singles and took advantage of a Detroit error in the ninth to score twice while the Tigers could only tally once to win the game.

John Rigney went the full route for the White Sox, holding the Tigers to 10 hits while his mates collected 14 safeties off Johnny Gorsica, Lynn Rowe and Alton Benton. Detroit made four errors during the game to look bad in the field.

COSSACKS IN BULGARIA UNITE AGAINST STALIN

Years of Oppression by Jews And Communists Pointed Out In Thrilling Message

Transocean

SOFIA, June 28.—Russian Cossacks, who are living as emigrants in Bulgaria, where they united in the Russian Cossacks League, addressed an appeal to all Russian Cossacks in the world, congratulating the German army on it war against the Bolsheviks. "Severe years of banishment," so the appeal says, "have taught us to find true friends and allies.

"A great man, Adolf Hitler, appeared in the historical arena. He was not afraid to take up the fight by himself against everyone, who since centuries has made the world tremble.

"He courageously opposed Jewish Freemasonry and its product, Communism. Cossacks have always stood up for Hitler and his movement, without fearing that he might perish in the fight against the world Democracies.

"The hour has struck when the victorious German Army at the command of its Fuehrer crossed the frontiers of Soviet-Russia in order to wipe out Communism once and for all."

MILLIONS ARE SPENT ON WAR PROPAGANDA

Ten Organizations in United States Spend Huge Sums to Sway American Opinion

Ten propaganda organizations in the United States have spent well over $1,100,000 in cash during the last year in efforts to influence public opinion on the questions of aid to Great Britain, convoys and American entry into the war against the Axis, according to the New York Herald Tribune.

Leaders in the work are two directly opposed national organizations: the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, of New York, headed by Ernest W. Gibson jr. former United States Senator from Vermont, and the America First Committee, of Chicago, headed by Robert E. Wood, chairman of the board of Sears, Roebuck and Co.

Since its founding, a year ago, the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies has spent $351,714 promoting all-out aid to Britain, including convoys. America First, organized last August, has spent $207,000 in attempting to convince the nation that such aid to Britain will drag the United States into the war.

America First Expenses

These expenses are for the two national chapters. In addition, America First's New York chapter has spent $26,000 and the New York chaper of the Committee to Defend America by aiding the Allies has put out $11,671. On top of this, it is estimated conservatively, that the 1,600 local chapters of both groups spread from coast to coast have spent a total of $300,000.

But these figures represent only part of the total propaganda effort. Voluntary work by committee members—ranging from housewives serving as stenographers up to nationally prominent speakers who address rallies—constitutes at least half of the sum of the propaganda energy.

The following table lists some of the principal propaganda organizations and the amounts of money spent:

For All-Out Aid to Britain

Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies national chapter)	$ 351,714
Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies (New York chapter)	11,671
*Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies (all others)	150,000
†United Americans	15,000
‡Fight for Freedom Committee	36,000
Student Defenders of Democracy	800
Total	$ 565,135

Opposed to All-Out Aid

America First (national (chapter)	$207,000
America First (N. Y. (chapter)	26,000
*America First (all others)	150,000
†No Foreign War Committee	116,513
Keep America Out of War Congress	20,000
‡College Men for Defense First	1,000
Women United	3,000
Total	$ 523,613

* Estimated. † Now defunct. ‡ Money on hand, but not all spent.

Peace Mobilization

In addition to those listed there is the American Peace Mobilization, whose opponents say it is Communist-dominated, whose national office has spent $16,000, with local chapters spending a great deal more.

Also there are two more organizations not strictly engaged in propaganda on the war or peace issue, although they support all-out aid to Britain. They are the Council for Democracy, with $91,000 spent, and Friends of Democracy, with $60,000 spent.

The weapons of the propaganda committees are mass meetings, radio programs, newspaper advertisements, direct-mail appeals, circulation of pamphlets, some lobbying, letters to Senators and Representatives, and every other imaginable form of publicity medium.

There is bitter warfare between the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies and the America First Committee. America First considers members to opposition group interventionists and war-mongers, while they in turn regard America First as composed of purblind isolationists.

America First is frequently embarrassed by unwanted support from pro-Nazi, anti-British and anti-Jewish elements, who boo England instead of Hitler at some meetings.

People Give Support

Both sides contend that the majority of American people are with them. Among leading speakers presented so far by the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies are Wendell L. Willkie and Mayor F. H. La Guardia. America First has used Senators Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, and David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, Democrats, and Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, and Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, Republicans, and also Charles A. Lindbergh.

In the wake of the two leading committees are a number of smaller organizations, old and new, large and small. The newest is the Fight for Freedom Committee, which says flatly that America already is in the war, and should so conduct itself.

Each side has had one major failure. On April 29 the No Foreign War Committee folded up after spending $116,513. Its chairman, Verne Marshall, told his members to join America First.

Also, United Americans, headed by Orvelle S. McPherson, of Kansas City, began dissolving recently, telling its 36,000 members to join the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies.

PARCELS TO NEUTRALS MUST HAVE 'MAIL-CERTS'

New System Adopted at U.S. Post Offices to Control Outgoing Matter

Transocean

WASHINGTON, June 24.—A system of British "mail-certs" will be introduced as from July 1 to control the sending of parcels from the United States to certain neutral countries, the British Embassy announced today.

Under this system parcels will only be accepted at the United States Post Office after a "mail-cert" has been obtained. To get one of these the value of the contents of the parcel must be declared to be greater than $25.

"Mail-certs" will be required for parcels to Eire, Finland, Portugal, Portuguese Guinea, the Spanish and Portuguese islands in the Atlantic, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, French West Africa, Morocco, Liberia, Madagascar, Iran, and Iraq.

SYNTHETIC RUBBER PLANTS TO BE BUILT

Three Factories Will Be in Akron, Ohio, and Fourth in Naugatuck, Connecticut

Jesse H. Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, has announced that the Defense Plant Corporation will finance the construction of four synthetic rubber plants with an annual production of 10,000 tons, a Washington dispatch to the New York Herald-Tribune reports. The plants will be operated by Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Hydro-Carbon Chemical and Rubber Company, a subsidiary of B. F. Goodrich Co.; Firestone Tire and Rubber Company and United States Rubber Company.

Three of the plants will be in Akron, Ohio, while the fourth, to be operated by United States Rubber, will be at Naugatuck, Connecticut. The authorized initial cost of each is estimated at $1,250,000 for land, buildings and equipment.

Synthetic rubber, which is a comparatively new development, is now being produced by some of the companies in the expansion program. Output in the U.S. is small, partly because of the high cost of producing it.

The 10,000-ton estimated new production represents only a small portion of the annual rubber consumption of the United States. Present annual consumption of natural rubber, including reclaimed rubber, is estimated at 600,000 tons, while for 1941 this will be exceeded by 200,000 tons.

Most of the rubber used in the United States comes from Malaya and other Far Eastern countries. Rubber is also grown in Brazil. Since the possibility has arisen that war might cut off the Malaya market, the United States, the largest consumer in the world, has made efforts to acquire rubber stocks for any eventuality.

Mr. Jones said that the estimated production of 2,500 tons for each of the four new plants can be quickly expanded to a production of 10,000 tons each annually.

At the same time he revealed that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has entered into a contract to buy 170,000 tons of aluminum from the Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd. The aluminum is valued at $63,000,000, and the R.F.C. has advanced $25,000,000 to the Canadian concern to expand its plants.

The increased facilities of the company will be at Shawinigan Falls, Province of Quebec.

VICHY GIVES HISTORY ON SOVIET RELATIONS

Semi-Official Paper Printing Treatise Justifies Darlan in Cutting Russian Ties

Transocean

VICHY, July 1.—A history of Franco-Soviet relations was issued today by the semi-official Office Francais d'Information.

The statement recalled that up till May, 1924, successive French Governments had declined to open diplomatic relations with Moscow, despite the strong political pressure brought to bear for such a step. It was not until the advent to power of the left-wing so-called "cartel" government under Premier Edouard Herriot that diplomatic relations between Paris and Moscow were established.

The arrival of the first Soviet ambassador, M. Rakovski, in Paris and M. Herriot's journey to Moscow in the same year (1924) was marked by a disquieting increase of communist agitation in France. Then a new epoch in Franco-Russian relations was inaugurated by the conclusion of the non-aggression pact in 1932. Premier Barthou in 1934, and Premier Laval in 1935, both traveled to Moscow. Their journeys eventually led to the conclusion of a pact of mutual assistance, which after stormy debates, was ratified by the French Senate and Chamber of Deputies in March, 1936.

Then following the formation of the Popular Front Government by Leon Blum in 1936, French policy became resolutely friendly to the Soviet Union.

Further negotiations with Moscow were opened in 1939, which however were frustrated by the conclusion of an agreement between Germany and the Soviet Union on August 23, of that year.

During the war and up till the armistice in the summer of 1940, the communists in France had carried on agitation. This compelled the Government of Premier Edouard Daladier to deprive 43 communist deputies of their mandates. But even after the armistice the Community Party continued its subterranean activities, proving that the Soviet Government was determined to pursue its disintegrating activities in France.

This fact alone sufficed to justify the step taken by Admiral Darlan in breaking-off diplomatic relations with the Soviet Government, the statement concluded.

Music Notes

music by "Araebisu" (Kodo Nomura), a noted collector of musical records and musical commentator; Naoe Momma, and Soichi Tsuji; a chronological sketch of Bach's life; a list of Bach's compositions, and extensive reviews of recordings of Bach's music. Of the latter, several chapters were written by Professor Shuichi Tsugawa, a Japanese authority on Johann Sebastian Bach.

Record Reviews

As the musical world is mourning the recent death of Ignace Jan Paderewski, one of the greatest geniuses of the piano, a most timely release is included in the August repertory of the Nippon Victor Company which will be put on sale during the latter part of this month. It is a recording of Paderewski's interpretation of two well-known pieces: La Campanella, by Paganini-Liszt; and Chopin's Nocturne in F sharp major, Opus 15 No. 2. The two selections are combined on a 12-inch red label disk.

As a musical personality, the late Paderewski represented that type of international concert stage virtuoso of which only a very few outstanding representatives have been known in this century. It is a type of musical personality more characteristic of the Romantic 19th century—and yet a type which has always been winning the enthusiastic admiration of 20th century audiences during all those rare occasions in which it occurred. With the personality of Paderewski, another representative of that school has left this world—but the art which he represented is not dying with him, as it will remain alive for ever in his records.

A theme by Paganini, the violin wizard of the early 19th century, served Liszt as the musical substance for his Campanella etude, a piece of sparkling pianistic virtuosity. To Paderewski, the composition proved a means to display the wide range of his supreme pianistic art. In many places, his interpretation may not agree with orthodox conceptions, but certainly La Campanella is a piece written for virtuosic use, hence allowing a great deal of virtuosic freedom. The recording has perfectly caught the style of Paderewski's playing, which is marked by brilliant tonal effects and starling rubati. Pianissimo passages are reproduced with the utmost delicacy.

Authentic is the term to be used for Paderewski's interpretation of the Chopin Nocturne, for it was in the music of his great Polish compatriot Chopin that his art reached its highest perfection. The beauty of this Nocturne, its poetical depth, its subtle color shades are brought out with unsurpassable artistry.

Admirers of the great violinist Fritz Kreisler, who were recently relieved to learn that the artist has completely recovered from his motorcar accident and will shortly be ready to resume his concert activity, will welcome the release of a recording of two Kreisler selections, equally included in Victor's August repertory. On a 10-inch red label record, the artist is playing his own arrangements of Aloha Oe, and From The Land of The Sky-Blue Water.

Fritz Kreisler is not only one of the greatest masters on the violin—he is at the same time an arranger of violin transcriptions of undisputed superiority. "Aloha Oe," the famous Hawaiian song, for which the words and music were written by the Queen Liliouokalani, and Cadman's somewhat sentimental From The Land of The Sky-Blue Water, are pieces which one would probably be disinclined to include among the classics. But especially the former enjoys world-wide popularity, and Kreisler's arrangements have made of the two pieces two enjoyable additions to the violinistic repertory for encore and curtain-call numbers. The purity and sweetness of Kreisler's tone, coupled with the noblesse and yet simplicity of his playing, are felt in this recording just as much as in his interpretations of the great classics.

Herr von Jagow was a naval officer. He took part in the Kapp uprising in 1920, fought in Upper Silesia against the Polish insurgents, and has been active in the National-Socialist movement since 1921. From 1932 he has been a member of the Reichstag.

Program to Elevate Spirit of the People Behind Guns Given

Under the joint auspices of the Board of Information and Japan Broadcasting Corporation, a meeting for "elevating the spirit of the people solidly behind the guns," with entertainments, was held at the lecture hall of the Board Saturday night. After the singing of the national anthem Kimigayo Dr. Nobumi Ito, President of the Board, gave a speech emphasizing the need for the elevation of popular spirit more than ever upon the fourth anniversary of the China affair. Dr. Ito's speech was folowed by presentation of the famous Kabuki drama "Kanjincho" with the noted actors Uzaemon Ichimura and Koshiro Matsumoto playing the roles of Togashi and Benkei respectively. Miss Ungetsu Tenchuken, noted Naniwabushi artist, entertained with a Naniwabushi called "Bright Moon at Lushan." Those specially present at the affair were nurses of the Japan Red Cross Hospital, Tokyo and others rendering services to the nation. The program was broadcast through JOAK.

party. The oppression on the New Fourth Army in January and the refusal of the Eighth Route Army to fight in the great offensive Japanese campaign in the north of the Yellow River have further aggravated the situation. Because of difference in the objectives of Chiang and the communist party, there is constant friction. The future of this conflict will depend on the aids from the Soviet and the dependence of Chiang on Britain and the United States. Chiang is still controlling the government, but the tendency of keeping Chungking alive with the aid of Britain and the United States cannot be suppressed even with Chiang's influence. Thus Chiang's controlling power has become very small in the Kuomintang.

Sacrificing the People

Economically, it is to be noted that the living conditions of the people in the interior has become very difficult, as commodity prices have advanced many times the former figures. The Chungking regime is sacrificing the people for conducting the resistance war, and is giving every effort for the improvement of roads and construction of war industry plants in the interior. The economic difficulties connected with its plans for a long war and its relation with international capital are rapidly making China a semi-colony. But the proposed establishment of its base in the interior would not progress under the Japanese blockade of the coasts.

From these three conditions, it is seen that the resistance strength of Chungking has particularly been reduced in the present year. Thus it is now planning to connect the China Affair with the world situation and thus to secure the object of constructing itself by resisting Japan through the fruits of the victory in the anti-Axis war. In Chungking, the autonomous faction and that depending on Britain and the United States are facing each other. The autonomous group is led by Ho Ying-chin and Chen chun who desire to establish a resistance structure by its own strength and avoid becoming a semi-colony; and the other party desiring to settle the China Affair by the victory of Great Britain and the United States, expanding the China Affair to a world war, is lead by Wang Chung-hui, T. V. Soong and Quo Taichi. Yet this confrontation is disappearing with the increased influence of these depending on Britain and the United States.

The China-American cooperation that was formed by Wang Chung-hui, and the former American Ambassador Johnson is now strengthened and put into actual execution by Ambassador Clarence Edward Gauss and Quo Taichi. The joint anti-Japanese defense structure by the United States, Great Britain, Australia, Philippines, the Netherlands East Indies and Chungking was perfected at the Singapore conference held in the middle of April.

New Strategic Structure

Chungking also formed a new strategic structure in the south with positive aid from the United States, for the interest of the United States. Recently one hundred Curtiss P-40 type planes came to Chungking, and up to the end of May, 55 airplane mechanics and 66 pilots came from the United States. Owen Lattimore is now made a political adviser to Chungking. All these moves are part of the strategic plan of the United States against Japan. The entire sphere under the control of Chiang Kai-shek is now offered to joint use by the United States and Great Britain. Thus Chungking is becoming a slave to the United States, but Chiang is willing as it is his policy to resist Japan by others' help.

British influence in China has not weakened. When the Japan-Soviet neutrality pact was concluded and Chungking's policy was undecided, British Ambassador Sir Archibald Clark Kerr said to Chiang Kai-shek that if Chungking concludes an independent peace with Japan, Britain will close the Burma route and stop the Hongkong-Chungking air line. Surprised at this threat, Chiang oppressed the movement for peace in Chungking. The pressure of Britain and the United States on Chungking is further increased by the appointment of Quo Tai-chi as the Foreign Minister. It is now believed that a British-American Chiang alliance will be shortly concluded. The United States hopes that by this step its entrance in the European war will be made easier.

Under such complicated situations, the only method for Japan to adopt in settling the China affair is to strength and foster the Nanking Government. It is by the political power of the Nanking Government that the people's mind can be grasped and constructive works can be made in the occupied area. The settlement of the Affair does not mean necessarily the acknowledgment of defeat by Chiang Kai-shek. If his regime actually falls, it means the end of the Affair. The Nanking Government must realize that its positive political activity is the key to the solution of the situation. A firm attitude must be taken in full realization of the true intention of Great Britain and the United States in helping Chiang.

ORIENT INSTITUTE PLANS APPROVED BY MUSSOLINI

Exchange of Ideas on Far and Near East With Italy Encouraged

Transocean

ROME, July 3.—Plans for the organization of an Italian Institute for the Near and the Far East were approved by Premier Benito Mussolini today.

This institute will encourage the publication of books on the Far East by Italian authors and studies concerning Italy by Japanese and other Far Eastern writers.

Already under the auspices of this organization the first work on Thailand has appeared in Italian.

Exchange of scientific knowledge has already been agreed upon by Italian universities and the University of Peking. Such cultural exchanges already have become a practice between educational institutions in Italy and in Japan.

Champion's Medallion

An entry medallion for the 12th Meiji Shrine National Athletic Meet was completed by Jitsuzo Hinako. Throwing a hand grenade is considered the highest national defense sports. Because of its preeminence among national sports, the artist has chosen the form of a champion hand grenade thrower to grace the face of the medallion.

SHAM ASCOT MEET TURNS OUT SUCCESS

War Imposes Restrictions on Famous Horserace but Some of 'Royal' Aspect Retained

Reuters

NEWMARKET, July 3.—Although the notable features, like the fashion parade and the Royal Party state drive along the course were missing, the substitute Ascot meeting rightfully retained its "Royal" aspect as His Majesty the King gained a tremendously popular double.

The general belief among experts that His Majesty holds a good chance of winning both the Derby and the Oaks next year was strengthened when his Big Game won the Coventry Stakes and Sun Chariot won the Queen Mary Stakes for fillies, thereby virtually establishing themselves as the leading two-year-olds in their respective sexes.

Big Game, formerly known as Myrobella, started at 3/2 as the favorite and beat Lord Derby's Watling Street by four lengths to score his fourth successive victory of the season.

Cheering for King's Colt

Not since Limelight won the Ascot for King George V has there been such enthusiastic demonstration. The cheering and handclapping began when the King's colt was 1½ furlongs from home.

Judges of throughbreds, who proclaimed Big Game as the outstanding two-year-old, appear to be justified. It was his hardest task and his earliest triumph.

Sun Chariot, a daughter of former Derby winner Hyperion, got home in a thrilling finish to beat Lord Glaneley's Perfect Peace by a head. This time there was no cheering until the number went into the frame, owing to uncertainty of the result.

This was the first time for many years that Royal colors were twice successful on the same afternoon. It was the King's eighth winner season.

Harry Wragg, who rode both the Royal winners, also rode Sir Hugo Coniffe-Owen's Finis to victory in the Gold Cup over 2½ miles, beating Mrs. Dorothy Paget's Olinden by a head, with Aga Khan's Winter Halter, only a neck behind, third. The finish was as thrilling as when Quashed beat the American horse Omaha in the memorable Ascot finish in 1936.

This was the first "coupon" Ascot and, judging from the sober atmosphere of the meeting, no one would imagine that it was Gold Cup day. Fewer women were seen and it was obvious that none of them were willing to waste precious coupons. Instead, women wore neat, businesslike frocks and costumes. A notable feature was that despite coupon charges nearly all women wore stockings.

The famous grey toppers and mornings coats were also conspicuously absent.

Motorists were evidently heeding the warning against wasting petrol at such functions and there were barely 500 cars in the car park available for 2,000 cars, and many people smiled as they saw two horse-drawn laundaus which had three-quarters of the car park to themselves.

Bloodstocl Breeding Praised

"The Government now acknowledge that bloodstock breeding is a national industry, and I feel sure that they are anxious that it should survive the war," said Major Gerald Deane, speaking before the opening of the Newmarket sales today.

"England is the home of the bloodstock industry. All countries will have to come to our market after the war to replenish their stock because it is a fact that bloodstock in other lands deteriorates after a few years."

Buyers generally showed more optimism. The British Bloodstock Agency paid £2,800 for Hydroplane, beautifully bred filly by Derby winner Hyperion out of Oaks winner Toboggan.

The Agency also gave £2,700 for Quittance, three-year-old filly by Hyperion out of Bookdet. It is quite possible that these two are destined for abroad.

WOMAN TO CONTROL CLUB CRICKET HELM

Miss Joan Chamley Still in Her Twenties to Handle Tough Job

Reuters

LONDON, July 3.—Thousands of club cricketers are content to have their game controlled by a woman. It may appear to be a strange thing, but not one voice will be raised against the move which has placed Miss Joan Chamley, still in her early twenties, in control of London club cricket by her appointment as Secretary to the Club Cricket Conference.

But to start at the beginning, Miss Chamley joined the Conference about seven years ago when the reins were in the capable hands of E. A. C. Thomson and, as his assistant, Miss Chamley became familiar with the manifold activities of the Conference.

Her duties increased with the failing health of Mr. Thomson and when he passed away on Good Friday, to be mourned throughout the cricketing world, Miss Chamley was able to carry on temporarily at a time when preparations were in full swing for the birth of another season. Since then she has been appointed to her present position.

Mr. Thomson came to the aid of club cricket just after the start of the last war for it was in 1915, with club cricket entirely disorganized, and not knowing what to do, that he founded the C.C.C. as it has become known. Thirty-five clubs entered the scheme and once that war was over the organization developed into the greatest cricket association in the world. The founder who was born at Woodford (Essex) in 1872, himself played on Matcham Green at the age of nine and he had a place in several South of England teams in later year. He also found time for many other sports although cricket was ever his greatest love. He was Honorable Secretary of the Open Spaces Bill Committee and his desire to see that builders should not encroach unduly on to the beauty-spots of England was probably born in him because his grandfather was the renowned horticulturist, John William Thomson, who planned the Crystal Palace grounds and reformed Kew Gardens.

Now Miss Chamley carries on the good work that E.A.C. Thomson began. It will not be an easy task but cricketers are confident that she will not fail. About 300 clubs are prepared to leave their destinies in her hands. She will be called on to settle any points which demand immediate attention; she will conduct the fixture bureau; assist in the appointment of umpires week-by-week, edit the Conference's handbook and generally be the guiding light of club cricket.

Not an easy task at the best of times, but doubly difficult in a war season, and she will also attend committee meetings and play a part in choosing Conference teams for representative matches.

Y.C.A.C. NOSES OUT WAKAKUSA NINE 2-1

Winners Play Tight, Smart Baseball Behind Fine Pitching Of Harriss

Playing its best game of the season, the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club baseball team defeated the Wakakusa Club nine by 2 to 1 on Sunday afternoon at the Y.C. and A.C. grounds.

The home team scored its two runs in the first inning, and these proved sufficient, for the visitors were held to a single point, which they made in the fifth frame.

A feature of the contest was the big improvement in the club defense, especially the infield. The men around the bases handled 18 chances, and only made one error, while the outfield performed faultlessly.

"Bucky" Harris pitched a fine game for the winners, holding the opposition to only two hits which were obtained in fifth canto when the sole run was scored.

Kojima started on the mound for the Wakakusa Club, but was retired in favor of Kimura after the Y.C. and A.C. had scored two runs in the initial stanza on two hits and two walks. The latter fared much better, allowing six hits during the balance of the game, which he kept well scattered to prevent any scoring.

With one away in the first inning, Harriss got a base on balls and then stole second. Joe Koch also obtained a free ticket to first when he was hit by the pitcher. Fred da Silva then sent a scorching drive past third to bring in Harriss. Bielous worked the hurler for a walk, filling the bases. Then Henry Fernandes dropped a Texas Leaguer behind shortstop, and Koch crossing the plate for the second run. Kimura took over the hurling assignment and retired the next two batters to prevent any further scoring.

After the first Wakakusa batter had flied out in the fifth. Aoki got a hit and then stole second. He advanced to third as the next man grounded out to second, and then completed the circuit on Saito's safety to center.

Henry Fernandes gained the batting honors by obtaining three hits in five trips to the plate. The home team's other five hits were evenly divided among Lou Haum, Harriss, Koch, da Silva and Ray Lewis. Aoki and Saito were the only two to get a hit for the visitors.

The Y. C. and A. C. squad played heads up baseball, giving Harriss great support. In six of the nine innings the Wakasuka Club players were retired in one-two-three order.

Kishi Memorial Trophy Given to T. Yoshioka By Athletic Federation

Receiving the highest number of votes in a poll taken at the directors meeting, the Japan Amateur Athletic Federation has decided to present the Kishi Memorial Trophy to Takanori Yoshioka, veteran sprinter of Nippon. Yoshioka as a member of the Japanese Olympic team to Los Angeles in 1932 won sixth place in the 100-meter dash. In the 11th Olympic Games in Berlin in 1936, he also represented Japan in the dashes. In 1935 he twice equaled the world's record of 10.3 seconds in the 100-meter dash. Yoshioka rose to the front line in national trackdom more than 10 years ago and is still going strong. Last year in the try-outs of the East Asia Games, he won the century in 10.5 seconds.

SHERIFF KILLED IN STRIKE

Law Officer Meats Death at Rutland, Vermont, in Milk Squabble

Transocean

NEW YORK, July 4.—First death in the gigantic milk strike which is gripping several of the eastern states occurred yesterday when a sheriff was killed by bullets fired by striking farmers at Rutland, Vermont.

The farmers have halted all shipments of milk to New York City because their price demands were not met.

More than 24,000 liters of fresh milk have been dumped on the roads by farmers in the state of Vermont during the past few days from trucks attempting to run their milk-blockade to New York City.

Clashes also occurred between farmers and non-union milk drivers in Utica, New York. Here the farmers fired on milk trucks but did not injure anyone.

ANOTHER FOREIGNER TO DEFY U.S. TURF

Meissen, Giant Horse Shipped From Peru Has Grabbed All S. American Honors

I.N.S.

NEW YORK, June 20.—Another foreign thoroughbred, said to compare in greatness to the ill-fated Phar Lap, today is being readied to challenge the blue-bloods of the domestic breed for all-American turf supremacy.

This horse, Meissen, shipped from Callao, Peru, to San Diego, California, thence to the Rancho San Luis Rey, will undergo a period of intensive training and tightening at the Rancho preparatory to his great onslaught on hemispheric laurels.

And hemispheric laurels it is, for Meissen is the undisputed champion of South America and needs now but to vanquish the best that the North American continent could pit against him to justify full claim to the signal honor of monarch of all he surveys in the countries west of Dakar and east of Hawaii.

Horse Is Mammoth

A mammoth of a horse, half again as big as any American equine, Meissen is a fitting successor in that physical respect to the hapless Phar Lap, the huge "Red Terror" from Australia who died so suddenly after his smashing victorious debut in this part of the world. In weight he tips the scales at 1,300 pounds and is a perfect specimen of thoroughbred perfection and breeding precision.

Meissen is after Whirlaway. He is after Challedon. He is after Mioland. He is seeking every laurel sprig in this country, and it is planned to start his program of high ambition rolling at the current Hollywood Park meeting in Inglewood, California, where some of the most lucrative raees of the summer season are being presented, attracting the most brilliant stars of the turf firmament. And in that batch are scheduled to be the aforementioned Whirlaway, Challedon and Mioland.

American Gets Option

A. T. Jergins, Long Beach millionaire operator, recently acquired an option on Meissen from his wealthy Peruvian owner, Senor Anibal Perez Velez, after much persuasion. Undaunted by Senor Velez' first refusal to part with the horse at any price, Jergins finally convinced him of the tremendous possibilities lying ahead of Meissen together with the justice in allowing the horse to establish his greatness in other spheres, a promise which would certainly materialize should Meissen perform as anticipated. Immediately upon obtaining running rights on Meissen, Jergins nominated the South American to the $75,000 added Hollywood Gold Cup which will be run July 19, and also intends to point him for the American Handicap and Sunset Handicap there, distance events he should relish.

Meissen Five Years Old

Meissen is a five-year-old, sired by Adams Apple, a talented English distance star and a 2,000 Guinea winner, and is by the dam Delfti, the latter being by Your Majesty. An interesting point in this that the dam of Kayak II, Charles S. Howard's South American and winner of the Santa Anita Handicap, is also by Your Majesty, making Meissen's bloodiness more familiar to local denizens. Meissen was foaled in Argentina but was raced in Peru.

In 19 starts, Meissen won 14, and is said to have raced himself virtually out of competition. He did not see action as a two-year-old but entered competition in 1939 at the age of three, winning six of his seven starts and finishing third once, that being in his debut. In his final race that season, the Clasico Presidente, Peru's most vaunted event, he trounced the best in the country's older horses.

As a four-year-old, Meissen registered nine wins in a dozen endeavors, twice was second and once third. One of those victories came in a dead heat while another was a walkover, going to him by default as other horses failed to oppose him. His entire South American record fails to show one instance when he finished out of the money.

The Yoshimoto Entertainment Enterprises dispatched a group of vaudeville artists last Thursday for Central and North China to comfort Japanese soldiers at the front. The group headed by Gozan Kanda, popular samurai story teller, will return to Tokyo around August 10.

For the use of the war relief funds, the Nippon Gekijo, the leading theater in Marunouchi district, has donated all proceeds of the box office returns on July 7, the memorial day of the outbreak of the present China affair, to the Relief Departments of the Ministries of Army and the Navy.

The third program of the Bunraku Puppet Theater, now appearing at the Shimbashi Embujo, which will be given on July 11-15, includes Tsuri Onna (a comic dance), Nanto Ningatsudo Ryoben Sugi Yurai (the Ningatsudo Temple in Nara), Ehon Taikoki (The Wrath of Mitsuhide), and Shimpan Uta Saimon (the Village of Nozaki). "The man-like dolls" which will interpret the important characters in these dramas will be manipulated by Eiza, Monjuro, Tamazo, Eizaburo, Bunsaku and Bungoro.

Opening today at the Manseiza in Asakusa Park is the new bill of four plays, of which Kutsukake Tokijiro, a drama of vagabond, is the main attraction. The Kindaiza, a theatrical troupe headed by Nobuko Satsuki, who returned to the Asakusa theatrical circles after a lapse of nine years, will play. Another popular theater in the same park, the Tokiwa, which has been occupied by a group of comedians known as the Warai no Okoku, will change the program from July 12. It will consist of five plays, old and new. A drama entitled Umi no Shingun (The Advance of the Navy) by Kenji Kijima will feature the program.

Nizaemon Kataoka, Tosshi Sawamura, Kikujiro Onoye and Danshiro Ichikawa, four Kabuki actors, who are familiar with the Tokyo theater-going public, and will complete their engagement at the Shochiku Gekijo today, will continue their circuit performance in rural districts until July 24. Their itinerary includes the performance at the Oyama Club in Kanazawa on July 12-13; the Kabukiza in Takaoka on July 15; the Kagayaza in Fukui on July 16 and the Misonoza in Nagoya on July 17-24.

A program of new dances by Japanese young dancers of the modern-school will be presented at the auditorium of the Kyoritsu Kodo in Kanda-ku at 7 p.m. today. Ten dances, all of which were newly composed based on the national culture, will be staged, including Tachi Odori (Sword Dance), Himatsuri no Odori (the Dance of Fire Festival), Hamayumi Odori (the Dance of an Exorcising Bow) and Sensho no Odori (the Dance of War Victory).

Taking advantage of the inactivity on the local stage during the hot season, Sojuro Sawamura, Genjuro Kawarasaki, Tanosuke Sawamura and Takasuke Sukedakaya, famous Kabuki actors, left Tokyo early this month to make visit to several leading cities on the Tokaido and Ise and Akita prefecture, carrying with them a Kabuki repertoire program such as Kamakura Sandaiki (the History of Kamakura), Ise Ondo (the Romance of Mitsugi and Okon) and Youchi Soga (the Episode of Soga Brothers). They will not return to the capital until the end of August.

The Zenshinza theatrical troupe contributed ¥2,000 to the funds, now being raised by the Japan Actors' Association for the construction of a warplane called Haiyugo (Wings of Actors) The members of the Nakamura family of the late Utayemon Nakamura, noted Kabuki actor, also donated ¥1,000 to the association for the same purpose.

MEDWICK ACQUISITION MAY INSTIL DODGERS

If Former Gashouse Sparkplug Returns to Old Form, Brooklyn Can't Miss

I.N.S.

NEW YORK, June 20.—On a trade that may have been a "dud" and another that looks like a 14-karat guaranteed gift from the Gods may rest the pennant hopes of the Brooklyn Dodgers this season. The trade that brought Joe (Muscles) Medwick to the Dodgers from the Cardinals hasn't paid off as yet but the one which brought second sacker Billy Herman to the banks of the Gowanus today appears to be "money from home."

Herman has been playing the game of his life this year and has plugged the one big hole in the Brooklyn defense—second base. Now, if Medwick can only snap out of his slump, stop fighting himself and start hammering the ball the way he was expected, Brooklyn should be a shoo-in.

Bean Ball Hampers Him

Medwick has been the problem of the team ever since he was beaned by his former team-mate Bob Bowman snortly after joining the Dodgers last summer. He has been "stepping in the bucket" more often than ever. He insists, however, that he is not "gun-shy."

President Larry MacPhail figured that the addition of protective helmets would help Joe's mind this season, but so far they haven't done so. Medwick is the type who fights himself. When he goes bad he really hits the chutes. He has been picked off base. He hasn't looked good in the field, and unfortunately he has been popping up with men on the paths and lining out extra base hits when they mean the least.

Joe Started in Fine Trim

Joe may be over the hill and just naturally tapering off. He has started the season in perfect physical shape, however, and that doesn't sound logical. Perhaps it's mostly mental with him and that he is his own worst enemy.

Whatever is the matter, the former hitting terror of the Gas House Gang of St. Louis this season has found himself dropped down to the No. 7 slot in the batting order—the lowest he was ever been.

Joe is moved up to the No. 5 post for left handed pitchers and Camilli drops down, but against the righties Joe is down in the lowly 7th berth.

Average Falls Down, Too

Medwick was a consistent .340 or better hitter with St. Louis. He hasn't averaged .300 throughout most of this year.

Will he finally find himself? That's the question the Brooklyn fans and particularly the Dodger board of strategy, Messrs. Durocher and MacPhail would like answered. If he can, Brooklyn will definitely be the team to beat.

Herman has given them the infield ace and extra batting power they needed. If Medwick's slumbering power can only be awakened—what an outfit Dodgers will be!

NEXT YEAR'S BUDGET DEBATED BY CABINET

State Ministers Kawada, Suzuki Explain Draft Problems To Colleagues

Problems of drafting details of the national budget for the 1942-43 fiscal year, whose policies were decided at the regular Cabinet meeting on Tuesday, were brought up at an extraordinary Cabinet meeting Wednesday afternoon.

The meeting started at 1:15 p.m. at the Premier's official residence. Premier Fumimaro Konoye and all members of his Cabinet except Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka attended.

The principal topics of discussion were plans for mobilization of materials, extension of industrial capacity and output, and the establishment of a new structure of finance.

Finance Minister Isao Kawada and President Teichi Suzuki of the Planning Board, who are the sponsors of these measures, explained them in detail to the Cabinet.

There were questionings with Finance Minister Kawada and President Suzuki responding. Then ensued a minute examination of details of the plans.

The materials mobilization and industrial capacity expansion programs were adopted before the meeting ended at 4 p.m.

The new financial structure plan, on which action was not taken by the Cabinet for lack of time, will come up for action at the regular Cabinet meeting on Friday.

Prior to the extraordinary Cabinet meeting on Wednesday Finance Minister Kawada conferred with President Suzuki at the Premier's official residence.

Y.C.A.C. ACTIVITIES FULL FOR WEEKEND

Cricket, Baseball, Ladies' Softball, Tennis, Lawn Bowls, Dance Besides Basketball on Tap

Activities at the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club this weekend will include cricket, baseball, ladies' softball, tennis, lawn bowls and a dance.

In addition, the Y.C. and A.C. basketball team will compete in the Kanagawa Prefecture businessmen's championship tournament on Sunday at the Ohka Shogakko to regain the Heseltine Trophy, emblematic of the title. The tourney commences at 8:30 a.m. and will continue all day, with the final held in the afternoon.

The first event on the program will be the cricket match between the club's Tokyo and Yokohama teams, which will begin at 2 p.m. Saturday. That the members of both squads are keen to obtain a victory was proved on Wednesday afternoon with 15 men turning out for net practice, including quite a number of players who live in the capital.

On Saturday evening an informal dinner dance will be held in the cubhouse from 7 to 10 p.m., with "Bucky" Shirakata's Hawaiian Band supplying the music. In view of the hot weather, tables and chairs will be placed on the lawn, while dancing will be held in the verandah. A buffet dinner will be served.

On Sunday afternoon the Y.C. and A.C. ladies' softball team will play a return game with the St. Maur's School ten, with Umpire George Edmondson scheduled to call "play ball" at 1:30 p.m. That the home squad will do its best to square its account with the students was evident at the practice on Wednesday, a good number being present at the workout under the tutelage of Coach "Bucky" Harriss.

The baseball team will play a return game with the Tokyo S.K.F. nine from 3 p.m. Sunday, and if it plays as well as it did last week, it will have a very good chance to gain a victory this time.

A number of tennis matches in the club's spring tournament will also be played over the weekend. One of the major contests on Saturday will be the semi-final in the men's championship singles between Per Aurell and Jean Cornu, which is scheduled for 3 p.m. The winner will play Bill Craigie for the title.

The chief attraction for tennis enthusiasts on Sunday will be the finals of the men's championship doubles between Aurel and H. S. Graham Batter against Cornu and Michel Jalenques. This match is scheduled for 3 p.m., and should be a hard fought one with plenty of good tennis displayed.

Many lawn bowls matches in the club's tourney are also scheduled, and the six rinks busy all weekend.

The line-ups of the club teams will probably be as follows:

NAZI TROOPS COVER BIG DISTANCE FAST

Enter 400-450 Miles of Russia In Two Weeks Compared to 350 Miles in 20 Days in France

D.N.B.

BERLIN, July 9.—Until reaching the Stalin Line, German troops had to cover a fighting distance of 400 to 450 km. This distance was covered in a period of 2 weeks. This period is short when compared with the campaign in the West. At that time, German troops required 20 days from the border of Luxemburg to Abbeville and despite excellent highways covered only a distance of only 350 km.

The Stalin Line cannot be compared in any way with the Maginot Line at the former Eastern boundary of France. It may be assumed however that the defenses of this line are heavy. They are supplemented by new field positions which have been extended since the outbreak of the war. The military command of the Soviets is now making an effort to equip the Stalin Line for the strongest defense. Whilst troops who were worn down by the German advances retreated to the line, reserves are being transported to the line from the hinterland. Raids of the Luftwaffe were directed therefore on these transporters and on the traffic network of the hinterland of the Stalin Line. Simultaneously, however, new blows of the Luftwaffe are being directed on remaining Soviet flying detachments which are making a futile effort to replace losses which were inflicted on the Soviet air force in the first part of the campaign in the East.

Mozart Week for Paris

A Mozart Week will be held at Paris in the middle of July. This Mozart Week will be patterned on the Salzburg and Wurzburg models and will include a number of festive concerts. Programs will be planned by the Berlin Chamber Orchestra, conducted by Hans von Benda, the Salzburg Mozarteum Quartet and the Pasquier Trio. During the festive week a memorial tablet will be unveiled at the Hotel de Beau Vais, in which Mozart took up his residence during his first sojourn at Paris.

8,000 children of Belgian workers who have found employment in Germany have been sent to the most beautiful sections of Germany according to plans worked out by the German-Flemish Arbeitgemeinschaft, the German Labor Front and Belgian labor offices. Another 2,000 children will be selected from Belgian families with a large number of children.

U.S. Troops in Iceland Unjustified

The landing of U.S.A. troops in Iceland on Monday was called by competent quarters of Berlin on Tuesday evening an attack against Europe which could not be justified by anything whatsoever. No other reason can be found for this aggressive act against a small neutral country, which wants to stay neutral, but Roosevelt's desire to create incidents by all means and get into contact with the European warzone is too great.

"Roosevelt knows that he is thus moving on to a battlefield where sharp ammunition is being used and that the responsibility for the action rests entirely with him," it was declared in Berlin in connection with the fact that Iceland is situated within an area which was declared as warzone by Germany since May of this year. The alleged German threat to Iceland which was given as the reason by Roosevelt, was called deliberate untruth. It was true however that Iceland had protested to the British invasion.

142,216 additional Russian were made prisoners from the lines of retreating forces from July 2 to July 5, declare responsible military quarters in Berlin. A vast amount of booty in arms and war material was made during these days: 584 tanks and armored cars, a number of armored trains and 550 guns of all calibers.

Modern 'Jonah' Story

I.N.S.

WEYMOUTH, Massachusetts, July 1.—A suggestion for Joseph B. Nosiglia is that he name his pet rabbit "Jonah." Nosiglia, an employe of the Weymouth Water Department and guard at the Great Pond Pumping Station, reported shooting a six-foot water snake on the shore of the pond, and was surprised to see a small rabit leap from the snake's mouth. He captured the rabbit which apparently was swallowed by the snake a short time before the reptile was shot.

Not a Secret Gun, But an Airplane Part

At first sight this looks like a huge gun. But in reality it is a part which will go to make up the airplane, most likely its fuselage. Aircraft construction must be carried out to the minutest precision by testing. Before an airplane can be sent out to fly every part of its make must undergo strictest examination. The German manufacturers know this to be their cardinal rule of construction. Here in a German factory the above part is being tested for its stability by means of heavy weights.

DEBATE LOOMS SOON ON NIGHT BASEBALL

As Nocturnal Playing Only Novelty Yet, Big Leagues Uncertain It's Here to Stay

I.N.S.

NEW YORK, June 21.—How big is night baseball and how big is it going to be?

That's a question which will be hotly debated before the season is much older and on the answer may depend the success or failure of the experiment introduced by L. S. (Larry) MacPhail at Cincinnati only a few years back. The success of the game to date has been a tremendous compliment to MacPhail's judgment, but, like everything else, the night game now faces an overdose of attention.

Several club owners have been hollering that the number of night games should be increased from seven to 10 or 15 per season. They claim that the defense program makes it impossible for many day games as formerly.

It is most peculiar coincidence that the owners who have discovered this, have poor ball clubs and sad treasuries. While it is only logical for them to beef about their lack of attendance and seek means to get their ledgers in order, it is a dangerous practice to ask for uncurtailed night ball.

Ffteen games per season, if O. K.'d at the major league meetings this year, would lead to requests for 20 next year and so forth until some bright young man would suggest playing all major league games at night.

MacPhail, who should know, demands that a unanimous vote of all club presidents be required before any change in the limit of seven are light games per season be permitted for the National League.

And as long as he is in the league he promises to provide the vote against any increase.

In the American League Bill DeWitt of the Browns was granted permission for 14 night games last year. They wanted the same privilege again this time and had Connie Mack of the Athletics interested in a similar request. Judge Kenesaw M. Landis intervened at the league pow-wow in December and vetoed the idea.

Here's the reason too many night game would undo all the good the idea has done: Night ball is a novelty—once the novelty is exaggerated or lost—you have to find new means of making the game attractive. This has been proved in the minors where the night schedule was soon augmented with potato sack races, bank night, bingo and plenty of other side-show stuff which all but dwarfed the main attraction of the evening, the ball game.

If that kind of super-ballyhoo is to come to baseball—what will happen to the prestige of the sport that is justly called America's National Pastime?

Here's hoping the cash needs of a few moguls doesn't blind the good judgment of the majority and night baseball continues to enjoy its proper high place in the diamond scheme of things.

OHIO NEGRO SEEKS BOUT WITH JOE LOUIS

Lanky Lem Franklin Thinks He Can Outsock Champ—K.O. Victims Number 21

I.N.S.

DES MOINES, Iowa, June 21.—Despite a broken hand, which temporarily put him out of competition, Lem Franklin, lanky Cleveland, Ohio, negro, today is favored among Midwest fight fans as the most likely to usurp Joe Louis' heavyweight crown when and if the time comes for a chance.

Franklin is a "plumb mean boy" in the ring, according to his father "Pops" Franklin, who doubles as Lem's manager and adviser. His meanness has manifested itself in fights with such heavies as Abe Simon, Lee Savold, Willie Reddish, Eddie Blunt, Carl Vinciquerra, Tony Musto, Perk Daniels and Selman Martin, all of whom he lists among his 25 victims in his 28 professional fights.

K.O. Victims Number 21

"Pops" points out that 21 of Lem's wins were by kayoes. Before starting to fight for pay, Lem won 27 amateur fights by knockouts.

The broken hand resulted from a recent 10-round bout with Martin in Des Moines, which Franklin won, and necessitated cancellation of a match with his fellow-Clevelander, Eddie Simms, in Omaha.

Lem, with the same sort of modesty that has characterized 14 or 15 other heavyweights in recent years, believes Joe Louis is made to order for the Franklin fists.

"I'd sure like to fight Louis," he said. "I think I can outsock Joe."

"Pops" is optimistic enough to think the fight will be arranged soon. "I wouldn't say Louis is trying to duck him," the elder Franklin said. "It's a business proposition with him. When the public demands a fight between Lem and Joe, there'll be one."

As his record indicates, Franklin packs a hard right and has come to be highly regarded among critics. Two recent listings placed him fourth among the heavies, with only Billy Conn and Arturo Godoy between him and the head man.

Career Began in CCC

Lem owes his present prominence to the government's athletic program for Civilian Conservation Corps youths. He went to a CCC camps seven years ago, when he was 16.

"The boy was just playing around in the streets so I sent him to the camp," his dad said. "While he was in the camp Lem whipped all comers and began to think about a fighting career. He weighed 190.

Franklin was born in Mobile, and moved with his family while a baby to Pennsylvania and later to Cleveland. He is a high school graduate, talks quietly and intelligently, shoots pool with his dad and says he "loves to bowl."

GERMAN OFFICERS IN THICK OF FIGHT

War Correspondent Cites Case Of Guderian Inspector of Panzer Troops

D.N.B.

BERLIN, July 11.—In the campaign against Soviet Russia, the German commanding generals are at the head of their troops in the very front line, says War correspondent Herbert Jahn citing his meeting with the inspector of the German Panzer troops, Colonel General Heinz Guderian, who was promoted to this rank by the Fuehrer in appreciation of his achievements as commander of panzer troops in the campaign in the West.

Commander-in-Chief Guderian, after a brief survey of the situation placed himself with his small staff at the very head of the advancing panzers. His staff manned two armored vehicles, which with their commander drove out in front of the panzer columns. Guderian is a man in his fifties, but looks much younger. His face is dominated by two eyes which at times look kind but at times piercing.

Now he stands upright on the top of his armored car and his eyes are looking straight ahead along the road on which heretofore no German soldier has traveled. The road is completely empty but there might be enemies on all sides. Some shots are fired from nearby woods, while snipers from lonely houses not far from the roadside are opening fire from automatic rifles. But he pays no attention. His car is proceeding forward relentlessly at 60 km. an hour. Suddenly at the place where a bridge crosses a small river a number of houses comes in sight. They belong to the Soviet Russian rearguards who apparently are busy blowing up the bridge.

Guderian Acts Quickly

The Colonel General knows how important this bridge is for the advance of his panzers. There is no time to call someone else. So his own car which is far ahead of the panzer columns shoots forward to prevent the Soviet Russian troops from accomplishing their job. They hurriedly mount their horses and gallop off. A young officer in his motorcycle pursues them. Falling into ambush he is killed. The lifeless lieutenant's hands still grip his machine pistol. He was one of the bravest who lost his life here.

Two days later Guderian drove with the foremost panzers into a Russian town for a conference with the commanding general and division generals whose units were fighting there. The houses were shaking from the impact of the Russian shells and the small group of high officers repeatedly had to take cover. The quick luncheon they took between the conferences was frequently interrupted. Guderian loses no word about it, as though the exploding shells were falling timber and bricks and the shaking and rattling of the cookery the most natural event.

Cool Nerves Indispensable

Suddenly the noise of the bursting shells is interrupted by the belching cannons of armored cars. Some enemy tanks have succeeded in getting into the rear of the German front and are penetrating into the town. The high officers are preparing for defense. The enemy tank drives up straight to the Colonel General's armored car. But one of the crew of the Colonel's car, Lance corporal Andash does not lose his nerve and heaves handgrenades at the Soviet Russian tank. His action perhaps saved the group of generals. The Soviet tank attack is repelled. But now it proves that the town is completely encircled by the enemy forces, while beyond the town the German panzers are gaining ground further eastward.

Guderian must join his staff. In order to mislead the enemy an uncoded message is wirelessed, stating that Guderian will remain in the town. Then Guderian mounts his heavy panzer to reconnoiter toward the enemy line. For two hours his staff officers are waiting for his return. Then he comes and his small group of vehicles starts to break through the enemy lines. Guderian is standing upright in his car, directing the movements over the byroads of the marshy territory through thick underbrush, avoiding the main road which is held by the enemy. Several times the car gets stalled, while bullets are whistling over their heads. But they are not abandoned. All cars join to drag them out. Finally when dusk is falling Guderian and his escort are reaching the staff headquarters. Guderian jumps out laughingly, rubbing his hands like someone who has just played an impudent trick.

ITALIAN CONSULATE CLOSING

Manila Branch to End July 15—Consul Leaving Earlier

Reuters

MANILA, July 7.—The Italian Consulate will close on July 15, the High Commissioner, Francis B. Sayre, has been advised by Washington.

The Italian Consul, Count L. di San Marzano, will leave Manila earlier.

The German Consul, Herr Lautenschlaeger, and his wife are sailing for Shanghai prior to July 14, possibly with the Italian Consul.

Tend Pet Cemetery

I.N.S.

FORT LEWIS, Washington, July 22.—Just off a Fort Lewis road over which army trucks rumble day and night but shut off from post activities by the quiet of a forest glen, is as neat a cemetery as there is in the world. Resting there are "Pup" and "Turk" and "Fifi" and "Wolf"—and several dozen others—dog mascots of the thousand of soldiers who have been quartered at the big Pacific Northwest army camp. Soldiers who miss their own pets, tend the cemetery with loving care.

Red Soldiers on the March

These are soldiers of Stalin's army, members of a heavy machine-gun unit. They are crossing a mountain stream by a felled tree. Soon after reaching their objective, and after picking a suitable site they will have the deadly gun in action in record time, each of the men being trained with a special job in the process of setting up their weapon.

WORK OR JOIN ARMY, U.S. GENERAL SAYS

Hershey Tells Draft Boards to Reclassify Essential Workers Who Quit Jobs

In a sweeping "Work or Fight" edict similar to the one invoked by President Wilson against strikers during the World War, Brigadier-General Lewis B. Hershey, deputy director of selective service, ordered state directors recently to reclassify all draft registrants who have been deferred from service because they were employed in essential defense jobs but who "have ceased to perform" these jobs and instead, are "impeding the national defense program," a Washington dispatch to the New York Herald-Tribune states.

In a telegram prepared with the approval of President Roosevelt, General Hershey made it clear to the state directors that the Government does not intend to tolerate any interference with defense production by deferred workers, and that such trouble makers will be immediately reclassified and called up for military service.

The drastic action by General Hershey was announced at a press conference called by Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, to discuss the steps which the Government is taking to deal with the strike at the North American Aviation plant at Inglewood, California.

Meanwhile, Congress discussed modification of the selective service act to allow older men to be deferred.

Strike Ban Discussed

Although the main body of the bill to modify the act is designed to lower the upper age limit set for the selectees from 35 years to 27, most of the discussion in the Senate centered about amendments to give to President Roosevelt sweeping authority to end strikes in defense industries.

A House military affairs subcommittee reported against the full committee consideration of Roosevelt administration legislation to authorize defernment of older registrants by age groups.

Senator Charles L. McNary, Republican, of Oregon, and Senator Robert M. La Follette jr., Progressive, of Wisconsin objected to immediate consideration of the measure to change the selective service act, to which the anti-strike amendments had been offered.

Senators James F. Byrnes, Democrat, of South Carolina, and Tom Connally, Democrat, of Texas, discussed the amendments briefly before the objections were raised.

Senator Connally's amendment would enable the President to take over all plants equipped for manufacture of defense articles, or any factories capable of being readily transformed into such plants, provided a failure of production was threatened by strikes or labor disturbances.

A compromise amendment proposed by Senator Byrnes would enable the President, after consultation with the War or Navy Departments or any other agency, to take over and operate with Government personnel or lease any plant equipped for the manufacture or storage of supplies of any type needed for national defense.

General Hershey's Order

The telegram sent by General Hershey to the state directors read:

"The President has proclaimed a state of national emergency. The government of the United States is exerting every possible effort to place this nation in a position which will insure its self-preservation. Congress has enacted the selective training and service act for the purpose of securing adequate men and has appropriated funds for the procurement of essential arms and equipment for the armed forces. Men by the hundreds of thousands have been selected and are now in training under the selective service act.

"These men are giving their whole efforts to become strong in body, disciplined in mind, skilled and trained in the methods by which the country will be defended. There citizen soldiers have been promised that arms, supplies and equipment will be furnished by their fellow citizens who are engaged in the production of ships, airplanes, tanks, guns and other necessary munitions and supplies.

"They know that other registrants have been deferred from service in the armed forces to accomplish that purpose. They demand that no citizen hesitate to do his full share in the strengthening of the defense of America. Our citizen soldiers have merged their individual desires in the common objective, the citizens who have been deferred because they are necessary in the production of defense supplies and equipment may not refuse to do likewise.

"The basic principle upon which selective service operates is to keep the man on the job where he can render the greatest service to his government. The citizen who has been deferred because of the job he is performing in the national defense program cannot expect to retain the status of deferment when he ceases to work on the job for which he was deferred. The status of deferment and the responsibility to perform the necessary work are inseparable.

"Therefore, I hereby direct all agencies of the Selective Service system to take the necessary action to reconsider the classification of all registrants who have ceased to perform the jobs for which they were deferred, and who are, by such failure, impeding the national defense program."

KING OF AFGHANISTAN PROCLAIMS NEUTRALITY

Country Hopes to Maintain Cordial Relations With Belligerent Powers

Reuters

KABUL, July 6.—Afghanistan's decision to remain completely neutral in the present war was emphasized by the King, Al Mutawakkilala-Allah Mohammed Zahir Shah, when he opened the second annual session of the 4th Afghan Parliament.

Afghanistan, he said, was pursuing a policy of complete neutrality and hoped to maintain cordial political and economic relations with the belligerent Powers, simultaneously safeguarding her own rights and interests.

The King stated Afghanistan had always followed an independent policy which was inspired by a desire to safeguard her national interests and rights and to help the establishment of world peace by cooperation with others.

He urged the deputies as representatives of the nation to make adequate preparations to meet any eventually that might arise.

Arrests 'Easter Rabbit'

I.N.S.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 20.—Police officer L. M. The prisoner was carrying a basket of Easter Eggs and told the officer he was just a little Easter rabbit, celebrating Easter early. He was booked for drunkenness.

BRITISH VIEWS SPLIT ON WAR METHODS

Productive Power of Munitions Industries' Hampered by Labor Shortage

Although England is rejoicing over the Reich-Soviet clash which has continued over half a month, divergence of opinions regarding the methods of warfare against Germany to be carried out while the country is engaging her main might against the Soviet Union, prevails among English official and civilian circles, reports a London dispatch to the Nichi Nichi.

United opinion prevails in England that the productive power of her munitions industries must be amplified during the period while Germany is putting forth her main effort in the German-Soviet war. Because of shortages of labor power and materials, however, a 100 per cent productive efficiency has not yet been attained. Varied opinions based on complicated interests are being revealed regarding the problem of assisting the Soviet Union in its war against Germany.

Examined from the military standpoint, British bombers are carrying on raids into Germany day and night which can be viewed as an aspect of assistance to the Soviet Union. A doubt regarding the effects of the bombings on the actual strength of Germany, however, is seen among the English public. Although strict caution concerning the Royal Air Force is being maintained by newspapers, criticisms concerning the degree of effectiveness of British bombings in Germany appear in editorials. Opinions differ regarding methods of warfare to be taken against Germany outside of bombing as follows.

An opinion that England should not take any military action outside of bombings as her armaments are not fully prepared to take the offensive, is being held in certain quarters.

Some persons advocate that small-scale landings on the coasts of the occupied countries should be repeatedly carried out and thus threaten Germany with guerrilla tactics.

However a different opinion is also being held by some that the regular general offensive should be taken at this opportunity as small-scale landings cannot threaten Germany.

It looks as though Government circles are upholding the first opinion.

Viewing from the political standpoint, movements concerning extending assistance to the Soviet Union are being carried out openly and secretly by Leftist and Rightist parties. Although the consent of war by the Communist party which had been formerly against war, has become beneficial to the Government, the Communist party is approaching the Government for a more positive assistance to be given to the Soviet and also for the conclusion of an alliance with that country. Leftist circles are all moving along similar lines as the Communist party. The Daily Herald is advocating positive means of assistance to be given to the Soviet Union and labor unions are approaching the Government with conviction that the assistance to the Soviet is lukewarm.

A movement of the Leftists in this respect can be seen in the fact that the Soviet Ambassador to England was very popular on the occasion of the banquet held on July 7, by the China Affair Committee, where extending of assistance to the Soviet was voiced louder than that of providing China with help. It can be seen that the movement of the Leftists will take on more importance. There is also an impression that restraint will be brought to bear on the Government if it goes to extremes.

A question was asked in Parliament why the British Broadcasting Corporation does not give a program of Communist songs when the national anthems of allied countries are being played every Sunday. A reply was given to this question that the Soviet Union is not an ally country. This indicates the delicate atmosphere prevailing around the problem of extending assistance to the Soviet.

The above difference of opinions from the political standpoint combined with opinions from the military standpoint presents a difficult problem to England. At present the power of Premier Churchill is sufficient to control the Leftists and the Rightists. It is therefore natural that extending of assistance to the Soviet Union will follow that path taken by Premier Churchill. But the attitude of Premier Churchill and its reaction is of deep interest upon reaching a new stage in this respect.

FEARS DRAFT WILL FORCE COLLEGE TO CUT COURSE

If Service Act Not Amended, Graduation Must Be in Three Years

I.N.S.

CARLISLE, Pennsylvania, June 28.—American colleges may find it necessary to graduate students in three years to avert the threat of depleted student ranks unless the selective service act is amended, contends Dr. Guy E. Snavely, executive director of the Association of American Colleges.

The current world crisis was viewed by Dr. Snavely as a serious threat to the American educational system.

"It is hoped that responsible parties will not delay too long in realizing the absolute necessity of maintaining a sizeable reservoir of educated leadership for all the problems that arise during the war," said Dr. Snavely.

"Liberal arts colleges must be prepared to oppose any trend toward shackling the colleges with governmental control, which follows inexorably upon state support."

I.N.S.

INDIANTOWN GAP, Pennsylvania, July 22.—Officers and enlisted men of Pennsylvania's 28th division, encamped at the Indiantown Gap military base, went through the camp gas chamber—a remodeled garage—to gain confidence that their gas masks will provide protection. Only tear gas was used in the chamber.

U.S. War Attitude Weighed in Balance

tion, the President is unable to lead the public to war openly. Also the relations with Japan are another reason that is making the President hesitate to decide war participation.

It is the greatest worry of the United States that unless some political understanding is reached with Japan she cannot move the Pacific fleet to the Atlantic. Some persons are insisting that understanding should be speedily made with Japan so that the Pacific fleet can be taken to the Atlantic. Then others are saying that it is impossible to come to an understanding with Japan that joined the Tripartite Alliance and as Britain cannot win with only material aid from the United States, the Pacific fleet should be immediately moved to the Atlantic so that more aid can be given to Britain.

Pacific Fleet Moves

Actually a portion of the Pacific fleet, including capital ships, is now said to be on its way from the Pacific to the Atlantic. It is said that the prohibition of the night passage of the Panama Canal is on that account.

Then Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles said that the report of Japanese newspapers that the United States is intending to gain bases in Siberia is a German propaganda for straining the American-Japanese relations.

Yet it is a fact that while relations with Japan are not improved, the aids to Chungking and the Soviet are intensified. To China, arms and munitions amounting to $6,350,000 were sent up to the end of May, mainly consisting of airplanes, and the total will reach $8,360,000, when shipments before May are added. Being unable to take any actual steps in the Pacific the United States can only restrain Japan by helping Chungking.

Again the uncertainty of the future of the German-Soviet war is also making the United States hesitate in war participation. At first it was predicted that in two to three months, the Soviet Army would be annihilated, but as the Red Army is checking the German advance, various observations are being made here. Yesterday Ambassador Oumansky conferred with the President for the first time in three years, but public opinion is divided on the aid to the Soviet and actual aids will be impossible.

Thus the Government is gradually leading public opinion to war, and when the attitude of Japan and the future of the German-Soviet war is ascertained the Government will decide war participation. Yet it is true that the United States is steadily headed toward war.

London Landmark Disappears

The North Tower of the Crystal Palace, one of the most famous landmarks on the outskirts of London, was blown up after all persons living in the neighborhood had been temporarily removed for safety. The resulting scrap, nearly 800 tons of cast and wrought iron will go to factories and be used in the manufacture of war materials. Photo shows the Tower actually collapsing after the explosive charge of gelignite had been fired.

CELLS DISCOVERED TO KILL T. B. GERMS

Cornell University Medical College Professor Says Body Carries Foe of Bacillus

A report on the ability of certain cells of the human body to engulf and destroy the bacillus of tuberculosis was made public recently by Dr. Morton C. Kahn, associate professor of public health and preventive medicine of Cornell University Medical College-New York Hospital Association, after a study of three and a half years aided by a grant from the National Tuberculosis Association, the New York Herald Tribune reports.

The cells, known as histiocytes, have been observed to engulf tuberculosis bacilli, but the first experiments made on living cells were undertaken by Dr. Kahn with a recently developed technique for isolating a single histiocyte and transferring it to a culture medium for observation.

It was found, Dr. Kahn said recently, that in all but 2 per cent of the cases bacilli which had been engulfed by the histiocytes were killed or their growth was inhibited, while free bacilli in a similar medium thrived.

Called Natural Defender

The histiocytes provide a natural defender against tuberculosis in the human body, according to Dr. Kahn, who said that further research may suggest a method of mobilizing more histiocytes and improving their effectiveness, or, less probably, extracting the supposed chemical or enzyme within the cells which is presumed to destroy the tuberculosis bacillus.

Except for histiocytes, the only known defense in the human body against tuberculosis is a fluid in the blood believed to contain anti-bodies, but the effectiveness of the fluid is far from certain, Dr. Kahn said.

Describing his experiments, he said that a sterile irritant was introduced into the peritoneal cavities of guinea pigs in order to cause a migration of histiocytes to that point. Then tuberculosis bacilli were injected and the histiocytes were removed after a time to allow for engulfing.

Other Germs Destroyed

An average of 34.8 per cent of the histiocytes removed from the subjects had engulfed bacilli, Dr. Kahn said, and those which had done so were isolated and planted in culture mediums at the same time that approximately the same number of free bacilli were planted in similar mediums.

Other germs, such as typhoid germs, are macerated and destroyed when engulfed by histiocytes, but the tuberculosis bacilli remain unchanged in form, Dr. Kahn said, indicating that the cells contain a chemical or enzyme which either kill the bacilli or prevents their multiplication in the majority of instances.

Dr. Kahn gave the opinion that his experiments disprove the suggestion, previously made, that histiocytes might be agents of distribution of tuberculosis bacilli, without destructive effect on the germs.

BRAIN CONCUSSION IS PERIL TO PILOT

High-Speed Dives and Turns May Bring About Heart Injury, Shock to Fliers

Brain concussions, heart injury and nerve disorders are becoming great perils to pilots and crews of dive bombers and high speech pursuit planes, the New York Herald Tribune reports.

Two physicians, who have made extensive studies on the problems of military flying told members of the American Medical Association recently at Cleveland, Ohio, that these conditions have developed entirely new problems in the selection, training and care of pilots.

Dr. John F. Fulton, of Yale University, said that when a pilot pulls out of a steep dive or makes a very sharp turn at 300 miles an hour, with his plane standing on its wing tip, he frequently gets a concussion of the brain which is just as severe as if he had received a blow on the head with a blackjack.

The same thing occurs with pilots of planes catapulted from a battleship. The pilot goes completely unconscious from the moment he gives the "ready" signal until he finds himself in the air, moving at 200 miles an hour.

Such shocks are due to a sudden drainage of blood from the brain. Experiments are under way to protect pilots from such "blackouts" with rubber collars and "lifebelts" which prevent the blood from such rapid shifting and the concussions which follow, too many of which may make a man unfit for flying.

A pilot's nervous system can stand the shock of a dive pullout or a sharp turn for only a few seconds. And while the brain and nerves are affected the heart is also thrown into a state of shock.

Oxygen lack is second only to high speed as a danger in flying, the Yale physician and Major M. S. White, of the Aviation Medical School at Randolph Field, Texas, agreed.

Research Medals Awarded

Research into the production and use in the body of cholic acid, the chemical progenitor of many vitamins, hormones and cancer-producing substances, won the gold medal of the American Medical Association for Dr. Alvin L. Berman, Dr. F. S. Grodins and Dr. A. C. Ivy, of Northwestern University, Chicago.

Two gold medals, two silver medals, two bronze medals and 31 other awards were presented to the medical men and other scientists at an exhibition in the Cleveland Auditorium.

As a result of the investigations carried on by the Northwestern University group, it will now be possible for the medical profession to prescribe bile salts which will regulate the operations of the liver and the gall bladder, eliminate inflammation of these organs and correct certain digestive disorders. With the new knowledge it will be possible for a person to be kept healthy even without a gall bladder. Six scientists have worked on the project for several years.

Find Way to Alter Bile

By oxidizing cholic acid, a constituent of the bile fluid, and modifications of it that are produced naturally in the liver, and using each substance separately, Dr. Ivy said, it was found possible to alter the bile and produce bile fluids of a wide variety of characteristics ranging from a thin, watery fluid produced in greatly increased amounts to a thick fluid that would jell and is produced in far lesser amounts.

The various derivatives are now available as separate chemicals and can be used to produce desired changes in the digestive acids produced by the liver.

The production of bile in the liver is stimulated by the proteins taken in the diet and depressed by sugars and fats. Cholic acid, the principal constituent of the bile fluid, is made from amino acids obtained from the proteins in cod. By uniting with glycine, another amino acid, and taurine, a breakdown product of another such acid, the bile fluid is formed.

Cholic acid, said Dr. Ivy, is related chemically to the sex hormones, the adrenal cortical hormone, vitamins A, D and E and to the cancer-producing hydrocarbons, but the present work does not throw any light on how the body produces these vital substances, most of which are highly essential to the maintenance of life and a few of them destructive.

The silver scientific medal was received by Dr. Harold Thomas Hyman, Dr. William Leifer and Dr. Louis Chargin, of Mount Sinai Hospital, New York, for their exhibit describing the massive dose chemotherapy method of treating early syphilis by the intravenous drip method.

The bronze medal was awarded to the Mayo Foundation group, of Rochester, Minnesota for investigations into physiological problems in aviation medicine conducted by Dr. Walter N. Boothby, Dr. W. R. Lovelace, Dr. C. W. Mayo and Dr. A. H. Bulbulian. Three medals were given for exhibits not devoted to experimental investigations.

The gold medal went to Dr. Waltman Walters, Dr. Howard K. Gray and Dr. James T. Priestly, of the Mayo Clinic, for an exhibit on cancer of the stomach, demonstrating the importance of early treatment.

The silver medal was received by Dr. Grover C. Penberthy and Dr. Charles N. Weller, of the Children's Hospital of Michigan and the Wayne University College of Medicine, for their exhibit illustrating the treatment of burns.

A bronze medal went to Dr. G. V. Brindley, of the Scott and White Hospital, Temple, Texas who illustrated operations for cancer of the colon.

FOOTBALL ALL-STARS TO DRILL AUGUST 13

1941 Eastern College Picked Squad to Train for N.Y. Giants Game September 3

The 1941 Eastern College All-Star football team will train at the New York Military Academy, Cornwall on Hudson, for the sixth annual Tribune Fresh Air Fund game against the New York Giants, which will be played in the Polo Grounds the night of September 3, according to the New York Herald Tribune. Practice will begin on Wednesday, August 13. This will provide a training period of exactly three weeks, three days longer than that of last years' All-Stars who defeated the Giants, 16 to 7.

This will be the third year of training at New York Military Academy. Numerous schools and colleges offered their facilities to the All-Star team, but after consideration of all possible sites, Jim Crowley, of Fordham, the coach, decided on the site picked by his two immediate predecessors, Tuss McLaughry and Jock Sutherland.

The All-Star squad, which is now in process of formation, will report in New York on the morning of August 13 and will go to Cornwall on Hudson by bus in time for lunch. The first afternoon will be occupied with fitting uniforms, physical examinations and a brief practice session. Thereafter the All-Stars will practice twice a day until Crowley considers they have reached the tapering-off stage.

Arrangements are being made for a series of practice scrimmages with a professional team. One of the many advantages in training at Cornwall is that the All-Stars have been able to use the indoor field at the United States Military Academy, six miles away, in rainy weather.

Arrangements for training at Cornwall were made yesterday after a consultation with Lieutenant Colonel Frank A. Pattillo, superintendent of New York Military Academy. As has been the case for two years, the All-Stars will take over the entire school, will have their rooms in North Barracks and take their meals in the large mess hall.

At the moment the All-Star squad is largely theoretical. However, Crowley has visited most of the colleges of the East and has a fair idea of the squad's eventual make-up.

Almost all prominent players who are graduating this month have signified a desire to play, provided the game does not interfere with their military service. The majority of the players contacted do not expect to be called to the Army prior to the game.

Crowley is proceeding to organize the squad on the same lines as that of last year. He will make an effort to have balanced strength and will pay scant attention to all-America ranking unless investigation proves it was warranted. This squad, like that of last year, undoubtedly will include numerous players from small colleges, players whose names are unknown to all but the keenest football fans.

Crowley has completed the organization of his staff of coaches. Ed Franco, guard on the All-Star team of 1938 and line coach at Fordham will handle the All-Star line. Ed Kosky, Fordham end coach and former Notre Dame player, will coach the ends. Crowley expects to appoint a trainer shortly.

the Kuge during the latter Ashikaga Period. That is synonymous with the impoverishment of the Imperial Court. Never before had the Imperial Court been reduced to such a sorry state. Most of the annual festivals and observances of the Court were dispensed with.

Unhappiest Name in Japan

Toward the end of the Tokugawa regime the hate of the Ashikagas was much boosted among the people by the loyalist ronin fighting for the Imperial cause. Unable to lift an accusing finger against the Tokugawa rulers, they vicariously directed their satire and invective against the Ashikagas. The most dramatic exemplification of this was seen one day in April, 1853, when the citizens of Kyoto were treated to the tragi-comic spectacle of the three Ashikaga Shoguns, i.e., Takauji, Yoshinori and Yoshimitsu, beheaded in effigy on the dry bed of the Kamogawa where the heads of executed criminals were usualy exposed, with a mocking proclamation underneath each head stating how he deserved this fate.

Since the Restoration, we all know, the campaign for loyalty to the Throne has been continuously carried on, and whenever high examples of loyalty are mentioned, such as Kiyomaro and Masashige, we invariably think of their foes—Dokyo and Ashikaga—be they mentioned or no. Ashikaga is the unhappiest name in Japan. In our own times there have been cases where men who had so far forgotten themselves as to publicly defend the character of Takauji and were virtually ostracized. Indeed most historians agree in saying that Takauji was one of the most astute statesmen ever born, but all the statesmanship in the world or the most brilliant talent or taste would count for nothing if its possessor lacked the one thing necessary that made the loyal Japanese subject. No amount of cleverness or industry has ever made the devil any less of a devil than he was. This is a personal view, but both Yoshimitsu and Yoshimasa, with all their aesthetic greatness, were more of a fool than knaves and foolishness often constitutes a more unpardonable sin in the eyes of men and gods than the worst offense in the criminal calendar.

PEOPLE OF BERLIN GREET WAR GAINS

Press Plays Up Troops' Breaking Through of Stalin Line

D.N.B.

BERLIN, July 14.—The special report, issued by the Fuehrer's headquarters on Sunday night about the German troops breaking through the Stalin line in their advance upon Leningrad was enthusiastically received at Berlin.

The joy of the population is all the greater since the High Command of the armed forces after days of silence now again could report great successes in the East. The Berlin newspapers featured the new victory under banner-lines on the front pages which, as the special report was issued late were practically all made over. In boldface type the reports emphasized that the Stalin line had been broken through at all decisive points of the Eastern front. They also reported that the German troops North East of the Dniestr river are close to Kiev and that the German panzer units are on the march toward Leningrad.

The Berlin official quarters are stressing the decisive character of the present fighting in the East. If it is recalled that the Stalin line was meant to fill the gap in the natural defenses of the Soviets along the Duna River and Dnieper it is evident that the penetration this line is clearing the way for the German advance toward Moscow. The achievements of the German troops are stupendous, Berlin declares. No less important is the fact that the German panzer units are rolling on ward east of the Peipus Lake toward Leningrad. It is pointed out that Leningrad is the key position of the Soviet armament industries and also for the supply of Russia in general. If the Germans succeed in taking Leningrad, the entire Soviet Baltic fleet would be deprived of its base, which is particularly significant as soon all communications of the Bolshevists with the North and Arctic regions will be cut off, it is said.

Rumanians Also Advance

A particularly pleasing surprise was the report that now also the German Rumanian troops threw the enemy in a broad front across the Dniestr river. It shows that also this front of the Bolshevist armies is crumbling. Kiev is not only the capital of the Ukraine but also an industrial and administrational center of the entire southern part of the Soviet Union. The area around Kiev is one of the Russian granaries, while Kiev itself is the center of the Bolshevist air armament with the coal deposits of the Donez basin for a base.

The threefold thrust of the German forces toward Leningrad, Moscow and Kiev shows that the German command is about to deal terrible blows to the chief economic and administrational centers of the European part of the Soviet Union. This proves clearly the decisive character of the latest battles.

At several points the German troops advanced already to 100 km. beyond the Stalin line. In some sectors this line had a depth of 50 km. through which the German formations had forced their way. The decisive turn in the Eastern campaign has now been reached, so it is stated here.

The fourth stage of the developments has been begun—the stage of decision. It was preceded by the ramming of the frontier fortifications, secondly by the battles of destruction and thirdly by the penetration of the Stalin line. When in the last year in the West the Weygand line had been pierced it was followed by the fall of Paris and the smashing of the enemy resistance. It is hard to see why this should not repeat itself in the East.

German shock troops on their way forward in a wood captured 300 Soviet soldiers who with raised hands emerged from a thicket. One sergeant, waving a piece of white cloth shouted: "Don't shoot! We are friends." When they were taken to the German lines, the deserters declared that many comrades would soon follow their example. They repeatedly asked the interpreter to give them some food, since they had nothing to east for days.

London-Moscow Pact No Alarm

The announcement of the mutual assistance pact between London and Moscow for the defeat of National Socialist Germany has not caused any surprise in Berlin, since it will be of no importance for the further course events, it was pointed out in competent German quarters.

If two people are about to fall and are clinging to one another at the last moment that does not prevent them from falling, so the Government spokesman declared, and added: The only remarkable point of the pact is that it is a public document of the anti-European tendency of the British plutocracy. The new agreement will in no case alter the course of events which advanced already to a point that there is no more any doubt in regard to the just punishment which will take the shape of complete annihilation of the British plutocracy as well as of Bolshevism.

Y.C.A.C. Basketballers Beaten by J. Club Five In Businessmen's Game

The Yokohama Country and Athletic Club's basketball team was defeated by the J. Club quintet, 39 to 32, in the Kanagawa Prefecture businessmen's championship tournament on Sunday at the Ohka Primary School, Yokohama. The Y.C. and A.C. five played without any relief due to the absence of a number of its regulars. It held the lead until the last five minutes, when the J. Club staged a rally which the tiring Y.C. and A.C. squad could not match. The J. Club went on the win the championship by defeating the Sasarindo team by 41 to 34 in the final, and gain possession of the Heseltine Challenge Trophy for one year. Playing for the Y.C. and A.C. were S. G. Bielous (acting captain), R. R. Harriss, G. R. Fachtmann, E. Eymard and J. da Costa.

WORLD DOMINATION IS ROOSEVELT'S AIM

Budapest Paper Says President Intends to Fall Heir to Britain's Power

D.N.B.

BUDAPEST, July 14.—Under the heading "Roosevelt once and now," the semi-official Pester Lloyd of Sunday published a noteworthy article on the development of United States policy in recent times. It comes to the conclusion that it was Roosevelt's aim to do everything at this decisive juncture of the war in order to get out of Great Britain as much as possible at the end of the war.

The article says, "After the latest step of Washington it is impossible to have any doubt as to the tendency towards active intervention. Since his reelection Roosevelt had systematically worked for the extension of the idea of help for England,blurred the limits between non-belligerency and intervention".

The paper then confronts Roosevelt's most important declarations on the foreign policy of the United States which he made from July, 1940, to the present day. The paper adds:

"When examining today's war situation we may perhaps find an explanation for this intensification of Roosevelt's course; the war has reached its decisive stage and there is hardly one great military power which in some or other any did not participate in the war. They have now to take up their final positions. It is impossible not to see behind the new policy Mr. Roosevelt's intention of securing for the United States after the war that world domination which so far was in the hands of Great Britain. Roosevelt sees world domination in possessing a strong navy. Therefore it is his main object to inherit the British seapower after the war in order to prevent the growth of the German sea power which is likely to rival that of the United States and to crush Japan's naval power. That these problems are closely connected with each other was recognized by those powers who have joined the Three Powers Pact."

Predicts World Wheat Surplus

Reuters

WASHINGTON, July 11.—"Within a year wheat surpluses totalling over 1,500,000 bushels will hang over the international market unless the world's wheat-growing nations take constructive measures to solve problems resulting from the war," declared Mr. Sumner Welles, Under-Secretary of State, at the opening of the International Wheat Conference today.

Y.C.A.C. LADIES' NINE TRIMS ST. MAUR'S 5-2

Both Bay City Teams Now Even In Three Tilts Each With a Win—First Game Tie

The Yokohama Country and Athletic Club ladies' softball team defeated the St. Maur's School ten by 5 to 2 at the club grounds Sunday afternoon to square its account with the students.

These bay city squads are now even in the three games they have played against each other this season, the first resulting in a tie, the second being won by the school girls and now the third by the Y.C. and A.C.

The home team made a decidedly improved showing on Sunday compared with the previous tilt against St. Maur's, hitting harder, fielding better and not being guilty of any of the mental lapses which marred the earlier encounter. St. Maur's also played well defensively, but did not have the hitting power of the opposition.

Teresita Planas pitched a good game for the Y.C. and A.C., holding the students to only one hit. She received good support from her teammates except for two innings, in which they slipped temporarily to be largely responsible for the two runs their opponents obtained.

The Y.C. and A.C. players showed considerable hitting power, getting 10 hits. They came through with safeties when they were most needed and earned the majority of their runs, for the students fielded well.

After blanking St. Maur's in the first half of the initial inning, the home team scored a run in their half of the same canto to gain the lead. Vera Albeck, the lead-off batter, got a hit and then stole second. With two away, Teresita Planas came through with a two-bagger to bring Miss Albeck home.

St. Maur's tied the count at one-all in the fourth stanza. Mercedes de Souza got to first on a miscue, but Lala Balabushkin got a walk to fill the bases. Miss da Souza scored when the next girl up grounded out. The home squad then played heads up softball to retire the opposition before any further damage was done.

The Y.C. and A.C. staged a two-run rally in their half of the same stanza to take the ead again. Teresita Planas started off with a single and stole second. She reached third as Maria Prohaska grounded out, and crossed the plate on Louise Andreis' hit. Miss Andreis stole second, and when both Chai da Costa and Gertrude Satchel got free tickets to first, the bases were filled. Miss Andreis came home as the next batter rolled out.

The home team increased their margin by another point in the next stanza. Vera Albeck and Juliet Darbier both obtained walks to put runners on first and second with none away. Tessa Planas' single with one out filled the bases, and Maria Prohaska brought in Miss Albeck with her safety.

The Y.C. and A.C. made the score 5 to 1 in the sixth frame. Chai da Costa came through with a bingle and then stole second. She reached third as Gertrude Satchell rolled out and completed the circuit as Erica Papendieck grounded to the infield.

St. Maur's obtained its second and final run in the eighth inning. Two errors resulted in Sheila Belland Mercedes da Souza being perched on second and first, respectively. The former was out on a fielder's choice, but the latter reached second. Miss da Souza gained third on another miscue and came home as Lucille Apcar rolled out.

Teresita Planas had a great day, getting three hits in four trips to the plate, one of which was a two-bagger, as well as pitching a one-hit game. Chai the Costa obtained two hits in three attempts, while Maria Prohaska got two in four chances. Mary Stevens, Vera Albeck and Louise Andreis got a hit apiece, and Lena Salter played a good game as catcher.

For the students' Mercedes da Souza turned in a fine performance. She got the only hit for her side, and also the two run made, as well as doing well in the shortstop berth.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Joe McCarthy's Bronx Bombers won their 12th straight game and Joe DiMaggio extended his hitting streak to 51 consecutive tilts when the Yanks performed in St. Louis today.

Though out-hit, the New Yorkers bunched their blows, managed to lead throughout and emerged victorious by a 7 to 5 count.

DiMaggio appeared to be going on forever as he came through with a three-bagger and a double, making the count six hits in two days.

Five of the Yank runs were pushed over in the fourth inning, Phil Rizzuto, a rookie infielder, batted in two of the runs with a timely double.

The Boston Red Sox made it two straight over the Detroit Tigers, eking out a 7 to 5 win in the opener, and then running wild in the night-cap to win by a 10 to 2 score.

Bob Doerr, Red Sox infielder, was the hero of the opener as he knocked the ball out of the park in the fourth with the bases loaded.

In the second game, Jimmie Foxx led the batting attack with a homer and a two-bagger.

Lester McCrabb turned the Cleveland Indians back with five hits as the Philadelphia Athletics pushed over a 4 to 2 win.

The Athletics scored in the third and fifth frames, and collected hits off two Indian hurlers.

The Washington Senators led throughout as they defeated the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 3. Emil Leonard hurled the full game for the Senators and though he yielded nine hits, managed to keep them well scattered. He hurled shut-out ball after the fourth frame.

Reds Win

United Press

NEW YORK, July 12.—Bucky Walters hurled and batted the Cincinnati Reds to a narrow victory over the league leading Brooklyn Dodgers in the feature game of the Senior circuit.

The Reds nosed out the Dodgers 3 to 2 with Walters limiting his foes to six hits and holding them scoreless until the eighth frame.

The deciding score was pushed over in the seventh when Eddie Joost singled, advanced on a sacrifice and then moved on to third when Walters singled.

On the next play Joost came home on an infield out.

The St. Louis Cards lost an opportunity to pick up a game on the Dodgers by losing 6 to 4 to the New York Giants.

Hurler Robert Carpenter's single in the sixth drove in two of his teams runs. He also limited the Cards to seven hits and permitted only four runs despite wobbly support.

The Pittsburgh Pirates pushed over four runs in the eighth inning and two others in the fourth as they turned back the lowly Philadelphia Phillies 6 to 1.

John Lanning was on the hill for the Pirates and held his foes to six hits. John Podgajny and Ike Pearson handled the mound assignment for the Phillies and were nicked for eight hits.

Rain forced the postponement of the Chicago Cubs and Braves game at Boston in the second inning before either team had scored.

U.S. Regrets Brooklyn's 1851 Importation As English Sparrows Prove Menace to Crops

By a coincidence the Italian Government will try to reduce that country's English sparrow population, as a grain conservation measure, at a time when the United States has been afflicted with this assertive, greedy, tenacious, dirty and destructive little pariah for exactly 90 years, during which determined reduction efforts have failed dismally. Italian authorities have decided that the sparrows destroy so much grain especially wheat, as actually to handicap the nation's war effort.

In the summer of 1851, eight pairs of sparrows were liberated in Brooklyn, after having been taken there the previous fall, by Nicholas Pike and "other directors of the Brooklyn Museum" in the hope that they would destroy the inch worm threatening the shade trees which ranked with Henry Ward Beecher among the city's prides. These 16 birds failed to survive, a fact wholly incomprehensible to ornithologists from that day to this, because English sparrows have more lives than the proverbial cat. They survive as lustily in city grime as in manicured suburbs and sylvan fields. They are immune alike to broiling heat and boreal cold, and they are content with what food they can forage.

It has been said that the quick demise of the eight pairs was Nature's subtle warning to the importers that any interference with her balance was dangerous and bound to exact a dreadful penalty. Had Mr. Pike and his learned colleagues only given up the importation idea, their country and such other parts of the New World as Cuba, the Bahamas, Canada and even southern Greenland would have been spared a feathered pest.

Cemetery Starting Place

But the savants did not give up. In 1852 they imported English sparrows a second time, liberating the birds in Brooklyn's Greenwood Cemetery. This second importation was, from the viewpoint of those responsible, completely successful.

The sparrows, whose habitat previously had been confined to Europe, not only lived but made short work of the inch worms. It was not long before their importation became a fad. They were introduced at many points in both the eastern United States and Canada.

Then the trouble began. The sparrows multiplied with incedible rapidity. There are at least two broods every season, usually three and sometimes four or five. Scientists have calculated that in 10 years a single pair can have 275,716,983,698 descendants.

Clog Rainspouts

Congregating in huge flocks to roost, they proved to prefer for that purpose the eaves of houses the cornices of other buildings and vine-covered walls, all of which they speedly defiled. They carried nesting materials into rainspouts and gutters, poisoning cisterns and clogging pipes. They were persistent and redoubtable foes of the best loved native birds. Being year-around residents, the sparrows nested early in the spring, and when the native birds felt the nesting urge they found the best nesting sites pre-empted especially the bird houses provided by human friends of robins, bluebirds, thrushes and other favorite songsters. The sparrows even attacked these native species when they fed, and destroyed their eggs and young.

Worst of all, economically, the sparrows turned out to be fearfully destructive to crops. They devoured pears, peaches, grapes, cherries, buds, sprouting garden seeds, tender young vegetables like peas and lettuce; wheat, oats and other grains, whether newly sown, ripening or in stock.

Every State Infested

In the face of the unbelievable hardiness, adaptability, fecundity and aggressiveness of the sparrows, Americans and Canadians were helpless. By 1875 the birds had reached the Pacific Coast at San Francisco and had infested every state and territory of the Union and all of settled Canada. They were trapped, poisoned and shot by countless thousands; many states even offered bounties for dead sparrows, Michigan, in 1898, reportedly paying out "at least $50,000."

Today there are suburban localities from which the English sparrows have driven away most of the native song birds. A flock of 50 requires each day for food the equivalent of a quart of wheat, so the annual loss throughout the United States and most of Canada obviously is incalculable.

Ninety years after the introduction of the sparrows to these shores, it is only in the cities that they have decreased in the smallest degree, and that phenomenon has been relatively recent, for it is the result of the automobile age.

There is one way, and only one, in which the disappearance of English sparrows from the cities would be regrettable. They are the only birds that thousands of tenement children ever have seen.—New York Herald Tribune.

DIMAGGIO GRABS HIT 53 GAMES IN A ROW

Ted Williams Leading Leagues In Batting Taken Out of Game From Bad Ankle

United Press

NEW YORK, July 13.—The Yanks took an 11 inning 1 to 0 thriller from the Chicago White Sox this afternoon to extend their winning streak to 14 games after taking the first half of the double-header by an 8 to 1 count.

Joe DiMaggio boosted his sensational string of games with consecutive hits to 53. In the opener, Joe came through with three safe blows and in the nightcap he connected with a single in the sixth frame.

Fine hurling was supplied by the Yank moundsmen, with Spurgeon Chandler limiting the Sox to five hits and a lone run in the opener. The veteran Charles Ruffing yielded only three hits and no scores in the extra inning fray.

The big inning in the opener was the fourth when the Yanks shelled Ted Lyons and chased him from the mound after collecting a hole dozen runs. The other two scores crossed the plate in the ninth.

John Sturm, rookie Yank infielder, started the 11th inning rally with a two-bagger. He advanced on a bunt and came home on Tom Henrich's sacrifice fly.

The Cleveland Indians kept pace with the Yanks by sweeping their double-header with the Boston Red Sox by scores of 9 to 6 and 2 to 1. The second game went 11 innings.

Ken Keltner started off the 11th for the Indians with a single and then advanced to third on Jimmy Tabor's wild throw of Roy Weatherly's bunt. Ken came home with the winning run when the next Indian singled.

Geoffrey Heath, Indian garden-tender, led the batting assault in the opener by connecting with three hits, including a three-bagger in the first inning with two men on base.

Ted Williams, heavy-hitting Boston outfielder, was taken from the game suffering from what appeared to be a bad ankle injury.

The St. Louis Browns plunged into the American League cellar as a result of dropping both ends of their double-header to the Washington Senators.

The capital city club took the opener, 7 to 3, and pushed over a 6 to 5 win in the night-cap.

Cecil Travis, Washington infielder, hit safely for his 22nd consecutive game as he recorded two singles in the opener. The Senators led throughout and staged two-run rallies in the second and eighth frames.

In the second half of the bargain day bill, the score was dead-locked from the fifth until the ninth when the Senators pushed over the deciding run.

The Philadelphia Athletics with a three-run rally in the ninth, downed the Detroit Tigers, 5 to 4. Jack Knott was on the mound for the A's and allowed only five hits.

Brooklyn's National League lead was whittled to 2½ games when the St. Louis Cards humbled the Phillies twice in their double-header today at the Quaker City.

Billy Southworth's St. Louis gang took the opener, 7 to 2 after staging a five-run rally in the initial frame. They took the night-cap, 8 to 5, after hammering three Phillie hurlers for 16 hits.

During the wild first inning, Terry Moore, John Mize, Jim Brown and Enos Slaughter recorded singles and Walker Cooper game through with a double. In addition, the Cards were aided by two errors and a wild pitch.

The Cards again bunched their hits in the second game, collecting three scores in both the third and sixth frames. During the second rally, successive hits were pounded out by James Brown, Don Padgett, Martin Marion, Ira Hutchinson and Frank Crespi, and Moore produced a sacrifice fly.

The circuit-leading Dodgers dropped the first half of their double-header to the Chicago Cubs by a 10 to 3 score when Claude Passeau turned them back with six hits. It was Passeau's ninth winof the season.

Stanley Hack was responsible for frame that produced two runs.

Dominic Dallessandro started the fireworks with a homer in the first four of the 16 hits the Cubs collected from four Brooklyn hurlers.

The Dodgers took the second game, 3 to 1, with Harold Reiser starting the scoring with a homer in the first inning. The other two runs crossed the plate in the fourth when Lou Riggs singled, Joe Medwick doubled and both came home when Bob Sturgeon committed a costly error.

Ken Heintzelman's south-paw plants were breaking beautifully as he pitched the Pirates to their seventh consecutive win in downing the New York Giants, 4 to 0. The Giants were turned back with two hits.

The Pirates sewed up the game in the eighth with a three-run rally, resulting from Elbert Fletcher's three-bagger, singles by Bob Elliott and Frank Gustine, and one error.

The old dependable Hal Schumacher was on the mound and allowed only five hits as the Giants broke the Pirates' winning streak with an 8 to 2 count.

Dick Bartell, an American League cast-off, led the batting attack for the Giants by connecting with four hits including a home.

Elmer Riddle recorded his 10th straight win and turned in a total of 23 straight scoreless innings in which no runner had advanced beyond second base as the Cincinnati Reds downed the Boston Braves, 4 to 0. Riddle allowed but five hits and had his foes in hand throughout.

Boston with a ninth-inning rally, came back to take the second game, 6 to 5, as the Reds' once great Paul Derringer dropped his fifth straight game.

Dick West brought in the tying and winning scores with a double in the ninth. As John Cooney who had singled and Sebastian Sisti who drew a walk crossed the plate.

Willams played in only three games last week but picked up points when he made five hits in 11 times at bat.

Elmer Riddle of the Cincinnati Reds and Al Benton of the Detroit Tigers retained the pitching leads of their respective leagues. Riddle's nine victories against no defeats tops the National and six victories and only one loss for Benton gave him leadership of the junior circuit.

'Big Vic' Ghezzi Wins Pro Golf Championship; Protege of Craig Wood

United Press

DENVER, July 13.—Giant Vic Ghezzi—the erratic protege of veteran Craig Wood—won the National Professional Golfers Association tournament today on the 38th hole, defeating Byron Nelson one up. Ghezzi thus reached the climax of his career, ending nine years of disappointments despite his superb golf in the past. "Big Vic," as he is affectionately known, rallied after being three down at the end of 27 holes. He tied up the count at the end of the 36th and won the title when Nelson missed a 2½ foot put.

GEORGIA HATES SOVIETS; FREEDOM AGAIN SOUGHT

Never Recognized Stalin Regime, Fight for Liberation To Continue

Transocean

GENEVA, July 11.—A fight to the finish against bolshevism has been demanded by the emigres from Georgia, their representatives in Geneva announced today.

Khariton Chavichvily Chavich, the representative of Georgians abroad, nounced today that the "Georgian nation, whose territory was invaded and occupied without a declaration of war by the Soviet troops in 1921 in violation of the treaty of friendship and good neighborliness which had been concluded between the two countries on May 7, 1920, never recognized this brutal conquest.

"The Georgian people have never given up the fight against bolshevism despite the most cruel and horrible oppression and the reign of terror which the Soviet authorities have perpetuated in Georgia without interruption for the past 20 years.

"The world must be reminded that the legal representatives of the Georgian people have always made it clear that the Georgian nation would seize any opportunity in order to win back its liberty and independence."

The representative of the Georgian people added that these mountain folk had never abandoned hope for their eventual liberation from the bolshevik yoke.

Comrade Josef Stalin is a native of Tiflis, which is in Georgia.

AMERICAN ALL-STARS BEAT NATIONALS 7-5

Ted Williams Homers With Two On Base in Ninth to Put Game on Ice

United Press

BRIGGS STADIUM, Detroit, July 8.—In story book fashion Ted Williams today connected with a terrific ninth inning homer which gave the American League a 7 to 5 victory over the National League in the ninth annual all-star game.

There were two outs against the junior circuit gang and two men were on base when Williams knocked the ball out of the park for one of the longest homers ever hit in Briggs stadium. At the time the American Leaguers were trailing by one run.

The victory avenged the 4 to 0 whitewashing inflicted on the American circuit last year. It was the sixth win in nine years for the Americans, the National circuit having won only in 1936, 1938 and 1940.

Manager Del Baker, of the Americans, started "Blazin" Bob Feller on the mound but the Cleveland ace's speed ball proved no mystery to the Nationals.

Bob headed for the showers in the fourth and was succeeded by Thornton Lee, of the White Sox, who fared no better. Sid Hudson of the Senators then took over but gave way in the first of the eighth to Eddie Smith, of the White Sox, who finished the game and was credited with being the winning pitcher.

Whit Wyatt started for the Nationals but by the time the third inning rolled around he was in difficulties and was succeeded by Paul Derringer of the Cincinnati Reds.

Manager bill Mckechnie, of the Nationals, Jerked out Derringer before the inning was over and sent in the great Buck Walters, of the Reds, who lasted on the mound for three innings.

Claude Passeau then received the nod and hurled fine ball until the ninth, when Williams' homer made him the goat of the game.

Ken Keltner, of the Indians, started the American Leaguers ninth inning rally with a single. Then Joe Gordon, of the Yanks, singled to right field and Cecil Travis, of the Senators, drew a walk to fill the bases.

Joe DiMaggio nearly hit into a double play when he grounded to Ed Miller of the Braves, forcing Travis at second. Joe barely beat the throw to first, but on the play Keltner scored and Gordon slid in safely at third. With two away Williams then broke up the ball game.

Dick Bartel, a former American Leaguer who now holds down the shortstop spot for the Giants, was the heavy hitter of the game, getting a pair of homers.

Dick's first circuit drive was in the seventh with Enos Slaughter, of the Cards, on base.

The other heavy drive came in the eighth when John Mize of the Cards, who had doubled, was on base. Bartel's blows were responsible for four of his teams five runs. Though it didn't count on his record Joe DiMaggio maintained his string of consecutive hits by connecting with a two bagger in the eighth. Joe managed to score on the next play when brother Dominic DiMaggio, of the Red Sox, singled.

The American Leaguers connected with 11 safe blows while the national all stars recorded 10 hits.

The Americans had three errors chalked up against them, as compared to two miscues for the Nationals.

BRITISH WAR REPORTS DECRIED BY MAGAZINE

Weekly Publication, Everybody, Sees Lack of Veracity in Information Given

Transocean

STOCKHOLM, July 12.—"The official British war reports offer a pitiable sight," declared the popular London weekly. Everybody in commenting on the news policy of the British Government. "The war reports do not give any information tallying with the truth," says the paper, and in this connection it refers to the British defeats in Norway and in the French campaign, which according to the official British reports at that time had been a foolhardy adventure for the German Army.

The advance of German troops in Libya was described as a propaganda trick, and during the campaign in Greece it was declared that the terrain there was unconquerable for the German troops.

The British people were told that the enemy must not get any information from British reports. This kind of news policy of the British Government was favorable for Germany because the British people began to get interested in German reports.

British denials of German war reports were sent out at an unlucky moment, because within a short time they had to be declared as correct, although in some more or less involved language.

TENNIS TO HIGHLIGHT Y.C.A.C. ATHLETICS

Semi-Final and Final Matches For Title on Tap Saturday And Sunday

Tennis will be one of the major attractions at the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club this weekend, with a number of semi-final and final matches in the various events of the club's spring tournament scheduled to be played off on Saturday and Sunday.

Also on the weekend program at the bay city club are a cricket match, a baseball game, a ladies' softball tilt and a number of contests in the lawn bowls tourney.

On Saturday afternoon an intra-club cricket match between the captain's and vice-captain's elevens will be played from 2 p.m.

For the tennis enthusiasts, the feature item on Saturday will be the semi-final match in the championship singles between Per Aurell, last year's winner, and Jean Cornu, scheduled to get under way at 3 p.m. The victor will meet Bill Craigie for the title.

COMMENTATORS SAY SAYRE IS QUITTING

Resignation Due to Differences With Quezon, Pearson and Allen Broadcast

United Press

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The well-known political radio commentators, Drew Pearson and Robert Allen, said in a broadcast last night that Francis B. Sayre, United States High Commissioner to the Philippines, will resign because of his differences with President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines.

They added that President Quezon had submitted a list of five persons to Washington who would be acceptable in place of Mr. Sayre.

This list, they alleged, included Rear-Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, former Commander of the Asiatic Fleet, General Frank Parker, former Commander of the U.S. Army, Philippine Department, and General Frank McCoy, who fought in the Philippines and who headed a special army mission to the Philippines in 1921.

Export Trade Better

United Press

MANILA, July 6.—Despite the loss of European markets and other adverse effects of the European conflict, the Philippine export trade in 1941 has shown a marked improvement over that of the corresponding period last year.

According to Bureau of Commerce statistics, exports in the first four months of this year were worth more than $56,500,000, representing an increase of nine per cent over the total for the corresponding 1940 period.

The same statistics revealed that despite the much publicized shipping shortage, exports to the United States in the four months under survey rose to more than $44,500,000 from a little less than $42,000,000 in the same period last year. Increased exports to Asiatic countries and Oceania more than accounted for the loss of European markets. Trade with Europe was practically wiped out, with only Britain and Sweden importing substantial quantities of goods.

Extension to the Philippines of the United States export licensing system was expected to curtail foreign trade, but it was believed no really drastic dislocation of Philippine economy would result from the export control operation.

After a study of the Philippine export business, the American trade commissioner Paul P. Steintorf, has voiced the conviction the licensing system would not cause any serious trade disruption. He said that at most only a small proportion of the country's exports would be affected by export control.

Trade Analysis Made

Mr. Steintorf analyzed the 1940 export trade figures and found that exports of licensable commodities from the Philippines in that year were worth a little more than $17,000,000 or only 11 percent of the total export—indicating that 98 percent of export products would not be affected by the licensing system.

Mr. Steintorf pointed out that a portion of the 11 percent subject to export control would be exported inasmuch as the licensing system did not necessarily prohibit exportation of licensable commodities.

Mr. Steintorf further pointed out that if there should be heavy curtailment of exports of licensable commodities it would likely be because the United States desired them for her own use and would therefore increase her purchases of such products.

Philippine trade circles enthusiastically welcomed the introduction in Congress of legislation suspending export taxes on certain Philippine products entering the United States, unanimously acclaiming the measure as a "blessing in many ways."

Philippine exports to the United States are divided by law into two categories, namely, those on which export taxes are levied on a graduated upward scale and those which are diminished annually by graduated quotas. The Tydings-McGehee bill introduced in Congress was regarded here as a discrimination inasmuch as it did not mention commodities sent to the United States under the quota basis.

The Philippine High Commissioner, Francis B. Sayre, has sent a message to Washington favoring suspension of the quota restrictions as well as the export tax suspension move in order to do away with the discrimination in favor of products subject to export taxes.

Lord Riffan Crosses Line Before Anarchist To Win Newbury Cup

Reuters

NEWBURY, July 12.—Ridden by the 17-year-old apprentice Barrows, Lord Portal's six-year-old Lord Riffan won the Newbury Summer Cup by a length from Mrs. Dorothy Paget's Anarchist, with Mrs. Bendis' Pearl Rock one and a half lengths, third. Pearl Rock, carrying an extra six pounds for his recent win, was 7-2 favorite; Lord Riffan 4-1 and Anarchist 6-1. Lord Portal holds an important Government post, but was able to snatch the time to visit Newbury, this being the first time he has seen his horses run.

RUBBER CONSUMPTION REACHING NEW HIGHS

Goodrich Company Reports First Half of 1941 Net Earnings About $3.12 Share

United Press

NEW YORK, July 10.—The Board of Trade yesterday estimated that June crude rubber consumption reached 70,000 to 73,000 tons, compared to 71,187 tons for May and 46,506 tons for June last year. This year's previous high was 71,374 tons in April.

Meanwhile, reports from various companies indicated great activity and encouraging dividends.

The B. F. Goodrich company, for the first half of 1941, reported net earnings almost equal to $3.12 per share.

The U. S. Rubber Company, it was understood, will operate a $80,000,000 small arms munitions plant.

The United Rubber Company's stockholders Tuesday approved a proposal to widen the company charter to enable the management to participate to a greater extent in the defense program. The company was expected to be among those the Government will ask to manage munitions plants.

The New York Journal of Commerce reported that rubber factories received government questionnaires for data regarding consumption of crude, reclaimed and scrap rubber last year, and also the amount of rubber afloat and consigned to each factory.

The International Rubber Regulation committee Tuesday reported that May net exports of crude rubber from countries in the current restriction plan, except Indo-China and Thailand, totaled 111,841 long tons, or 13,075 tons under the quota. Exports from Malaya were 50,110 tons and from the Netherlands East Indies, 48,159 tons.

N.E.I. SAID PLANNING EXPEDITIONARY UNIT

Batavia's Monthly Financial Contribution to Home Government £200,000

Reuters

BATAVIA, July 12.—In a review of N.E.I. support to Allied warfare, the N.E.I. Government has informed the People's Council that both the Netherlands and N.E.I. Governments reckon with all possibilities which may arise from this war. One of these possibilities, it is stated, is formation of an expeditionary force. It depends on the international situation whether this possibility can be realized.

The East Indies' monthly financial contribution to the Netherlands Government and Army in England at present amounts to £200,000.

The Government has assured the People's Council that everything possible is being done to strengthen the defense power of the N.E.I. army and navy. This, however, depends, to a great extent, on the supply capacity of the United States war industries, it is added.

The N. E. I. hospital ship Oranje, which was rebuilt in Australia for her new task and is now moored in Tandjongpriok harbor, was the object of a visit of the Governor-General, who ascertained personally that everything was ready for the best possible treatment of wounded Anzacs who did their utmost also for the Netherlands cause.

The Oranje, which Australians call the finest hospital ship of the world, has accommodation for 700 wounded, for whose treatment and recovery the most modern medical equipment has been installed.

The whole medical staff is now complete and within a short time the Oranje will leave N. E. I. waters on the first tripe of the mission.

CRICKET CONTESTS ON IN FULL SWING

All Britain Playing Game With Eton-Harrow Match Enjoying Spotlight

Reuters

LONDON, July 13.—Interesting cricket was witnessed in all parts of the country yesterday, with the Eton-Harrow match claiming special attention at Eton.

Lords was given over to the London Counties and a strong team called the Buccaneers, who drew with the Counties, scoring 242 for five declared. The opposition did not bat. Frank Lee scored 104 and Denis Compton 74. Leslie Compton was dismissed for a "duck."

Bradford league cricket was featured by the first appearance of Len Hutton, England's opening batsman, who appears to have fully recovered from a broken arm which kept him out of cricket until last weekend.

An Army XI won an exciting match against a British Empire XI at Gloucester by 14 runs, scoring 121 and then dismissing the Empire for 107. Crabtree took six army wickets for 46.

The Northern Counties beat an Anti-Aircraft XI, including four Testman, at Nottingham by eight wickets. The A-A team was out for 223, in reply to which the Northern Counties made 226 for two, Dempster, the New Zealand Test player, scoring 114.

An Army XI, scoring 199 for eight declared, drew with an Aldershot Area team, which made 169 for two, while Services players stationed at Gloucester and Somerset drew at Bristol, Somerset declaring at 260 for seven while Gloucester hit 238 for seven. Spencer of Kent, assisting Somerset, knocked up 64, including one sixer and 12 fours. One sequence of 10 strokes brought him 34 runs.

Eton beat Harrow by 136 runs. Eton made 73 without loss when H. P. Cholmondeley had four wickets for four runs with left-arm slows, causing a temporary collapse. Eton, however, carried the total to 190, and then dismissed Harrow for 54, C. M. Wheatley taking seven wickets for 31 runs.

BRITISH ARMY SEEKING 100,000 WOMEN RECRUITS

40,000 Already Enrolled in A.T.S.—Thrills and Adventures Promised

Reuters

LONDON, July 12.—The women's branch of the British army—the Auxiliary Territorial Service—is taking in 100,000 more recruits.

The most important numerically of Britain's three women's armies—there are over 40,000 women already enrolled in the A.T.S.—it claims priority for:

1. Promoting a young and attractive woman of 33 as chief controller (major-general).
2. Having some of its members in the front line of battle sharing the hardships life with men.

Wherever the British army is today efficient girls in khaki will be found. They are doing jobs behind the front lines to relieve soldiers for more arduous duties. There were A.T.S. girls on the beaches at Dunkirk.

Thrills and adventures are waiting for girls joining the A.T.S. Promotion is more rapid than in the regular army, depending on ability, worth and general adaptability.

NEW YORK, July 14.—To Johnny Rigney of the White Sox today went the distinction of snapping the New York Yanks' winning streak of 14 games but he failed to silence the mighty bat of Joe DiMaggio.

Joe's speed saved his precious string of consecutive games in which he has hit safely. Game number 54 was recorded when the Yank outfielder beat out a slow roller to third base in the sixth frame. Rigney limited the Bronx bombers to eight hits and one run and hurled shutout ball after the third frame, while his mates were nicking three New York pitchers for nine hits and seven runs.

The Cleveland Indians cut the Yanks' lead down to four games when Bob Feller allowed only five hits in turning back the Boston Red Sox 4 to 1.

The Indians gave Feller a four run lead in the second inning and throughout he was never threatened. The Boston outfit collected their lone score in the seventh frame. During Cleveland's big second inning the rally was aided by two walks and a pair of singles.

Delmar Baker's Detroit Tigers rallied in the seventh to beat out the Philadelphia Athletics 4 to 2. Outfielder Bruce Campbell saved the day by connecting with a double which brought in a pair of runs.

The old veteran Tommie Bridges was on the mound for the Tigers and held his foes to five hits. He was opposed by Philip Marchildon for most of the game.

In the battle for the cellar the St. Louis Browns beat out the Washington Senators 6 to 4 but still need one more win to get into seventh place.

The Browns were generously aided aided by Kendall Chase who issued seven walks and made a pair of wild throws. Chase allowed only four hits as compared to eight by John Niggeling. Who went the full route for the St. Louis club.

Leo Durocher's Brooklyn Dodgers increased their senior circuit lead, by another game when they nosed out the Chicago Cubs 1 to 0 while the Philadelphia Phillies were besting the St. Louis cards 5 to 4.

The Brooklyn outfit pushed over the lone score of the game in the last of the ninth inning after Walter Higbe and Vern Olsen had staged a neck and neck pitchers' duel. Both clubs recorded eight hits and also turned in errorless ball.

The Cards met their downfall in the eight frame when Bob Bragen, Phillie shortstop, singled to drive in the tying and winning runs. The Phillies piled up an early lead but it was overcome by the Cards who were leading by one run when the last of the eighth rolled around. The loss put the Cards three and half games behind the Dodgers.

The best game of the senior circuit was supplied by the Cincinnati and Boston clubs who went thirteen innings before the Reds broke the deadlock.

The score was knotted at three all when the ninth inning ended. In the next inning Boston scored a lone run but the Reds again tied the score. Then, in the thirteenth, the Reds ran wild to tally three runs and take the game by a 7 to 4 score.

Bill Werber and Lin Frey started the last inning off by getting walks. Myron McCormick and Harry Craft produced singles and Eddie Joost topped the rally off with a two bagger.

The New York Giants rallied in the ninth to nose out the Pittsburgh Pirates 3 to 2 Truett Sewell top notch Pirate hurler had held the Giants scoreless until the last inning. He was opposed on the mound by Carl Hubbell who yielded six hits as compared to five by sewell.

COACHES CONDEMN BASKETBALL CHANGE

Oppose Plan to Take Out Playing Tools Save Fan Backboard and Molded Ball

Opposition to the National Basketball Committee's proposal to eliminate all other playing implements and set up the patented fanshaped backboard and the molded, or balloon ball as the only official equipment, is growing rapidly among college coaches, a large majority of whom apparently resent the manner in which the high school bloc in the rules-making group is attempting to force the change, according to the New York Herald Tribune.

It became evident that the college group is doing something more than talking about the situation. It is acting. For instance:

(1) A mail vote taken in the Western Conference found the Big Ten heavily in favor of continuing the use of the 6 by 4-foot rect-angular backboard and the stitched seam, laceless leather ball.

(2) Coaches in the Eastern League, oldest of the college court organizations, unofficially voted along similar lines and planned to play their 1941-42 games accordingly.

Army Opposed to Change

(3) Valentine Lentz, coach at the U. S. Military Academy, declared that West Point would not go over to the new gear.

(4) The Eastern College Basketball Coaches Association mailed questionnaires to more than 600 college coaches in an effort to learn which ball and backboard they preferred and which they intended to use next season.

Early returns from the questionnaire indicate a 3-to-1 majority in favor of the present rectangular banking board and a 2-to-1 preference for the sewn-leather ball. When the figures are complete they will be forwarded to the national basketball committee and to the board of directors of the National Association of College Basketball Coaches for their information and guidance.

If the heavy preponderance of college coaches opposes the change, the results of the questionnaire probably will be accompanied by a demand that the proposed shift to the patented, fan-shaped bank, which is fashioned of steel, and the moulded sphere of leather-veneered rubber be held up until further research and experimentation can be made to prove whether they are desirable, practicable and a help to the game.

Carlson Voices Objection

One of the most articulate and bitingly satirical of those who object to the new-fangled gadgets is Dr. H. C. Carlson, University of Pittsburgh coach. He finds that his players do not like the innovations and suggests that advertising pressure has been brought to bear by those who have something to sell to the sport.

In a letter to this department the former president of the National Coaches' Association, says:

"This ball and bank business comes under the guise of dictatorship, and perhaps the greatest inhibition can come from the very popular 'give the game back to the boys.'

"Our first experience with the molded ball came when Elmer Ripley (Ed note— Then a sporting-goods salesman and now a coach who uses the normal-type ball) was demonstrating it. I liked the looks of the ball and threw it out among the boys. After a while they discarded it and used older balls. They said that it curved too much. And we continued to have a deluge of advertising matter, but the ball continued to curve. We found this to be true with other squads. Maybe the ball is okay after all the improvement, but I had too much suspicion inculcated by our previous experience. May those who like it do not throw it hard enough to produce those funny curves.

Little Board Criticized

"Personally, I don't play much basketball, and not having any ulterior motives, I only look at the backboards. A cupid and dart on a heart-shaped bank might be acceptable. We olders should give some thought to the esthetic. The big point is that the players don't like the little board and they are forced to adapt themselves to it. Specifically and justifiably, they kick on a quick turn when they look for the banking board in order to get quick orientation for the basket.

"If the boards are for the spectators, the kids want to know when the rule makers are going to do something for the players. They like to shoot at bigger surfaces. The increased angles for shooting is the bunk. Who wants to shoot toward the wrong end of the floor, as advertised, in a behind-the-basket missed shot?

"It seems the advertisers are working on our suggestibility. The kids curving that old molded ball forced improvements. If they were to become articulate they would vote down the trick bank. I don't want to join the emotional highhats who are physically sedentary, but wish to immortalize themselves through mental giantism and the contribution of trick ornamentation to basketball equipment. Give the players a chance."

ROOKIE SOLD AT $100 NOW WORTH $150,000

'Pete' Reiser, 22-Year-Old Firebrand of Dodgers, Envy Of Other Managers

There's a 22-year-old outfielder in the National League this year that any manager in the circuit would give up his best man to obtain, says Arther E Patterson of the New York Herald Tribune. And he cost the Brooklyn bal club just $100.

That's the story, briefly told, of Harold (Pete) Reiser, the precocious batsman Leo Durocher has playing center field, batting third and stealing headlines as the Dodgers move along as red-hot contenders for the National League title. And last week Pete came into his own as the league-leading batter with an average threatening .400, which hasn't been touched over a full season since Bill Terry's heyday.

On every bench in Ford Frick's domain they're talking about Reiser. Rival players watch him take his cut during batting practice, announce when he's going to make a throw to the plate or third base during the outfielding drill and just whistle their amazement when he scoots down the first base line on an infield dribber or a well-placed bunt. Not even New York's Johnny Rucker is as fast from plate to first.

At least one manager—the name is Jimmy Wilson—actually made the offer to the Brooklyn management.

"Name any ball player on my club and he's yours for Reiser."

Even if the other pilots haven't voiced that sentiment that's how they feel. But the Dodgers just smile. Reiser's going to be a Dodger for a long time, they hope, and right now he has taken the play away from a fair set of clouters—Medwick, Camilli, Lavagetto, Walker, Phelps et al.

The Dodgers shudder whenever they think of what sort of Cardinal team they would be battling today if K. M. Landis, the high commissioner of baseball, hadn't made his notable decision against the St. Louis Cardinals and the Grand Rapids club a few years back, freeing more than 60 ball players. At the time every one thought Skeeter Webb, a shortstop, was the pick of the lot, but Larry MacPhail had a bit of inside scouting information on some of the boys down in the Class D leagues.

"There's a boy named Reiser, a St. Louis kid, we hate to lose," a scout told him. "You'd better try to sign him."

And the Dodgers did—for exactly $100. A fair estimate of his worth at the moment, would be about $150,000. But it's not going to do any one any good to get up the one-fifty. Reiser is not for sale.

Newspaper men and baseball players took to Reiser the first time they saw him at Clearwater, Florida. He just threw a few balls and you knew he was a ball player. When he started to hit—he was a switch hitter then—and to run you were convinced he must be earmarked for future stardom.

You thought him something of a fresh "busher" when he told Leo Durocher one day in camp:

"I can hit any pitcher who ever threw a baseball."

Now, you're not so sure he wasn't right.

REFUGEES IN FINLAND

Many Travel From Estonia—Dramatic Crossing in Small Boats Told

Transocean

HELSINKI, July 15.—Roughly 400 refugees have arrived in Finland from Esthonia, among them four former officers of the Estonian army, who now want to take part in the fighting against the Soviet Union.

They had a most dramatic crossing to Finland in small boats according to the paper Ilkka. Some of them were fortunate enough to reach a Soviet-Russian plane with their row-boat, which served them for crossing the Gulf of Finland. These refugees confirm the deportations carried out by Soviet-Russians.

The transportation of the population began a week before the outbreak of the German-Soviet war and had reached such proportions that one could speak today of a veritable evacuation of the Estonian population.

RUSSIAN PRESSURE ON FINLAND EXPOSED

Sweden's Communique Concerning Finn Blue-White Book Published by Press

D.N.B.

STOCKHOLM, July 19.—The Communique of the Swedish Foreign Ministry concerning the Finnish Blue-White book, which reveals clearly the pressure brought to bear on Finland by the Soviet Government at the close of the Russo-Finnish War, was published by the press here on Friday.

The communique states that already at the beginning of 1940 the question of a defensive alliance between Finland and Sweden was often discussed and that the Swedish Government adopted a sympathetic attitude toward the Finnish proposals to this effect. Nevertheless the idea of such an alliance encountered opposition in Moscow, where it was contended that an alliance of the kind contemplated could only be directed against the Soviet Union and would consequently be contrary to the policy of neutrality of the Finnish and Swedish Governments.

The possibility of a Swedish-Finnish cooperation was however not lost sight of and at the end of October 1940 the governments in Stockholm and Helsinki were prepared to examine the ways and means for a cooperation not only regarding defense but also foreign policy, and to a certain extent economics.

The hostility of the Soviet Union toward this project however remained. On December 6, Viacheslav Molotov called the Finnish Minister to the Kremlin at half past 12 at night. Molotov stated that he had been informed that an agreement was to be drawn up under the terms of which the Finnish foreign policy would be placed under the control of Sweden. This, in the opinion of the Soviet Government would be the equivalent to an abrogation of the peace treaty between Russia and Finland. The Soviet Government asked the Finnish Government to consider the inevitable consequences.

STALIN LINE PIERCED AFTER HARD BATTLES

Difficulties in Penetrating Soviet Defensive Area Described in Report

Transocean

BERLIN, July 16.—Extraordinary difficulties which the Stalin Line offered the German advance and the manner in which the Stalin was finally penetrated, were described by War Reporter Guenther Heysing in yesterday's issue of the B.Z. am Mittag.

In improving the construction of the Stalin Line, the Soviet Russians had learned many things from experiences gained during the present war and they had, to a great extent, adapted their fighting methods to those used by the Ge mans, according to the war correspondent.

The Stalin Line is described as a long line of fortifications several hundred kilometers long, running mainly behind the Dnieper River and a wide swampy valley.

From a military viewpoint, it was not sufficient merely to build a bridge across the river. In order to get large formations across, it was necessary to build a bridge across the entire valley some four to five kilometers in width to bridge the river swamps and practically the entire valley.

Section Is Plain

This whole section is a flat plain. From the dark huge virgin forests on the eastern bank, the entire valley was controlled by Soviet arms of all kinds hidden in this natural stronghold.

The German high command, therefore, was faced with the problem of preparing for an attack in such a way that this difficult terrain could be mastered.

After most cautious preparations, a sector wos chosen for an attack. In the greatest silence and under the greatest secrecy, German artillery was concentrated where a gap was to be made in the enemy lines on the other side of the river.

The Soviet Russians probably had not expected an attack in this sector, which was especially chosen some distance away from the great Soviet highways on which military operations must ordinarily reply, particularly in the Soviet Union.

Concerning the attack itself, which took the Soviet Russians absolutely by surprise, War Reporter Heysing writes:

Reporters Account

"At 5 o'clock next morning when the sun was already shining bright over the huge forests and when the Soviet Russians despite all precautions hardly expected a German attack, which is usually always launched with the rising of the first fog at dawn, German artillery suddenly poured thousands of shells into enemy positions, smashing enemy batteries and strongholds and spreading death and destruction in enemy ranks.

"Simultaneously German shock engineers and shock troops started off in rubber boats, swiftly paddling their way across the river.

"A short time later, when German artillery slightly advanced their barrage, they reached the other side of the shore and dashed out of their boats, clearing the shore and the edge of the forest anything that was left of the enemy. And with handgrenades and automatic pistols, they began sweeping and clearing out Soviet bunkers.

"While the spearhead of German shock troops thus fought its way through the Soviet forest strongholds and positions, quickly constructed ferries landed one company after another of a German armored division, with light and heavy arms, within the newly gained bridgehead.

"By noon that day the vanguard of German forces had reached a large highway running through the forests parallel to the river, cordoning off the road on both sides.

"By evening the Germans had established a significant bridgehead on the other side of the Dnieper.

"The Stalin Line was pierced and the gap now steadily widened.

"Casualties on the German side were almost unbelievably small."

BLOCKADE MEASURE SAID INEFFECTIVE

Europe Will Neither Starve of Hunger Nor of Shortage Of Materials

Transocean

BERLIN, July 16.—Writing on the sensitiveness to blockade measures of Europe and Britain, the Frankfurter Zeitung stresses in a lengthy article that Europe will neither starve of hunger nor of a shortage of raw materials.

If British and American circles conclude that they can offset the failure of blocking the Axis countries by declaring a general export prohibition against the whole of Europe, they are making the mistake of comparing Britain's precarious situation with that of Europe.

In this connection the paper states that Britain during 1936 to 1938 had to import 76 per cent of her bread and fodder grain, 83 per cent of her sugar consumption. Only 39 per cent of her meat, 25 per cent of her cheese and 10 per cent of her butter consumption was produced in the country.

The raw material situation in Britain is even worse and with the exception of wool, coal, and iron ore Britain's own production reaches about one fifth of her total consumption.

In case these same figures would also apply for continental Europe Britain's and America's hope in connection with a general blockade would be justified.

However, the situation on the Continent is quite different from that in Britain. The import surplus of vegetal foodstuffs does not exceed many per cents of the total consumption. Meat, fish and cheese are even being exported, however, this export surplus cannot be considered as a true surplus as fodder-grain and oil cakes have to be imported.

Today the only real shortage existing is an additional import demand of train oil and vegetal fats, which amounts to almost 30 per cent of normal peace consumption.

The raw material situation is similarly favorable. The Continent exports coal, iron ore, steel, light metals, wood and building materials as well as important basic materials for the chemical industry.

Today, practically for all raw material, which cannot be found on the Continent, substitutes are available.

The Frankfurter Zeitung concludes its article that Europe of today is absolutely immune against any blockade measures and that if Britain and America think otherwise they are making a big mistake.

Gas Firm Loses Franchise

Transocean

BUENOS AIRES, July 16.—The British company which thus far has held the concession to supply the Argentine Capital with gas, has been deprived of this profitable business. The mayor of the town signed a contract with the State Petroleum Company, which on its part undertakes the gas supply from natural sources in their oil fields in southern Argentina. This means for the population a cheapening of the price from 26 to 19.5 Centavos per cubicmetre.

CRICKET MATCH WON BY VICE-CAPTAIN'S

Captain's Squad Trounced Third Time in Four Meets at Y.C.A.C. Grounds

The Yokohama Country and Athletic Club cricket vice-captain's team gained its third victory in four matches this season with the captain's eleven on Saturday afternoon by 68 to 60 at the club grounds.

The bowling and fielding proved much stronger than the batting, as the scores indicate. When the captain's side had been retired for a small total it looked like an easy win for the vice-captain's squad, but the latter also lost wickets rapidly, and it was only two comparatively good stands made after four wickets had been taken for 16 runs that saved the situation. The losers' score was passed after seven wickets had fallen.

One of the highlights of the match was the fine showing of the newcomers, A. G. May and B. Kuskie. Both did well in their debuts, proving to be good bowlers and turning in the highest scores of the game. The latter, a fast bowler from Australia, created a sensation by bowling one of the opposition's opening batsmen with his first ball.

After the first wicket of the captain's eleven had been taken for only four runs, J. M. da Costa and E. V Thomas combined to raise the total to 20 before the former was caught and bowled by May. Then M. Parsram bowled two batsmen, the scoreboard reading 32 for four. The next two wickets fell rapidly, only seven more runs being obtained before they were taken, both players being bowled by May.

F. R. Harriss joined Kuskie, and this partnership boosted the total to 51 before the latter was bowled by Parsram. Harriss also was bowled by Parsram at 58, and the last two wickets fell for only two more runs.

Kuskie opened the bowling for the captain's eleven and took a wicket with his first ball. Then Ballantyne bowled the other opening batsman in the next over after only six runs had been made. The score rose slowly to 16, and at this point two more wickets fell, one to Ballantyne and the other to Kuskie.

Things looked bad for the vice-captain's side at this stage, but the rot stopped. May and P. H. Lord combined nicely to raise the total to 33 before the latter fell to a yorker by Ballantyne. H. A. Bird then joined May, and this pair added another 17 runs to the score before the former was bowled by da Costa, the scoreboard reading 55 for six.

Parsram was caught near the boundary by Harriss when the score was tied, but a run by May soon after decided the issue. The eighth and ninth wickets fell at 62, and the last was obtained for another six runs.

May's 23 was the highest score of the match, while Kuskie was next in line with 14. Thirteen proved an unlucky number for two players, both Harriss and Lord being bowled when they had made this total of runs.

May also proved to be the most effective bowler of the day, taking four wickets for 12 runs. G. E. Beatty also had an average of three, getting three wickets for nine runs. Da Costa obtained two for 10, and Ballantyne three for 19. Parsram got the most wickets, taking six for 37.

C. T. Mayes did the scoring and compiled the statistics, as he has for every match this season.

Cricket enthusiasts are looking forward with keen interest to next Saturday's match, when the British Embassy team will play the Y.C. and A.C. at the club grounds from 2 p.m.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Brooklyn's stock soared like Wall Street's big board when the "Daffy Dodgers" knocked the Chicago Cubs over twice this afternoon.

Leo Durocher's sluggers ran wild in the opened to whitewash the Cubs, 7 to 0, and in the night-cap they piled up an early lead to coast to an 8 to 4 win. Pitching, once the continual headache of Brooklyn managers, appeared today to have become a thing of the past. In the twin bill, the Cubs could colleft only 10 hits while the Dodgers game through with 19 safe blows.

Curt Davis limited the Wrigley outfit to four hits in the opener and was given air-tight support by his mates.

The Dodgers collected four runs in the second inning and in doing so chased Larry French to the showers. In the seventh, a wild throw, a walk and three singles yielded three more scores.

Luke Hamlin handled the hurling for the Dodgers in the second fray and allowed only six hits. He held the Cubs to a lone run until he let down in the ninth.

Durocher's outfit put the game on ice in the first inning by collecting four runs off two walks, two singles and a double and in doing so chased Paul Errickson to the showers.

The senior circuit's longest game of the year was played at Philadelphia where the St. Louis Cards downed the Phillies, 8 to 2, in the 16th frame.

The Cards were out-hit but played errorless ball while the Phillies were making a pair of miscues.

Johnny Hopp started the 16th inning by beating out a roller. First-Sacker John Mize beat out a bunt and Enos Slaughter drew a walk to fill the bags. Hopp then beat the throw-in on Jim Brown's long sacrifice fly.

With Johnny Vander Meer back in old-time form, the Cincinnati Reds pushed a 3 to 0 victory over the Boston Braves. Vander Meer yielded four hits, whiffed 11 batsmen and issued three walks.

Eddie Joost contributed a timely double in the sixth frame which drove in Harry Craft.

Four errors contributed largely to the downfall of the New York Giants who were bested 5 to 1 by the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Al Butcher was on the hill and hurled shut-out ball after the first inning. He held the Giants to seven hits. Catcher Alfonso Lopez of the Pirates hit the only homer of the game.

Slugger Joe DiMaggio hit safely for his 55th straight game, 11 above the former major leagues record, when the New York Yanks nosed out the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 4.

Joe singled in the third inning, and then slashed out a two-bagger in the ninth.

The big inning for the Bronx Bombers was the third when two walks, a pair of singles and a three-bagger by Warren Rosar netted four scores.

Steve Peek and Norman Branch handled the mound assignment and the two rookies were nicked for a dozen hits. Opposing them was Ed Smith, who yielded 10 safeties.

The New York club increased its lead to five games when the Boston Red Sox turned back the Cleveland Indians, 6 to 2. Joe Dobson, a Cleveland cast-off, was on the mound and held his former mates to four hits.

The Red Sox nicked two Indian hurlers for 10 hits and scored runs in pairs in the first, fifth and ninth frames. Lou Finney contributed a homer in the fifth with one mate aboard.

Delmar Baker's Detroit Tigers nosed out the Philadelphia Athletics, 3 to 2, in a hard-fough and well-played game.

Louie Newsome went the full route for the Tigers and allowed seven hits, compared to Luman Harrs who nicked for eight safeties.

Barney McCosky's big bat saved the day for the Tigers. In the fifth, he drove in one run with a double and in the seventh he came through with a homer.

STOCKHOLM, July 17.—Swedish volunteers to fight against the Bolsheviks are increasing in number, says yesterday's Stockholms Tidningen. The paper estimates the daily number of volunteers reporting at the recruiting offices at a hundred. Many Swedes, who thus far have had no military training, were asking whether they could be put against the enemy immediately. They will be sent to the front forthwith where they will have to undergo certain training.

RAINS SLOW DOWN PRO BALL LEAGUE

Only 14 Games Played Causing Fall Schedule to Be Changed

Hampered by wet weather, the teams of the Nippon Professional Baseball League have only been able to engage in 14 games each, according to the official figures just released. Three clubs, Kyojin, Hankyu and Taiyo share league leaderships with 10 victories and 4 defeats for an average of .714.

Meanwhile considerable shifting has taken place in the individual batting race. To date, the top rank is held by Go, outfielder of the league leading Kyojin. Go has batted a .325 average, slashing out 13 hits in 40 times at bat. The only other 300 hitters are Kawakami of the Kyojin club and Itoh of Hankyu.

Other figures released show the local Tokyo club leading in team batting average with a .230 percentage. Included in the Kyojins safeties are 20 extra basehits, with 2 home runs. In the team fielding statistics, the Nankai nine lead the field with a .982.

Much reshifting of the fall schedule was necessitated by the recent postponed games. The League officials have announced the August schedule of games as is shown below:

NEW YORK, July 19.—Joe McCarthy's slugging Yanks battered five Detroit hurlers for 19 hits as they took both ends of a double header at the automobile center today.

The double win increased New York's lead to six and a half games and knocked the Tigers out of the junior circuit's upper division.

The Bronx bombers took the opener 9 to 3 and pushed over a 6 to 2 win in the night cap.

Bob Rolfe led the batting attack in the opener by hitting safely four times out of his five trips to the plate. Outfielder Charlie Keller produced the only homer of the game. He connected in the fifth frame with one mate aboard.

Spurgeon Chandler capably handled the mound assignment for the Yanks in the first game, holding his foes to six hits. Charles Ruffing and John Murphy were on the hill in the second contest and yielded nine safeties.

Joe DiMaggio started the rally in the second game which spelled victory for the Yanks. The Yankee slugger socked out a three bagger to start a scoring splurge which netted all of the McCarthy club's runs. Five hits, with the assistance of two Detroit errors, produced a half dozen runs.

The second place Cleveland Indians narrowly nosed out the lowly Washington Senators 9 to 8.

Ken Keltner set the pace for the Indians with a homer. Jake Early, Jim Vernon and Jim Bloodworth all produced homers for the Senators with Bloodworth's coming when the bases were loaded.

The Indians piled up a five run lead in the second frame and the Senators lacked the necessary punch to overtake their foes.

New signs of life were shown by the St. Louis Browns who won two straight games from the third place Boston Red Sox.

The Browns won the opener 9 to 3 and then pushed over a 4 to 3 win in the second game.

George McQuinn St. Louis first sacker registered a three bagger, a double and a single out of five times at bat to lead the assault in the opener. His teammate Joe Grace, came through with a circuit drive.

John Allen hurled the opener for the Browns and allowed eight hits while Elden Auker went the full route in the second game.

The Chicago White Sox climbed into fourth place when they divided their double header with the Philadelphia Athletics, taking the opener 4 to 2 and dropping the second game 3 to 1. The Chisox captured the first game with a four run rally in the eighth, resulting from a pair of walks, two errors, a sacrifice fly and a two bagger.

Catcher Al Brancato doubled in the third inning of the second game and Ben McCoy and Dick Siebert produced singles to win the fray for the Athletics.

Luman Harris handled the mound duty in the second game and limited the Chicago outfit to four scattered safeties.

Rain played havoc with the National League schedule, forcing postponement of all but one game.

The Boston Braves, though badly outhit, knocked over the St. Louis Cards 10 to 6. Five errors contributed to the Card's Downfall.

The Boston outfit pushed over three runs in the first inning, duplicated the feat in the second, and then added runs in lots of twos in the fourth and eighth frames.

The Fair Sex in Germany Busy, Too

While the men are at the front blazing a New Germany, the women and girls staying home do every bit to keep the wheels of industry going. Schools have been fostered to teach the fair sex the manipulation of the industries which the men were in prior to being called to the colors. Baseball to Be Played in Blackout! Phosphorus to Replace Old Sol, Lamps

I.N.S.

NEW YORK, June 26.—Ray Dumont is a serious man today about his suggestion that baseball be played in total darkness—that is without lights and with only the illumination that phosphorus bats, balls and baselines would give.

Dumont, president of the National Semi-Pro-Baseball Congress, first advocated his "glow-worm" as a gag to help bring the crowds out to his national tournament at Wichita, August 15-28.

But since Government officials recently advocated conservation of the electricity used in night games for national defense requirements, Prexy Dumont has changed the name of his novel proposal to "blackout baseball."

He has suggested that each of the 48 state championship tournaments in July experiment to decide whether the plan is feasible.

If the experiment is successful and the Government does ban baseball under lights, it is possible that phosphorus paint will replace the arcs.

Dumont said the initial expense to start the experiment will be about $200 for the first game. It will require about six gallons of phosphorus to illuminate the park. Each player will have to wear a special phosphorus painted cap and all gloves will have to be illuminated.

The baseballs will have to be repainted each game because continuous pounding will make them less visible.

"The idea seems silly, I'll admit," Dumont said. "But I've talked to a number of scientists and they say it will be easier for a player to see a white object against total black background.

It was pointed out that young couples who enjoy sitting in darkened movie theater balconies will find the environment at the "blackout games" much more inviting!

And what about the umpire?

Oh yes,—all you'll see of him will be his phosphorus painted hands. That, of course, will be a disappointment for the fan who likes to call the umpire "Ugly" but a welcome improvement to the one who says the less he sees of an umpire, the more he enjoys the game.

INSTINCT, NOT BRAINS, COUNTS IN BASEBALL

Babe Ruth and Dizzy Dean not Smart Off Field, Yet Do Right Thing While Playing

I.N.S.

NEW YORK, June 26.—Whenever we hear an irate fan make reference to a "dumb" ball player, we always think of that old story about Eddie Collins, and often wonder how much brains really count for in actual competition.

You may recall that one about Collins. The story goes that old Connie Mack was telling a rookie on the bench one day to emulate Collins in everything he did.

"There," said Mack, "is the smartest ball player of all time."

That was in Collins' last active year when he was playing second base on a dime as the ball players say.

Just then a hard hit grounder shot past Collins that any rookie would have nabbed, and our prize package on the bench remarked: "Yeh, that Collins may be smart all right but I notice he can't out-think those hard grounders."

Instinct May Be Best

Offhand, we can think of a score of ball players who may not have been rivals to Professor Einstein off the diamond but who never made a dumb play in their lives. These fellows did the right thing instinctively, and we often wonder if instinct in a game isn't much more valuable than sound reasoning.

For instance, Babe Ruth was no mental giant off the field but when did you ever see him throw to the wrong base?

We feel sure that Babe never thought out any play in advance. He merely let the play happen and then made the right move by instinct.

On the other hand, we have known brilliant college graduates who might easily have been listed as dumb ball players. In a spot requiring instant action they appeared to need a few seconds to reason things out and by the time they had the play figured out it was too late.

Then here was the one and only Dizzy Dean! He no colossus of thought off the field but a mental giant on it, judged solely by results. When Frankie Frisch was manager of the Cardinals, he told me one day that nobody ever had to tell Dean anything.

"That bird has a memory like an elephant," said Frisch. "Let a busher he has never seen before hit a low outside curve off Dean in a spring exhibition game somewhere and he'll never forget it. He may not see that hitter again for years, but when he does, he'll remember that he was the bird who hit the low outside curve on him."

McGraw's Method Recalled

It is no secret that John McGraw never had a very high opinion of his players' mentality on or off the field. In fact, everybody knows that he used to signal every pitch for almost all of his pitchers.

McGraw believed, however, that no matter how dumb a player might be, he could be made to appear smart by being forced to make the same play over and over again until it became second nature with him.

We recall one spring—if memory serves it was 1927—when Shanty Hogan joined the Giants. That year the pitchers and catchers were taken to Hot Springs for two weeks preliminary training. The eagle-eyed McGraw quickly discovered that among other things Hogan didn't know was how to make the play on a run-up between third and home.

McGraw insisted that there should never be more than one throw on such a play and that it should be from the catcher to third base. We had a Chinese rookie infielder with us that spring, and we will never forget how McGraw kept that poor fellow running up and down the base line for two hours while Freddy Lindstrom and Shanty Hogan perfected that play to a split second.

And to this day we have never heard of Hogan failing to make that particular play correctly.

McGraw had his share of dumb ones and smart ones but, with all his meticulous coaching, even he couldn't make them all smart. For instance there was Heinie Mueller, who was smart enough off the diamond but prone to some terrible mental lapses on the field.

Playing on a wet field one day, Heinie turned his back to the infield while the tying run crossed the plate, then paused to wipe off the muddy ball while the fans howled in anguish. Then, to top everything, he made a wild and inexcusable throw to the plate and the winning run scored.

Heinie tried to duck, but McGraw caught up with him and in sulphuric tones that blistered the paint off the dug-out, he yelled: "You dumb blankety-blank-bank, tonight I'm shipping you to Toledo."

And that's exactly where Heinie went that night.

BASEBALL RECRUIT PUTS FAST ONE OVER

Big Time Prospect Before Attaching His John Doe Shops Around for Best Offer

I.N.S.

NEW YORK, July 2.—Of we had a son, we think we would encourage him (1) to be a ball player (2) to go to the University of Michigan; and (3) to give a course in Economics the once over lightly.

Dick Wakefield, a tall, rangy youth with a loose swing at the plate, did all of these things and today he is worth $40,000, $45,000 or $47,500, according to which report you wish to believe.

It seems the Detroit Tigers paid the young man one of the aforementioned sums merely to get his autograph on a professional baseball contract. And he's only a sophomore with but one year of college baseball under his belt and so green the Tigers may have to start him in a Class D league.

There were two or three amusing sidelights in connection with this little bit of high finance on the part of a youngster who is not yet dry behind the ears as the ball players say.

Most amusing of all was the effect his signing had on every club owner outside Detroit. Some of them were so shocked they couldn't speak. Holy horror seemed to fill the souls of others. And, at last reports, Gerry Nugent, owner of the Phillies, who is willing to go all the way up to $100 for a diamond in the rough, was thinking seriously of taking a course at Michigan himself.

Young Wakefield set a precedent that may have far reaching effects. Just as Babe Ruth was responsible for a general increase in baseball salaries, so, too is Wakefield responsible for an immediate boom in rookie values. For instance, we understand that the Yankees had to raise the ante to get Dick Ames, Yale pitcher, to attach his signature to a contract. After all, a course in Economics is just as good at Yale as it is at Michigan.

Sandlotters Feeling Oats

And one veteran scout told us recently that even the sandlotters are beginning to feel their financial oats, and are insisting on a bigger piece of sugar for signing.

The sandlotters realize that they are at a disadvantage in the financial bickering and it would not surprise us to see some of the lads matriculating at one of the colleges, preferably Michigan.

We have the greatest admiration for young Wakefield's financial genius. We admired especially the way he shopped around among the clubs before signing, and we wish he would give our wife a few tips on how to shop.

Collegians Used to Beg

Time was when a collegian came around begging for a chance to play professional baseball. Even those most in demand—fellows like George Sisler and Frankie Frisch—were lucky to get $5,000 for signing.

But young Wakefield changed all that. He was in no hurry. And like the mother of a glamor gal, he sampled all the clubs before finding the right millionaire.

We talked to a college professor the other day whose annual salary for teaching higher mathematics is $6,000 and he wondered sadly if he hadn't made a mistake in choosing a career.

"I have to work seven years," he said, "to earn as much in stuffy classrooms as that boy Wakefield gets merely for signing his name to a piece of paper. But with this difference: at the end of seven years I'll have very little, if anything, of what I earn left while he has his all in a lump sum."

Fight Mob Surprised

Most surprising reaction of all, however, was among the fight mob who usually are the first to say a man is entitled to all he can get. One of the old time fight managers said it wasn't right.

He explained his attitude in the matter this way. "I don't mind Joe Louis knocking off $150,000 for a fight like he did with Billy Conn. After all, he's the champion—the best man in the world in his field and it took him years to get where he is. And the promoter who paid him that dough made a lot of money too.

"But what has this young punk Wakefield ever done? Where does he rate 45 Gs? I thought Babe Ruth was worth every cent of the $80,000 the Yanks paid him because he drew that all back and more at the gate. But this kid has yet to prove he can go in any sort of fast company. I think those baseball people are nuts."

Other Cases Recalled

And just in passing, it may be noted that Christy Mathewson got nothing for signing with the Giants; that Ty Cobb got ditto for signing a baseball contract and that Connie Mack signed up Eddie Collins, Frank Baker, and Stuffy McInnis for railroad fare.

The more we think of young Wakefield, the more we wonder why the government doesn't ask him for a few tips on how to raise money for the defense fund. The boy is a marvel.

Catch Escaping Prisoners Who Planned Revolt on Greeting BBC Signal

United Press

BUDAPEST, July 16.—Official communiques yesterday revealed that 100 Serbian and Jewish prisoners on Monday escaped from an improvised Croatian concentration camp at Kurestinis, near Monobor, and succeeded in obtaining arms but 50 of them were recaptured yesterday. All of those recaptured will face court-martial.

The communique said the prisoners had planned an extensive revolt, the signal for the commencement of which would be broadcast by the British Broadcasting Company. The signal was to be the Morse sign for V, meaning victory, but the Croatian Government learned in advance of the plot and nipped it.

LOCAL PRO BOXERS' MERITS ANALYZED

Scribe Compares Some of Japan's Best Pugilists With Those of Axis'

By F.H.H.
(Contributed)

After the long awaited match between the national amateur teams of Japan and Germany was postponed because of the Russo-German War it is perhaps too early to consider further developments which most certainly would have arisen out of the impetus which boxing would have got from that visit of such an experienced team of amateurs which can perhaps be called the world championship team.

In Japan, however, unlike other countries with the exception of the United States perhaps, professional boxing plays a leading role not only in quality, drawing power, but also in the number of active performers. Therefore, most probably a visit of professional boxers would soon have followed the visit of the simon pures and it is to be expected that whenever such a start will actually happen the interest will be enormous. Germany would be in the lucky position to send for instance a team of three consisting of Carl Blaho, now ex-light weight champion of Europe, Ernst Weiss, feather weight champion of Europe who outgrew the bantam weight division where he held the European crown too, and finally Hermann Remscheid, the German bantam weight champion who just these days failed to annex also the European crown of this division because of an unlucky overweigh which he had on the day when he had to fight Cattaneo whom he clearly out-pointed in the non-title match.

With these three men a couple of very attractive drawing cards could be put together with the leading pugilists of Japan. 'Piston' Horiguchi would have to be called the No. 1 contender against Remscheid and Weiss as well, whereas he might find the going already a little too tough when meeting Carl Blaho who is several pounds heavier than he. This ex-champion of Europe has considered recently his retirement from the ring after a very successful career during 10 long years in the ring. Still last year he was good enough to defend the European championship in the light weight division several times successfully which now in turn he lost against the Italian Bisterzo in a 15-round-decision. Although Blaho must be classified entirely as a boxer preferring the scientific fencing with the natural arms to brainless slugging, he still carries punch enough in both fists to knock out an opponent in classic style. This he proved when a few months ago he ko.'ed the Italian Fabriciani who that time even ranked higher than the newly crowned Bisterzo. He achieved that victory with a single left hook after opening his partner by wily feints.

Nobody has tested so far 'Piston' Horiguchi as to his capacity to absorb punishment. Since he mostly fights open like a barn door he gives too good an aim to a deadly puncher, the more if such an opponent is used also to go a long number of rounds, and does not surrender to his inexhauctible stamina. Even the super-defensive R. Boku who certainly does not claim to carry a k.o. punch had Horiguchi on the verge of a k.o. last fall when he out-pointed him over 10 rounds.

Still Ernst Weiss and Hermann Remscheid would be a good test for Japan's kingpin among the professional boxers, for the first one was good enough to win the European championship of bantam weight against Aurel Thoma from Rumania by k.o. who is nowadays found in America among the first ten bantam weights of the world. After he outgrew the lower division he has performed successfully in that class and his last deed was the win of the European feather title against Lucien Popescu from Rumania. Besides Schmeling, Neusel, Heuser and Eder, he is the boxer with the longest experience who has mostly fought abroad and met in France, England and America the cream of the world. Even Peter Kane in his prime could only win a close decision against him.

With such pugilists as Fukuda, Aoki and Boku in the light weight, Horiguchi, Sasazaki in the feather and several bantams more like Soda, Kongo avilable, there is no doubt about very interesting fights on the one hand which certainly could only stimulate boxing in Japan which is sometimes rather dull and lacks certain pep. On the other hand, a lucrative financial end of such an expedition ought to be ascertained as well.

Lightweight Champion of Germany

Carl Blaho of Germany with other boxers was scheduled to appear in local rings, but the war with Russia killed the plans. Blaho has been fighting for 10 years. He held the lightweight crown of Europe until last year when the Italian Bisterzo took his belt away from his in a 15-round decision. The picture shows Blaho on the right in one of the hectic rounds of the championship bout between him and Bisterzo.

TRACK RECORDS HELD MOST BY AMERICANS

Kaneyama, Holder of Hop Step And Jump and Finns in Javelin Make Clean Sweep

A collection of the outstanding records established by track and field athletes this first half year of 1941 throughout the world reveals once again the almost complete domination of American cinder path stars. American athletes have broken four world records this season and are listed on top in 14 out of 16 events.

Where Uncle Sams stars failed to complete a clean sweep were the hop step and jump, and the javelin, which are firmly held by a Japanese and a Finlander, respectively.

Otherwise, the list reads like the final results of an American national Amateur Athletic Union championships with four national champions, Grover Klemmer, Leslie Steers, Cornelius Warmerdam and Archie Harris credited with establishing the new world records.

In the track events, Klemmer of the San Francisco Olympic Club has run an "impossible" 46 seconds flat race bettering the old record of 46.1 set by Archie Williams, Olympic athlete in 1936. Leslie Steers, the Oregonian high jumper who has exceeded the world mark three times this season is listed with 2.10 meters. Warmerdam, the California youth tops the pole vaulters by a good margin being credited with a 4.71 meters jump. And the Negro athlete from University of Indiana, Archie Harris has made a world record-bettering discus throw of 53.25 meters.

Kaneyama of Nippon with a leap of 15.65 meters has followed the footstep of other great Japanese hop step and jump stars and leads in this event, while the Finns, true to tradition, command the javelin with two throws of 73.72 and 72.94.

LAWN BOWLS TILTS OF Y.C.A.C. PLAYED

Despite Rain Some 40 Matches Finished With 60 Games Being Decided

Despite the adverse weather which has made play impossible for many days during the past month, the lawn bowls tournament at the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club has made considerable progress.

About 40 matches have been played, and with 18 walkovers being granted, some 60 games have been decided. There have been a number of close matches in the six events, and several upsets have occurred already.

The closest and one of the most interesting matches played has been in the championship doubles, E. Dentici and K. F. Wiersum, a veteran pair which held the title in 1937, beating out M. L. Russell and F. R. Harriss by just one point 21 to 20. The younger combination bowled very well, and the outcome was in doubt until the very end with the lead changing hands several times.

Lovely-Shearer Win

Another good match was the one between L. H. Lovely and A. A. F. Shearer against D. Dentici and S. Stephens, the former pair winning by 21 to 14. With both skips, Shearer and Stephens, being former champions, the bowling was of a high standard. G. E. Beatty and P. H. Lord, the doubles titleholders, were bowling at their best to beat D. Harvey and C. Heseltine, another strong pair, by 21 to 6.

W. A. Tomlinson, the lawn bowls captain, has made the most progress in the championship singles, having already won two rounds. He beat V. A. Gulick in the first match by 21 to 0 and G. A. da Silva in the second by 21 to 12. Heseltine, one of the top notch veterans, beat Beatty, last year's runner-up for the championship, by 21 to 16 in a hard fought game in which both contestants played well.

The closest match in the men's handicap singles so far is the one between Lord and W. Blamey. The former, one of the leading players with a handicap of minus nine, beat his opponent, a beginner with a handicap of plus five, by 21 to 19. A. A. Weiss (plus three) gave K. F. Wiersum, the singles champion who started at minus ten, a hard fight before the latter gained the decision at 21 to 17. Tomlinson, another veteran with a minus nine handicap, had considerable difficulty in disposing of W. H. Helm, a tyro who started at scratch, the score being 21 to 18.

In the ladies' singles handicap, Miss Teresita Planas, who won the event last year, beat Miss Doris Eastlake by 23 to 15. The loser, a beginner whose handicap is plus six, played well against her experienced opponent whose rating is minus six. Miss Dagmar Isaacsen (plus five) gained the decision over Mrs. Irene Lord (minus 2) in a close match, the score being 23 to 16. In a match between two tyros, Mrs. Anna da Silva (plus seven) beat Miss Gertrude Satchell (plus six) by 21 to 15.

A battle royal in the mixed doubles handicap was the match between Miss W. Dunning and D. Dentici (minus five) against Mrs. A. G. Stevens and Heseltine (minus three), the former pair winning by 21 to 19. A pair of beginners, Miss Lena Salter and Joe da Costa (pus seven) staged an upset by beating Mrs. F. E. Olsson and A. A. F. Shearer (minus three) by 21 to 11. The heaviest handicapped pair, Miss Planas and Beatty (minus twelve) beat Miss Irene Pischel and H. S. G. Batter (minus three) by 21 to 6.

Results of matches decided up to Wednesday evening are as follows:

St. Mary's Famed for Gridiron Boasts One-Man Track Team in Football End

I.N.S.

MORAGA, California, June 26.—St. Mary's College today has the distinction of operating a one-man college track team, and the Galloping Gaels soon may be heard from in other fields, in addition to the eminent position on the nation's gridirons.

The track team is one Joe Aguirre, former end on the football team, and a basketball star of note.

Aguirre is a shot-putter.

When Marty Kordick, assistant football coach, heard of his ability to put a shot, he signed him up and made a track team out of him.

This is the first move at St. Mary's toward establishing a track squad.

The number of men who are available at the college for track is naturally not enough for Kordick to hope to compete in dual meets. However, he intends to enter the invitational meets and pick his spots.

Aguirre has taken part in three meets this year. His first was the Long Beach Relays, where he broke the novice shot-put record with a toss of 47 feet 7¾ inches. This mark shattered the old record of 47½ feet.

Next he took honors in the St. Mary's intramural meet. His big day came when he placed second in the Pacific Association meet with a throw of 49 feet 5 inches.

Costly Initiation

I.N.S.

HARRISBURG, Pennsylvania July 10.—It cost Filippo Sgrignoli, Harrisburg, $82 to become a member of the "sidewalk superintendents club." He reported to police that his pocket had been picked as he stood with other bystanders watching a street repair project.

MOST GRUELLING SPORT CREW RACE

Several Oldtimers Agree Oarsmen Take More Body Punishment Than Other Athletes

I.N.S.

NEW YORK, June 26.—Which is the most punishing of all sports?

Is it a fight, a wrestling match, a mile run, a marathon, a football game, a six-day bike grind, a tennis match, a crew race or a water polo match?

We put this question up to several oldtimers in the sports world and without exception they agreed today that the most gruelling sport on an athlete is a four-mile crew race.

In every other sport an athlete may get a breather for himself but not in a crew race. Once that gun barks, the oarsman is at the mercy of the stroke oar and he must follow that stroke's pace in perfect unison and without a let-up for about 20 minutes.

Suppose you are No. 5 in the shell. After rowing at a terrific pace for two miles, your lungs feel ready to burst; your eyes seem ready to pop out of their sockets. You'd like to rest on your oar if only for a few seconds. But you dare not.

You clench your teeth and pull. You've been hitting a steady 36 beats to the minute, giving every ounce of strength you have to each pull.

You hit the three mile mark with your arms and legs protesting in agony. By this time everything is a blur before your eyes. You wonder if you'll be able to keep it up. And just as the thought takes root in your mind the stroke oar raises the beat.

It's up to 38 now but you don't know that. All you know is that somewhere you must find more speed and energy. There is a roaring sound in your ears. Your heart is pounding in your chest. You wonder if you'll be able to last and just then the stroke oar shoots the beat up to 40.

Body Protests in Pain

You sense that this must be the sprinting finish. Somehow you follow the pace with every part of your body shouting a protest in pain.

Ah, the finish. The race is over. You slump over on your oar, your eyes closed, your breath coming in gasps.

That's a crew race. Twenty minutes of giving every last ounce of energy and strength you have, pulling in perfect cohesion with your mates.

Oarsmen Anonymous

And no glory goes with your effort. For no athlete is more anonymous than an oarsman.

That's why we often wonder why oarsmen go through the rigors of weeks of training and the gruelling punishment of a race, as they do for the regatta at Poughkeepsie.

We suppose they must like it or they wouldn't do it.

Y.C.A.C. TO MAKE UP TIME LOST BY RAIN

British Embassy Team to Feature Sports Program—Dancing to Climax Busy Weekend

With a dry weekend likely for the first time in three weeks, sports enthusiasts at the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club are busy planning to make up for lost time this weekend. Cricket, baseball, tennis, lawn bowls and the ladies' softball players are keeping their fingers crossed so that their schedules for Saturday and Sunday will not be ruined again by ole Jupe Pluvius.

Cricket and tennis will share the limelight (and sunlight, it is hoped) on Saturday afternoon. Baseball, lawn bowls and ladies' softball will be the attractions on Sunday afternoon there will be an informal dinner dance in the evening, rain or shine.

The British Embassy cricket team will journey down from Tokyo to play the Y.C. and A.C. on Saturday, in a match scheduled to start at 2 p.m. Followers of this popular English summer sport have been looking forward to this game with keen interest. The diplomats have a strong line-up. It is expected they have a good chance to win. The visitors have a number of good bowlers and several fine batsmen. The Y.C. and A.C. also has a number of allround players, and a keen contest for the honors is expected.

Two championship tennis matches, one a final and the other a semi-final, are also scheduled for Saturday afternoon. At 3 p.m., Per Aurell and Jean Cornu will meet in the championship singles semi-final, and the winner will play Bill Craigie for the title at a later date. At 3:45 p.m., the mixed doubles championship final between Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Fachtmann against Miss Mildred Laffin and Michel Jalenques will get under way.

The ladies' softball game will be the first event on Sunday afternoon, the club team meeting the St. Maur's School ten at 1:30 p.m. Honors are evenly divided among the two squads in the three contests they have played to date, each having one victory to its credit and the first meeting having ended in a tie. A keen fight for the laurels is expected in this tilt as the winner will be considered the better team.

The ladies' contest will be followed by a baseball game between the Y.C. and A.C. nine and the King Club, of Tokyo, scheduled for 3 p.m. The latter gained the verdict in the last meeting with the home squad after extra innings. The Y.C. and A.C. nine has improved considerably since then, and if it plays the baseball of which it is capable, it should reverse the previous decision on Sunday.

The men's championship doubles tennis final is also set to get under way at 3 p.m., with Aurell and H. S. G. Batter playing against Cornu and Jalenques for the title. A keen battle with plenty of good tennis is expected.

The weekend activities will be capped by an informal dinner dance, at which "Bucky" Shirakata's Hawaiian band will play from 7 to 10 p.m. If the weather is fine, tables and chairs will be placed on the lawn, with dancing in the verandah.

NEW YORK, July 21.—The Detroit Tiger held the Yanks for 17 innings today but then blew up and permitted a half dozen runs to cross the plate. The New Yorkers took the extra-inning thriller by a 12 to 6 count and in doing so extended their league lead to seven games.

The game was a see-saw affair with the lead changing hands several times. When the ninth inning was finished, the score was knotted at 6-all and excited Detroit fans sat through seven scoreless innings before the Yanks in their typical showman's style broke the deadlock with a bang.

The New Yorkers collected 19 hits off three Detroit hurlers while the three Yankee moundsmen allowed 14 safeties in 17 innings of play.

The fast-moving St. Louis Browns swept their second straight double-header from the Boston Red Sox, marking their eighth win in the last seven days.

St. Louis took the opener, 6 to 3, and coasted to a 10 to 0 win in the second game.

George McQuinin, St. Louis first-baseman, continued his brilliant hitting by connecting with a pair of homers in the first game. Ted Williams saved Boston from being white-washed when he connected with a homer in the ninth inning with two mates aboard.

McQuinn came through with another circuit drive in the second game. Joe Grace also contributed a homer.

Bob Muncrief, the big drawling Texan acquired by the Browns from San Antonio, limited the Red Sox to seven hits and let only one Bostonian get as far as third base.

The Cleveland Indians failed to keep up the fast pace set by the Yanks and dropped back another half game when they divided their double bill with the Washington Senators, losing the opener, 8 to 4, and taking the second game 5 to 1.

Jim Vernon, rookie Washington infielder, proved his worth by pounding out a three-bagger in the fifth frame of the opener with two men on base. Jimmy Bloodworth came through with a homer and Ken Keltner contributed a circuit drive for the Indians.

Jim Bagby represented the Cleveland club on the mound in the second game and hurled shut-out ball every inning but the second. He yielded eight hits but kept them well scattered.

Veteran Ted Lyons turned in his ninth victory of the year as he pitched Chicago to a 2 to 1 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics. Ted allowed only six hits and Sam Chapman's homer represented the A's only score.

Taft Wright, White Sox outfielder, led the batting attack for the winners by supplying three hits.

In the second half of the Bargain Day bill, the Athletics though extended to 13 innings, evened the count by winning, 4 to 1.

Ben McCoy brought in the winning run when he socked out a long sacrifice fly in the 13th when the bases were loaded.

Bob Johnson then doubled to bring in two more scores.

On Guard Against Two Foes

The soldiers on the front in China have to contend with an enemy just as deadly as human opposition. They must be on guard against insects carrying dangerous diseases. The photo shows a hooded sentry of the Japanese army in China in the mountain region near Ichang, Hupeh Province, poised ever on the alert against the mosquitoes carrying malaria germs.

RICKEY IS SMARTEST IN TRADING PLAYERS

Everytime Branch Deals With Another Club, He Makes Oozles of Money

I.N.S.

NEW YORK, June 26.—Did Branch Rickey put over another fast one when he sent Fiddler Bill McGee to the Giants for Harry Gumbert?

It's a bit too early to say for sure, but from the way both hurlers have been going, it would seem the David Harum of St. Louis is still making a show of the rest of the major league moguls in the gentle art of getting the best of baseball barters. Their fattened purse helps prove it.

McGee has been doing more fiddling than pitching while Gumbert has looked very good in his first starts as a Cardinal. If McGee is a flop, Rickey can chalk up another score on the most successful selling board in baseball.

Branch has probably sold more ball players than any other mogul in diamond history. In the last year he has peddled about $200,000 worth of talent: i.e. the Cardinal coffers were ripened to that extent.

Dodgers Pay $125,000

Last Summer he sold Outfielder Joe Medwick and Pitcher Curt Davis to the Dodgers for $125,000, Pitchers Sam Nahem, Carl Doyle, Outfielder Ernie Koy and Infielder Bert Haas. He sent Doyle to the minor leagues and recently sold Koy to the Reds for a reported $80,000.

Now Medwick has been a big flop with Brooklyn while Davis hasn't shown much and has been used chiefly as a relief pitcher. A total of $125,000 and all those players is a pretty fair price for such a pair—but that's nothing new with Rickey.

Do we have to remind you of the Dizzy Dean classic?

That was probably the greatest deal ever swung by Branch.

The Cubs were hot after the Dizzy one and Rickey knew he could tilt their ante by keeping them waiting. He also knew that Dean was on the way out with a failing arm.

So after long negotiations, Rickey condescended to sell Dean to Owner Wrigley of the Cubs for a paltry $185,000. Dizzy won exactly 16 games in three years for Chicago! He only recently quit the game as a player and now is a Cub coach.

Others to Be Judged

Witness a few more deals Mr. Rickey has put over, and judge them in the light of future developments: Brooklyn got catcher Herman Franks for $15,000 and catcher Mickey Owen for $50,000. Stu Martin went to Pittsburgh for a reported $15,000 and Mike Ryba, the one man ball club, to the Red Sox for $20,000 more.

Correspondence Course For Umpires to Start As Arbiters Are Scarce

I.N.S.

WICHITA, Kansas, June 26.—It's not players that are scarce—but umpires. President Ray Dumont of the National Semi-Pro Baseball Congress announced today that there is a shortage of competent umpires, not only to officiate in district and state tournaments, but also in the National Association of Leagues. For the reason the national organization has decided on a 12-month correspondence course for all applications they accept in the National Association of Umpires so the fans won't be calling 'em "Robbers" or "Blind Toms."

Japan Yesterday And Today

Being born a man, one could not aspire to a more glorious fate than his!'"

(Tamekane, the valorous and accomplished courtier, and the great grandson of the famous Fujiwara Sadayuki, the Prince of noble poets, was arrested by the Hojo Government's agents as one of the leaders of the "Imperial revolt" and was exiled to the Sado isle —a martyr to the Royalist cause. Such a paragraph may indicate the direction in which Kenko's sympathy went forth regarding the tragic campaign which had been waged between the Hojo usurpers and the Imperial defenders.)

'How to Drain Sake-Cup'

"'Why do we leave a few drops of sake at the bottom of the cup and throw them out when offering it to a friend?' asked some one, and I tentatively said, 'It may be to wash out the possible dregs which may remain at the bottom as it is called 'gyo-to' ('gyo' meaning 'something hard,' and 'to' meaning 'the bottom')'. 'No, sir,' another corrected me. 'It is not 'gyo-to,' but it is 'gyo-do'—the Way of a Fish.' With the sake remaining at the bottom we wash that part of the edge of the cup from which we have drunk, and we must empty the cup slowly in the same manner as if we were transferring the imaginary fish inside the cup into another basin.'"

'Youth and Crabbed Age'

"Old persons are as superior to young men in wisdom just as young persons are superior to old men in personal looks."

BERLIN, July 18.—The German air force in the eastern campaign is the subject of a military editorial written by Captain Renner in the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung.

Captain Renner writes that the first and most impressive information given out by the German High Command after one week of keenest, but unconditionally confident waiting, is that really historical succession of special announcements broadcast on Sunday, June 30, concerned the German Air Force.

In less than 24 hours, with only 35 of its own machines lost, 1,811 Soviet aircraft had become its victim. This figure increased up to the seventh day of fighting to 4,107 and further up to July 9, that is the 18th day of fighting, to the staggering number of 6,223, which means in any case that the major part of the Soviet air force, conservatively estimated at 75 per cent almost has been destroyed.

Thereby in an even more gigantic measure, at more astonishing speed and by far more completely than in the previous campaigns the German Luftwaffe has created the necessary premises for carrying through operations on a large scale and according to plan. For a start it deprived through its exceedingly hard blows the enemy leadership of their eyes and of the majority of their long range weapons, their fighting formations. Just imagine the position of the enemy considering that the only sources of information regarding the situation at the front would have been the reports of the German High command, if the German leadership had not forestalled this possibility right from the start. The German Luftwaffe therefore not only did away with enemy air reconnaissance, but its fighting formations through mass attacks on rear communication centers, staff quarters and information centers apparently completely paralyzed the Soviet communication system right up to the highest commanding organs.

This work of destruction, which as already mentioned struck the enemy leadership with blindness, was even more detrimental because the enemy's system of communication had likewise been destroyed to a large extent, which meant that the Soviet leadership could not follow the movements of the German armies. At the same time, it created the possibility to employ the German air force for far-reaching reconnaissance, for securing the German advance units on the ground, to announce in good time any perils threatening from the enemy, and for countless other tasks. Even if enemy defence in the air had not been completely eliminated, the danger for the German planes employed in the east had been lessened to a considerable extent.

The German airmen, fully conscious of the tremendous importance of their work in the territory of this eastern theater of war, which is so difficult to reconnoiter, have made full use of all possibilities which offered. Only history will be able to record in detail how manifold and important the individual employment of the air force in the wide reaches of the Soviet Union has become in carrying out the most audacious enterprises.

The communique of the German High Command regarding the breaching of the Stalin Line, which was again accomplished with the strongest support of the Luftwaffe, indicates how many tasks are still waiting for the German airmen in the east. Already now the air force through far-reaching destruction of enemy railways has deprived the opponent of any possibility of undertaking major scale counter-operations.

PIONEER TSUJIMURA OF PHOTO ART DIES

Introduced Picture Engraving To Japan—Was 65 Years of Age

Yosaburo Tsujimura, President of the Tsujimura Photo Engraving Company, Nishi-Ginza, Tokyo, who introduced the art of photo engraving to this country from America, died of lung necrosis Friday at 9 p.m. at his residence. He was 65 years of age.

The funeral service will be held Saturday 1 p.m. at the company, under the Buddhist rites.

He is survived by Tsuta Tsujimura, his wife and Ichiro Tsujimura, his only son, who is now at the China front.

Born in Hikone in Shiga Prefecture on April 26, 1877, as the third son to Sanemon Tsujimura. He went over to the United States in 1899, to study the art of printing. He learned the art of copper photographic plate at New York, and returned to Japan after staying there seven years.

As soon as he came back here, he advocated the use of copper photographic plate printing in newspapers, which were then using only wooden plate printings. His suggestion gained ground quickly, and he was engaged by the Jiji Shimpo, then headed by Yukichi Fukuzawa, cultural leader of the Meiji era, as the chief of its printing department.

In 1907 he resigned the post to open his own shop, which is the present Tsujimura Photo Engraving Company.

He inspected Europe in 1916 and brought the art of gravure printing to this country with him.

He was chosen, after returning, chief of the Tokyo Photo Engraving Corporation, Director of the Japan Photo Engraving Corporation, respectively in 1932 and 1937. The deceased held many other positions of honor.

Federal Government Framing New Tax Bill

despite the heavy income-tax payments, national buying power was increased nearly $630,000,000 owing to the excess of Government spending over receipts.

As the pace of defense spending rises this contribution is bound to rise also. Before long the Government may be pumping purchasing power into the hands of the public at the rate of $1,000,000,000 a month or more. The general level of prices has thus far increased only about 10 per cent since the war began; but the trend is shown by the Government's index of basic commodity prices which has gone up 38 per cent.

Thus the problem that confronted the Treasury experts and the members of the House Ways and Means Committee as they sat down to draw up a new tax bill was not merely to raise some money. It was also to provide a means whereby a part of the increased purchasing power that is being pumped into the national economy by defense spending could be siphoned back into the Treasury.

Objectives Outlined

This was clearly indicated by Secretary Morgenthau in his statement to the committee. He outlined four objectives which he said the new tax program was designed to promote. In brief, they were: to pay for a reasonable proportion of our expenditures; to provide that all sections of the people shall bear their fair share of the burden; to help mobilize our resources for defense by reducing the amount of money that the public can spend for comparatively less important things; finally, to prevent a general rise in prices by keeping the total volume of monetary purchasing power from outrunning production.

To be on the safe side, the Treasury's tax expert, Assistant Secretary John L. Sullivan, submitted proposals calculated to raise $3,600,000,000 more revenue. These provided for sharply higher income taxes through the imposition of a new surtax starting at 11 per cent on the first dollar of taxable income and mounting with every $2,000 increase in income until it reached 21 per cent at the $5,000 to $10,000 level; 36 per cent at the $22,000 to $26,000 level and finally 75 per cent, which is the same as the existing rate, in the highest brackets. The surtax was to come on top of the normal tax of 4 per cent and a supertax, equal to 1½ per cent of normal and surtax, topped the whole. The heaviest increase proposed fell on incomes in the middle brackets from $5,000 to $25,000. In some cases the new schedules will mean a tax six or seven times as great as was paid this year.

New Excise Schedule

In addition to the increased income taxes, the Treasury's plan called for heavier gift and estate taxes, a surtax on corporation incomes and new or increased excise and "nuisance" taxes, including increased levies on cigarettes, liquor and gasoline; a 5 per cent tax on transportation tickets and telephone bills; taxes on checks, matches and a long list of "luxuries" from furs to bowling alleys.

No one could be sure how much or how little of the initial proposals would be retained by the time Congress completed its work. But there appeared to be general support for Secretary Morgenthau's position that two-thirds of the $19,000,000,000 budget should be covered by taxes. That will mean, according to Daniel W. Bell, Undersecretary of the Treasury, that including State and local levies, the American people will be paying taxes next year equal to about 24 per cent of an estimated national income of $80,000,000,000.

Many Happy Returns

Baron Reijiro Wakatsuki and his wife Baroness Toku Wakatsuki will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary on Monday. In the above picture the happy couple are being felicitated by caroling young pupils of the Showa national school in the neighborhood. The former Premier said he passes the days at his villa at Ito, Shizuoka prefecture, by weeding the garden and practising archery in his own style. He added he goes to bed and gets up early.

U.S. PLANE PRODUCTION DOUBLED IN SIX MONTHS

Output of Military Craft Greater Than Published Figures Of OPM

Reuters

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The production of twin-engined bombers in the United States was nearly doubled in the first six months of this year, defense officials stated last night.

This was one example of increases in the output of military planes which, they disclosed, has been far greater than was indicated by published figures from the Office of Production Management showing that production had increased 42 per cent from January to June.

It is learned in other authoritative quarters, however, that two-engined bombers gained 92 per cent in output, one-engined dive and torpedo bombers 146 per cent, and pursuit, observation and other military aircraft 142 per cent.

Only in the heavy bomber class—giant four-engined craft—was there no appreciable gain; but officials indicated that an appreciable increase could be expected soon. Officials said that a "substantial proportion" of two-engined bombers had been sent to Britain.

Baron and Baroness Wakatsuki to Mark Advent of Golden Wedding Anniversary

Baron Reijiro Wakatsuki, former president of the defunct Minseito political party and one-time Premier, will celebrate his golden wedding Monday.

To the 76-year-old Baron Wakatsuki, with a brilliant political life behind him, and his 70-year-old wife, Baroness Toku Wakatsuki, the commemorative day of their golden wedding has finally arrived.

Sitting in his drawing room before the painting presented to him by his friends in fecilitation of the occasion, Baron Wakatsuki, when interviewed by a reporter of a local newspaper Friday, said:

"The impressions of the 50 years of my life can be summed up in having led an impoverished life. I always caused trouble and worry to my wife on monetary matters. I married a year before I graduated from the Tokyo Imperial University.

"Therefore, the life I led in the world after graduation can be summed up in these 50 years. I am very grateful indeed to know that the pupils of the Showa national school in the neighborhood will come to my house and congratulate me. The school asked me to appear in front of the house on the occasion as there are many pupils who do not know me although living in the neighborhood.

"Because of poor eyesight, I have found it rather difficult to read books recently. After taking three times the time of ordinary persons in reading newspapers, I read Chinese books which have large characters. Then I practise archery once a day for my health in my own style. When I stay at my villa at Ito, Shizuoka Prefecture, I pass the days in weeding out my garden and have become deeply tanned by the sun. As I cannot do so in Tokyo, I go to bed and wake up early."

FINNS' CAUSE JUST, HAKKILA DECLARES

Fighting for Freedom Alongside Strong Friend, President Radiocasts

Transocean

HELSINKI, July 21.—"In the last great conflict with Soviet Russia, Finland stood alone fighting a hopeless war. But today it is different because Finland battles for her cause shoulder to shoulder with a strong friend," President V. Hakkila of the Finnish Parliament declared in a nationwide radio broadcast yesterday.

"The present conflict is a continuation of the last war with the Soviet Union, which was fought with the sympathies of the world. In the present struggle Finland's cause is not less just; this it is hoped the world recognizes.

"No matter what were the political doctrines of the Russian Governments, they always aimed at crushing Finland. This was so in the days of the czars. It was so after the revolution during the days of the 'white' Government, and it is particularly true now in the time of the Bolshevik Government. This last has shown its will to the destruction of Finland quite openly. The extent of the danger has been shown by the documents which revealed the pressure under which the Finnish Government had to work for its existence.

"Often enough the dangers were so great that it seemed to be only a matter of hours before the bolsheviks would fall upon our country.

"The task before us now is to create such frontiers for our nation that Finland may be able to live in peace. Finland cannot permit the constant sacrifice of her best youth.

"The old frontier split Finland into two spheres with many of the Finnish people left outside. We are not fighting for an indemnity because the Bolshevik Government is doomed—no indemnity could be collected from it. Our indemnity must be paid in a natural way. We do not indulge in fantastic dreams of a greater Finland. We want an adequate sphere to live in and to liberate the Finnish people in Karelia from their almost 1,000 years of enslavement.

"The present Finnish generation will be good administrators of what it inherited from its fathers and will leave it enlarged to the following generation," the President of the Finnish Parliament concluded.

TOKYO, MONDAY, JULY 28, 1941.

The Emperor Meiji

July 30 which is to be observed as a national holiday in memory of the Emperor Meiji naturally brings back to mind events that took place during his reign of 44 years. It was indeed a reign of great changes, peace and war, construction and reconstruction, reform and reorganization. And to those of us who lived through a part of that period and the era that followed under the Emperor Taisho and have lived through half a generation of the present Emperor's reign, the changes that loom in retrospect are almost staggering in their immensity.

The first crisis that the country under the rule of the Emperor Meiji faced, in its career as a modern state, was the war with China. If Japan was fairly confident of its military strength on land, China's naval force was decidedly formidable. China had a pair of steel armored battleships, but Japan had none. Of the efficiency of China's fighting machine little was known until it was put to the test.

The successful termination of this war brought on another crisis which was seen in the form of what is known as the triple intervention. The foothold that Japan had secured on the mainland as the result of successful arms was regarded as dangerous by the intervening countries. Japan was asked by France, Germany and Russia to give up the Liaotung Peninsula which she had acquired by virtue of the treaty signed at Shimonoseki. This treaty was signed by Li Hung Chang, the Chinese plenipotentiary and Prime Minister on April 17, 1895. On April 23 the Japanese Government received the notes of triple intervention.

What took place as the result of the triple intervention is now recalled in its relationship with the alignment those European Powers now make with Japan. With Germany Japan shares Axis aspirations and programs of new construction. As Japan set out to build a new order in East Asia in 1937, Germany in Europe did likewise two years later to fight for similar objects.

Relations with Soviet Russia have seen more vicissitudes. But after years of more or less strained relations Japan and Soviet Russia are now tied by a pact of neutrality. The circumstances in which this pact was arranged provide a hopeful outlook for the settlement of a number of issues outstanding between the two countries. Trends were evidently in the same direction until Moscow's attention became occupied elsewhere because of the war with Germany. However, that the relationship between Japan and Soviet Russia remains unchanged has been officially indicated.

Japan's relations with France took a new turn when the Yonai Government proposed the East Asia co-prosperity sphere program. It became at once plain that this program would not be complete without French Indo-China cooperating as an active partner. The foreign or colonial policy of the Vichy Government at first was not quite ready to fall in with this scheme. However, the altered condition of world affairs since has enabled France to decide on her participation in the Japanese scheme through her Far Eastern colony.

It is also of historical interest to remember that Japan in the closing part of the feudal regime and for some years after the Imperial restoration of 1868 turned to France and Germany for military and naval training. The defense forces of the Tokugawa Shogunate were mostly formed on French models and equipped with French arms. It was not until after the Meiji era that German or Prussian methods of military equipment and training began to be copied. When German influence became predominant, French arms and systems were steadily displaced.

But during the world war aid after Japan again looked to France for military tutorship. This was done in the field of aviation. It must linger in the memory of many that the first airplanes that flew over Japan were French machines. The art of flying as well was learned from French officers.

Through the Meiji period arduous national efforts were bent on development of national armaments. But with all the progress made, Japan failed to achieve in a full sense self-sufficiency in arms before the great Meiji Emperor died in 1912, but the foundations laid throughout his era made possible all the achievements later seen in the fields of science and defense.

The great Emperor, before his demise, was able at least to see his country well on the road to that world prominence which was to be achieved in his successors' times. The country was already one of the most progressive among the world nations.

From the standpoint of diplomacy, in 1911 the Anglo-Japanese alliance was renewed and with America a treaty of commerce and navigation was made. In the last year of the Emperor Meiji's reign treaties of commerce and navigation were concluded with France, Italy, Austro-Hungary, Denmark, and Holland in succession. The year was marked by constructive efforts in the field of diplomacy.

Although Japan went to war twice in the Meiji period, its closing portion was given mostly to construction in many fields of national endeavor. Although a naval building race with America was soon to develop, the country remained in enjoyment of peace. When the Emperor died there was a general feeling of regret that the great leader who had made his reign so remarkable had not lived long enough to see more of the constructive achievements so ably directed by his wisdom.

Late Rising for Health

Advice is something an energetic business man usually is reluctant to ask for or to accept, unless it is very expensive, when he believes it must be good. Particularly if it has to do with his physical well-being and his way of life. He believes he knows all the answers, and goes gayly on his way until an unmistakable knock in the engine demands attention. To those who have not felt it necessary to slow down the words of Dr. Edgar V. Allen, chief of the medicine division at Mayo Clinic, addressed to the American Medical Association, may be of interest. "The business man fails to take the long view of life," Dr. Allen said. "He plans as if he were to live forever. So he works hard to accumulate funds with which to play tomorrow. Too often, when tomorrow comes, capacity for play no longer exists.

Dr. Allen advised a five-day week and an eight-hour day; gardening, or any other hobby that affords relaxation; golf for fun and not a low score; occasional fasting, avoidance of fats and moderation in use of tobacco and alcohol. And here is a recommendation for executives that will also affect subordinates: It is that men of many affairs remain in bed late one morning a week in order to lengthen their lives and promote efficiency.

Such relaxation would also be helpful to employes who find it difficult to get to business early, as it would tend to relieve the nervous strain due to finding that the boss and arrived first. This one-morning-late-in-bed would, of course, not be Sunday. That would negative its benefits. Probably the National Labor Relations Board could be induced to pronounce it unfair.—N.Y. Herald Tribune.

Easily Explained

The sergeant-major had the reputation of never being at a loss for an answer. A young officer made a bet with a brother officer that in less than 24 hours he would ask the sergeant-major a question that would baffle him.

The sergeant-major accompanied the officer on his rounds, in the course of which the cook-house was inspected. Pointing to a large copper of water just beginning to boil, the officer said:

"Why does that water boil only round the edges of the copper and not in the center?"

"The water round the edge, sir," replied the veteran, "is for the men on guard; they have their breakfast half an hour before the rest of the company."—Tit-Bits.

The Lookout

It was the dear lady's first ride in a taxi, and she watched with growing anxiety the driver continually putting his hand outside the car as a signal to the following traffic.

"Young man," she finally said, "you look after that car of yours, and watch where you're going. I'll tell you when it starts raining."—Christian Science Monitor.

SCENES OF BRITISH HOME FRONT IN WARTIME TOLD BY JOURNALIST

Result of Devastation in Different Areas of London Horrifying With Damages Incalculable

By H. N. BRAILSFORD

Part II

Baltimore Sun

All my American friends ask me to describe the devastation that has fallen on London and on some English ports. It is not easy to answer with the accuracy at which a responsible reporter should aim.

But during the world war aid after Japan again looked to France for military tutorship. This was done in the field of aviation. It must linger in the memory of many that the first airplanes that flew over Japan were French machines. The art of flying as well was learned from French officers.

At first I went about in London looking from day to day for fresh ruins. There was always something to add to one's mental catalogue and the cumulative effect was alarming.

Then it occurred to me that I ought to count the whole buildings as carefully as the casualties. The result was surprising. In Hampstead, where I live, I could draw up a correct list of all the bombs that have fallen within a radius of 10 minutes' walk from my own door; some of the damage was spectacular and even horrifying.

In Central London it is incomparably worse, but even here, expressed as a percentage, it would not be high. Bloomsbury, with the main railway stations to the north of it and the conspicuous new London University building at its center, may have had 20 per cent of its houses so severely damaged that they will have to be demolished and rebuilt.

Respect for the censor, though I am out of reach of his pencil, forbids me to give details. I will only say that one of the most dignified and spacious of its old squares is in ruins, and that the oldest of its thoroughfares is a track through a desert.

Blast is quantitatively more destructive than direct hits: in many of these old houses it has stripped away all the plaster with the door and window frames: only the solid Queen Anne brickwork remains intact. As in Spain, the modern ferro-concrete buildings suffer little. Ruin surrounds the handsome British Broadcasting Building, but though it was twice hit, it was only slightly damaged.

Architectural Tragedies

The architectural tragedies are no longer a secret—the exquisite round church in the Temple, St. Clement's in the Strand, Westminster Hall and Somerset House. Of these, the two latter at least can be repaired, as St. Paul's and Westminster Abbey also can be with ease.

These glorious monuments we shall repair, but elsewhere it is the general will that we shall take our chance to build anew on a more enlightened plan. About half of the old city of London is in ruins and here and there every trace of the former buildings has vanished.

I happened to meet a Cabinet Minister, a Churchillian Tory, as I was surveying the ruins round the old Guildhall. He began talking of Wren's original plan for the rebuilding of London after the Great Fire. He vowed that this time we shall be big enough to carry it out, with its noble terraces, its superb vistas and its gardens.

If he and such as he have their way, we shall do it, but the government that dares so much will have to be braver and more ruthless in facing speculators and the great landlords than any British Government has yet been.

Plan for Rebuilding

Coventry, which has suffered in its older, central area almost total destruction, is the first British city to draw up its plan for rebuilding. Its architect had the audacity to sweep away all memories of the past and with them the hampering claims of the former owners.

He thought out his traffic problem anew, provided on a noble scale for light and air, placed the social and cultural centers of the city where they should be, in its spacious central circle, and adapted his buildings to modern materials.

It was a brilliant and enlightened scheme, but the most encouraging fact about it is that the City Council, which happens to have a Labor party majority, adopted it with enthusiasm and without reserve.

If we could be sure that all the authorities concerned will be as bold as those of Coventry, our distress over the devastation might be turned to congratulation.

Rendered Uninhabitable

I spent a day, recently, wandering among the ruined areas that surround the docks of East London on both shores of the Thames. Though I distrust rough estimates, I think that fully a third of the buildings in this densely peopled area have been rendered uninhabitable.

I defy any civilized being to walk through these sordid streets without wishing to sweep away every trace of the mean past and build it all anew.

From H. G. Wells downward all our Liberals are drawing up their charters of the Rights of Man. I should include in any modern version the right to enjoy the light of the sun, with space and vistas, with trees and green grass, and I would be ruthless with lawyers who stood in the way.

These ugly and ill-built houses stand in monotonous rows only two stories high. If one were to rebuild with only four stories, one might cover half of East London with trees and grass and gardens. If one could persuade Londoners to rebuild 12 stories high, every docker might live in a park.

Shall we do it? Probably not on that bold a scale. But in some degree, subject to our English weakness for compromise, we certainly shall do it.

Without waiting for rebuilding, however, half London's children and a big proportion from Bristol and other stricken cities have already been rescued from these mean streets. It was not easy to drag them out of London, although the Government maintains them at the nation's cost and pays for them, according to age, a weekly sum ranging from $2 to $3

Evacuation Urged

Some of us have urged that the evacuation of children from the danger zones should be compulsory, but sentiment was against us. This vast migration from the crowded cities to the peace of the green counties is the happiest thing that has happened to us in this war.

In some cases the children are housed together in big country mansions requisitioned for the purpose. More often they are billeted with families. The village women who mother them regard their often anxious and difficult task as their contribution to the winning of the war, and most of them perform it with love and care.

When these children brought with them, as to our shame many of them did, the habits and dirt of the slums, it was not easy to fit them into a self-respecting home.

I saw something of this mighty feat of organization in Devon. The school population of this county has been doubled. The children's teachers came with them from London and Bristol, but additional school buildings had to be requisitioned, medical care had to be provided and canteens organized on a big scale, often in very primitive rural places.

Children Rarely Happy

At first these children were rarely happy in their new environment. They missed the noise and bustle of the streets. The beauty of this lovely countryside was nothing to them: a bird was just a bird and a tree was just a tree. When their mothers, furnished by a paternal government with cheap tickets, visited them at Christmas or Easter, they could not understand how anyone could manage to survive in so dull a spot.

But little by little, with the help of their teachers and the country folk, the children began to see the new world around them.

I watched a happy group of them "digging for victory," as the official slogan puts it, and watching for the first time the miracle of the earth that converts a seed into a cabbage.

The boys were already alive to the more romantic side of country life: I watched a party of them, still talking their Cockney dialect, who were trying to catch a salmon in the river Dart with a lasso.

Many of the older boys are now so much in love with the country that they have decided to turn farmers when they finish their schooling. Devon county is helping them, for it has worked out a generous scheme by which they are apprenticed, under supervision, to farmers.

'Land Army' of Women

The towns are the grim battlefields of this aerial war, but victory depends as surely on our ability to economize the shipping by increasing our crops. Even in London wide stretches of Hampstead Heath and the parks have been dug up and converted into vegetable gardens. That has happened also in the pleasure grounds of some ancestral mansions—but as yet too seldom.

The Government has supplied tractors and fertilizers to multiply the yield of the soil and much grassland—though not enough—has gone back to the plow. A "land army" of sturdy young women has been formed for farm work. Better still, thanks to Mr. Bevin, the minimum weekly wage of the agricultural laborer has been raised from the former pitiable 32 shillings to 48 shilling (about $12).

The English village will thrive again and retain its young men only when we lift the standard of life of the rural worker up to that of the industrial population.

'Siemens Metal-Finder'

A new surgical device known as the "Siemens metal-finder," was not long ago tested out in a Berlin clinic. It is an instrument for locating small particles of projectile or metal splinters in the human body during the course of a surgical operation. It operates with entirely harmless high-frequency oscillations of minimum strength, and consists in part of two sterilized probing-sounds and a "loud-speaker." When the point of one of these inserted sounds comes near to a bit of metal, the low droning noise of the loud-speaker changes to a higher note, and the nearer the probe comes to the piece of metal, the higher and more distinct is the note sounded by the recording "loud-speaker."

The surgeon is at once able to locate the direction which the metal splinter has taken, and to prepare to remove the same. During this probing process, which takes only a minute or two, no other metal object must be placed anywhere near the sound. For better working of the device, the patient is usually laid on a horse-hair mattress, or one made of pneumatic rubber. Naturally, also, metal surgical instruments cannot be used prior to locating the splinter, and instruments of porcelain must be substituted. The three German physicians who collaborated in perfecting this new and useful instrument are Dr. Karl Krauss of Hamburg, Prof. Comberit of Bostock, and Dr. Kuentscher of Kiel.

Largest Engineers' Society

The "Verein Deutscher Ingenieure" (V.D.I.), the largest Engineers' Society in the world, includes 58 separate groups and committees composed of no less than 1,500 scientists holding honorary membership. In 1940 over 3,000,000,000 books and pamphlets were published by the Society, while its magazine "Rundschau Deutscher Technik" has a circulation of 5,300,000,000. Two thousand lectures were given for the benefit of the Society's 50,120 members in the 59 district groups, nine sectional technical groups, and five foreign branch societies.

Need for Economy

The reduction of (U.S.) Government spending is never easy, and the case of next year's budget (1942) is no exception. Despite the large amount of the total budget, the margin from which cuts can be made is relatively small. Out of a total budget of $17,486,000,000 submitted by the President, no less than $13,427,000,000 represents money for national defense, interest on the public debt and other essential items, plus "moral commitments," including veterans' pensions and social security. That leaves a margin of only $4,059,000,000 for the other expenses of Government in which economies are possible.

That is the discouraging side of the picture. But it also points very clearly to the direction which economies must take, for it rigidly limits the area of discussion and points a finger directly at a few outstanding items. On the basis of the President's budget estimates these are: $503,000,000 for general public works, $1,062,000,000 for aids to agriculture, $363,000,000 for aids to youth and $1,034,000,000 for work relief, a total of $2,952,000,000, compared with $3,547,000,000 for the corresponding items in this year's budget. It was at these items that Secretary Morgenthau was pointing when he made his suggestion for economy in nondefense spending.

The need for economies in these items should be strong enough to overcome the difficulties in making cuts. In general they are all in that class of expenditures which was originally intended to increase consumer purchasing power. But the whole emphasis of Government fiscal policy now must be upon preventing an excessive increase in consumer purchasing power which will compete with the Government's defense buying and force up prices.

It would be absurd for the Government to continue large payments to increase public buying power at the same time that it is levying heavy taxes to curtail buying power. Beyond this, as various members of Congress are beginning to realize, it would be neither just nor politically wise to enact the exceedingly heavy taxes proposed without proving that the Government is willing to match the sacrifices it asks of the people by cutting down its own non-essential spending.

A reduction in nondefense spending can be made and it is imperative that it should be made. But it will take determined action by the economy advocates in Congress to accomplish it. In this they will need the leadership and support of the President. He has thus far refrained from backing up Mr. Morgenthau's plea for a $1,000,000,000 cut in nondefense spending, and in his recent letter to Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee he omitted all mention of economy. That was an omission that should be speedily repaired. The President should take the lead in urging upon Congress a drastic reduction of all Government spending not essential to defense and he should indicate specifically where those cuts can best be made.—N.Y. Times.

Substitute of Trolley Omnibus

Fifty years ago, a German civil engineer by the name of Max Schiemann constructed an omnibus operated by an overhead electric trolley wire. It was first used for a short run in the Biella Valley near Koenigstein, and omnibus lines constructed on the same plan are now to be met with in many parts of the world. In many districts of Germany, it is gradually taking the place of the electric rail tram car. Not long ago, the municipal authorities of the City of Marburg decided to substitute the trolley bus for the electric street cars which have operated in that city since 1911.

Judging by the Size

Two Canadian soldiers stopped a Civil Servant in London. They pointed to an impressive building and asked what it was. He told them it was the Ministry of Information.

"I thought the Ministry must be about that size," said one, "to store up all the information they never give away."—Tit-Bits.

BRITISH DIPLOMATS BEAT Y.C.A.C. TEAM

Cricket Match Staged at Bay City Club Grounds Over Weekend

The British Embassy defeated the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club by 91 runs for nine wickets to 60 runs in a cricket match at the club grounds on Saturday afternoon. Both sides used 12 players instead of the regulation 11 in batting, but abided by the rules in fielding.

Rain marred the play, making the pitch very tricky, and the slippery ball proved a handicap to both the bowlers and fielders. The wet grass also impeded the batsmen, hits which ordinarily would have been boundary fours netting only two runs. However, the adverse conditions did not dampen the spirits of the players, and a close, keenly contested game was witnessed by the cricket enthusiasts who braved the bad weather.

B. Kuskie and Major K. S. Himatsinhji were major factors in the diplomats' victory, the former with his bowling and the latter with his batting. The former, of the Australian Legation, proved that the reputation of cricketers from "down under" is not overrated by taking seven wickets for 11 runs, six of his victims being bowled by his fast deliveries. The latter, captain of the British Embassy side, made a fine 26, not out.

Went to Bat First

The diplomats went in to bat first, and made a poor start, losing four wickets for 10 runs. At this stage G. H. D. Bell joined P. H. Gore-Booth, and they raised the score to 29 before the latter was dismissed, playing on to his wicket. Himatsinhji then went in, and this pair added another 11 runs to the total before Bell was bowled.

J. R. V. Mason went in next, and contributed a much needed 11 points before he retired due to an injury to his shoulder. P. Shaw replaced Mason, and with Himatsinhji boosted the total to 67 before he lost his wicket, the seventh. R. M. C. Kennedy came in to bat, and in combination with his captain added 12 more runs before being bowled.

Major E. V. Thomas then made a stand with Himatsinhji, and the scoreboard read 90 when the former was run out. A. E. Bell was up next, and one more run was made when play was stopped for the tea interval.

The embassy players declared as play was about to be resumed. The Y. C. and A. C. also started very poorly, the first five wickets being lost for 14 runs. G. E. Beatty then joined F. May, and this pair pushed up the score to 30 before the former fell to Kuskie's bowling. F. R. Harriss combined with May for another 12 points when the latter lost his wicket after a good display. The next batsman was out at 43, and then Harriss was bowled at 51.

W. R. Bull then joined W. T. Craigie, and this pair played cautiously, and made six runs before the latter lost his wicket. G. W. Gorman went in, and the score was raised to 60 before he was bowled, ending the match.

May Leading Batter

May was the leading batter for the losers, scoring 22 runs. The next high total for the Y. C. and A. C. was made by Harriss, who obtained 11. Bull was next with six.

Gore-Booth was second high scorer for the winners, with 18. He made some very fine shots and was unfortunate in playing onto his wicket. Shaw made 17 runs, and he was followed by Mason with 11. The latter was playing soundly before he was forced to retire injured.

Bowling honors went to Kuskie, his seven wickets for 11 runs being one of the best performances seen at the club in a long time. Four bowlers had averages of between six and seven, these being H. T. Langstone, P. H. Lord, M. Parsram and M. J. K. Stark.

The scorer was Mr. C. T. Mayes.

LONDON, July 24.—Cameronian the winner of the English Derby in 1931, is en route to Argentina and is expected to arrive at Buenos Aires within a few days. Cameronian is the first English Derby Winner to go to Argentina since the last war. He won races to the value of £31,000, and his progeny won races to the value of £52,000, the most notable being Scottish Union, winner of the St. Leger in 1933. Cameronian will stand at Mr. R. Outhmann's stud. Since the outbreak of war, Britain has exported 1,500 thoroughbreds to various parts of the world, including Chile and Brazil, and less than 1½ per cent has been lost at sea through enemy action.

LITTLE CHANGE SEEN IN PHILIPPINE MOVE

Welding of Army and Navy With U.S. Forces Should Not Alarm, Says Ashida

The welding of the army and navy of the Philippine Government with the United States armed forces does not surprise Japan, for it was expected that President Roosevelt would do that sooner or later, Dr. Hitoshi Ashida, noted local commentator on international politics and former president of the Japan Times told the Chugai Shogyo at his home in Ushigome-ku on Sunday.

"To make a long story short," Dr. Ashida said, "the United States Government took the action in order to reinforce the defense of the Philippines. From the very beginning, the army and navy of the Philippine Government were trained by American officers and in the American way. It was not until a few years ago that the man-power of the Philippine troops was increased considerably. Today, the combined forces of the army and navy of the islands may total from 50,000 to 60,000 men. Although the official figure of of the troops is given as 150,000, that is the maximum number of men which could be mobilized in case of emergency. Most possibly those who are receiving training as regular army and navy will be somewhere between 50,000 to 60,000 men.

"The placing of the Philippine army and navy under the direct control of the United States Government is a premeditated plan, and therefore, the announcement of the project by President Roosevelt on Saturday did not surprise Japan much. The step will affect Japan's foreign policy very little. Why, then, did not President Roosevelt announce that plan earlier? Because he did not like to stimulate too strongly the sentiments of American people by taking such a provoking step against Japan. Patiently, the Chief Executive of the United States had been waiting for a chance to translate his plan into an action. Then, came the announcement of the Japan-French Indo-China Joint Defense Agreements, and this was the chance he had been awaiting so patiently.

"President Roosevelt used this opportunity as the best pretext for conducting the merging of the armed forces of the Philippine Government with the army and navy of the United States Government. It is, therefore, the materialization of a premeditated plan rather than a new American gesture toward Japan with an intention of scaring Japan away. Accordingly it is absolutely unnecessary for the Japanese to become nervous about it. In other words, there is no need to attach too much importance to the present President's action in regard to the reinforcement of the defense of the Philippines by bringing the insular troops under the command of the American generals to be designated by the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy. I do not think that there would be much change in the defending capacity of the Philippine army and navy in the future even though they were placed under the direct control of the United States Government."

WHEELER HITS BRITISH

Noted American Isolationist Asks for Their Expulsion

Transocean

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Expulsion from the United Stats of all British agents and "royal refugees" was demanded by Senator Burton K. Wheeler on the floor of the Senate yesterday.

These people are driving the people of the United States into the war against their own interests.

Furthermore, such vocal members of the United States Government as Secretaries Knox, Stimson, and Ickes are "carrying on British propaganda and acting as the representatives of British interests," the noted isolationist senator continued.

NOVA WILL BATTLE LOUIS IN AUTUMN

Yankee Stadium Likely Site, With Californian Bomber's 19th Challenger

Lou Nova, the only first-grade heavyweight who has not been knocked out by Joe Louis, will get his chance to end Louis's reign in September says Caswell Adams in the New York Herald Tribune. Mike Jacobs decided that it was only fair to give the big Californian the shot sought by every one, and signed Ray Carlen, Lou's manager, to a contract for an autumnal brawl, probably the week of September 15 and likely at Yankee Stadium, although Jacobs left those details for later announcements.

The choice of Nova as next and 19th challenger to the Bomber was not a surprise, because after all he does deserve the chance. There are many who felt that Billy Conn's magnificent showing Wednesday night warranted a return bout and Jacobs would see that such a return would mean terrific dough—maybe a million dollars at the turnstiles. But Jacobs probably figures that the mere feeling that Louis is due to be defeated will bring out the fans. The fight ought to draw $750,000.

The war has an influence on Jacobs's selection too. Nova is not in the draft, being married and having a young daughter. Louis is in class 3-A, whereas such challengers as Ample Abe Simon and Bouncing Buddy Baer are eligible for the draft and Conn too, may go, although he supports his family. But with the huge chunk of dough made and deposited Wednesday night, Conn is probably now on a draft list.

Nova is a good fighter and a good hitter. There is not much doubt that if he had had Lewis damaged in that 12th round the other night as Conn had, Lou would have finished Louis right there and then. Billy lacked the punch, but Lou carries enough guns and twice has flattened Max Baer. He stopped Max once and then a few months later—September, 1939, in Philadelphia—was stopped by Tony Galento. He then took a full year off, recovered from a curious ailment, bobbed back and stopped Pat Comiskey and Baer again.

Nova isn't fast and he is a stand-up fighter, the kind that Louis likes. Joe will be able to locate Nova all right, but Lou is a good boxer and his left hand is tough to move out of the way or go over. Based on Louis's showing against Conn, the betting line on the Nova fight probably will open with Lou no worse than a 7-to-5 shot to take the title. Louis will take down his usual 40 per cent of the booty and Nova's bank balance will have 29 per cent added to it.

Lou was in Poughkeepsie yesterday when he received the news. He is guest of Allan Walz, Wisconsin crew coach, and will stay up there until after the regatta Wednesday. Louis is in Cleveland with Prince and Flash, his two best horses, at a horse show. He will practice his golf from now on, relieved of the training burden for a couple of months, and play in the national Negro tournament late in August. The reason why the fight'll probably be the middle of September is that Louis is staging the annual Negro Horse Show on his Utica, Michigan, farm September 21-23. The host wants to be there.

Meanwhile the flattened challengers—Buddy Baer, Simon and Conn—will have to fight among themselves or wait around. It's a cinch that if Louis gets by Nova he won't do any barn-storming as he did this year. The boys are getting the idea that two fights a year—June and September—are enough. Simon is picking up odd dollars here and there in the small clubs and Conn is resting. Baer is on the Pacific Coast remembering the night he knocked Louis through the ropes. A Simon-Baer fight or a Conn fight with either of those big boys would do big money. Look for such a thing, say in August.

Facing Shortage

ANKARA, July 22.—Egypt is running short of much needed import goods, Cairo economic quarters said yesterday, according to a report reaching here from the Egyptian capital. The shortage of import goods is partly due to the sinking of numerous vessels while on their way to Egypt with valuable cargoes, prices of import goods, especially machine tools, have trebled since the beginning of the war, it was stated.

Ecuadorian Net Ace Fails to Make Eight In Seabright Tourney

Reuter

SEABRIGHT, New Jersey, July 24.—Francis Cosgura, of Ecuador, failed to reach the last eight in the Seabright lawn tennis tournament, but distinguished himself by taking a set from Wayne Sabin, American Davis Cup player. Sabin won 6-1, 0-6, 6-3. Ladislow Hecht, Czechoslovak Davis Cup player before the German occupation of Czechoslovakia, returned to the lawn tennis limelight by reaching the last eight, beating Bryan Grant, American international, by 4-6 6-2, 6-1. Robert Riggs and Donald McNeill also reached the last eight. Among the women entering the semi-finals were Mrs. Cooke and Miss Dorothy Bundy.

Hoda Kaigan, Katsuyama Kaigan, Iwai Kaigan, Tomiura Kaigan, Tateyama Kaigan and Nagao Kaigan are all suitable for sea bathing.

Hojo is one of the best bathing beaches. The sea is called Kagamiga-Ura (mirror bay) for it is so quiet that the surface is as smooth as a mirror.

Awa Shrine, 6 miles away from Hojo station, is a state shrine dedicated to Ame-no-Otama-no-Mikoto, the god who colonized the district.

Shirahama Kaigan, 10 miles from Hojo, is noted for its light-house. Activities of women divers can be seen near here.

The sea of Kamoiawa Kaigan is scattered with many isles against which the great waves of the Pacific break.

Mt. Kiyozumi (400m.), 4 miles from Amatsu station to the summit is a sacred place where the saint Nichiren founded his own sect. The whole mountain, covered with old-aged and sky scraping cedars, form a natural park with Kiyozumi Temple in its center.

Tanjo-pi Temple (birth temple) was founded at the birth place of St. Nichiren 700 years ago. Tai-no-Ura (inlet of sea breams) in its vicinity is a section where fishing of sea breams was prohibited by Nichiren. Even in these days the fishermen who are of course laymen of this sect refrain from fishing in this part of the sea. A big shoal of the fish enjoy safety here and some of them grow as big as 1 meter in length.

Katsura Kaigan, Onjuku Kaigan and Ohara Kaigan are all nice for sea-bathing with shallow seas.

City of Choshi, a fishery port, is surrounded with temples and shrines worth visiting. Choshi Wireless Station and Inuba Light House are rendering great services to international communication.

Narita-San, near Narita station, can be reached from Tokyo either by the government railway or the Keisei electric railway in one hour. Shinsho-ji Temple with over 6,000,000 worshippers makes Narita one of the most sacred centers of religion where over 1,000,000 worshippers visit a year. Sogo Shrine near the town is dedicated to Sogoro Sakura, world-famous martyr.

SOVIET DOCUMENT FOUND AT LIEGE

Bolshevization of Belgium Planned by Communists, Paper Shows

Transocean

BRUSSELS, July 20.—An incriminating Soviet document was published by the Rexist paper Pays Reel this morning.

This document, containing the detailed plan of a communist rising, was found at Liege, Belgium's biggest industrial center.

The document reads: "The collapse of National Socialist Germany is imminent. The confusion which will arise from the sudden withdrawal of the Germans is the signal for bolshevization of Belgium. This will be day for the communist leaders of Belgium to show what they are worth. On this day, thousands of workmen under the leadership of tested communists will rally.

"A general strike will be proclaimed and protests will be made on the streets against the return of the capitalistic system. These public demonstrations, which will be of spontaneous character, must be directed especially against those parts of the town where capitalists reside. A stream of moving masses ransacking foodstuff depots must be directed to big stores.

"During this action of force, armed communist insurgents must disarm police and gendarmes. All high Belgian officers must be arrested.

"Firearms will have to be stored in safe hiding places and will be handed to various groups by their leaders at a given time.

"It is of importance that these actions must be carried out on the same day when German troops precipitately leave Belgium."

VOLUNTEERS OF FRANCE WEAR OWN UNIFORMS

Vichy Communique Says They Will Not Use Nazi Outfit

Transocean

VICHY, July 25.—It was stressed here yesterday that volunteers of the French Legion that will fight the Soviets on the eastern front on the side of Germany will fight in French uniform and not in German uniform as reported by certain newspapers abroad.

The following communique was issued here to clear up the matter:

"Certain papers have published reports to the effect that volunteers of non-belligerent countries bound for the Russian front will wear German uniform.

"Official delegates of the Central Committee of the French Volunteer Legion, who are now in Vichy, declare, with the consent of the authorities, that French volunteers fighting the Soviets will wear French uniform.

Y.C.A.C. NINE LOSES TO KING CLUB, 6-5

Club Boys Outhit Opponents But Errors Prove Costly

The Yokohama Country and Athletic Club baseball team lost a close and hard fought game to the King Club nine by 6 to 5 on Sunday afternoon at the club grounds.

As in the previous game with the Tokyo baseballers, the club squad outhit their opponents but lost the decision due to a number of costly errors. The King Club was held to only two safeties while the Y.C. and A.C. made five, but the latter's defense broke down at critical stages.

The home team lost the toss and batted first. The club players started auspiciously, making a brace of runs in the initial inning to gain the lead. Bill Blamey, first man up, worked the pitcher for a walk. Fred da Silva then grounded to shortstop, who made a fielder's choice throw to second and forced out Blamey. "Bucky" Harriss reled to second, and da Silva was thrown out. Harriss stole second and then took third on Ray Devin's hit to right, after which the latter also stole second. Joe Koch then came through with a drive to deep left, bringing in both Harriss and Devin.

Yoshida Gains on Error

The King Club squad knotted the count in their half of the same canto on one hit, two walks and a couple of errors. Yoshida, lead-off batter, gained first on an infield error, and then Kawasaki singled to right, sending the former to third. Iwata walked, filling the bases. Sakairi flied out to center and Yoshida was beaten by a good throw to the plate by Harriss. Another walk again loaded the sacks, after which Kawasaki and Iwata scored on another miscue.

Both sides played good ball during the next three innings, neither side being able to score. The Y.C. and A.C. broke the deadlock in the opening half of the fifth frame. Henry Fernandes walked, stole second and took third when da Rosa grounded out to second. When Blamey rolled to the shortstop and as he was being thrown out at first, Fernandes crossed the plate.

The players from the capital again evened the score in their half of the fifth stanza: With one away, Sakairi reached first on an infield miscue, and then stole second. The next batter popped up to the pitcher but Matsumura came through with a hit to right, bringing in Sakairi.

The home squad forged ahead for the third tie in the seventh inning. Joe da Costa was gives four balls, and stole second on the next pitch. Fernandes hit to left, sending da Costa to third. After the next man had gone down swinging, Blamey worked the pitcher for a walk, filling the bases. As da Silver sent a roller to second, Blamey crossed the plate.

The King Club gained the lead for the first time in their half of the same frame, when the club defense cracked wide open. Kipp did not allow a single hit in this inning and struck out two men, but two walks and a pair of costly miscues brought in three runs.

Kawasaki, the first man up, got a pass to first. Kipp then bore down, striking out the next two batters. After Kawasaki had taken second Nakajima grounded to the infield, but a wild throw to first saw the former complete the circuit and the latter gain second. Matsumura got to first on four balls, and he then pulled a double steal with Nakajima. Another miscue resulted in both players crossing the plate.

Club Reduces Deficit

The Y.C. and A.C. reduced their deficit to one in the next stanza. Devin was safe at first on an error and pilfered second. Koch received a ticket to first, after which Kipp grounded to third, forcing out Devin. The next batter flied out to the shortstop, but Fernandes came through with another hit, this time a two-bagger which brought in Kipp.

Harriss, who replaced Kipp on the mound in the eighth, retired the opposition without a run or a hit in the one canto he hurled.

The home team had a chance to tie the score in the ninth, but with two out and a man on second Iwata struck out the next batter to end the game.

Kipp, the losing pitcher, deserved a better fate. Although he allowed nine walks during the seven innings he worked on the mound, he kept them scattered, and only gave two hits. With better support, especially by the infield, he would have won with case.

Batting honors were shared by Fernandes and Koch, both getting two safeties in three official trips to the plate. Devin got one hit, as did Kawasaki and Matsumura for the opposition.

Fighting Night Attacks

Even if there have been no reports of enemy planes having crossed the frontier, a sentry is keeping watch with German anti-aircraft guns all through the night to prevent any surprise attack. Directly connected by radio with headquarters, the sentry is enabled to call the gun-crew to the anti-aircraft emplacement at a moment's notice to ward off attacks by approaching enemy planes.

'White Rajah' Declares After Holiday Trip

Reuters

SINGAPORE, July 25.—Sarawak, on the island of Borneo, strategically important flank of the British Empire in the Far East, is well prepared for an emergency, declared the "white Rajah," Sir Charles Brooke, who is returning after a holiday in a hill station in Malaya.

He added that there was an adequate garrison of Empire troops and R.A.F. squadrons stationed in the territory. He said British North Borneo also was alertly defended.

Sarawak's food stocks had been built up sufficiently to last many months should there be a blockade. Plans are progressing for celebration of Sarawak's centenary on September 14 which sees the termination of absolute rule of the white Rajahs.

NEW YORK, July 23.—The Brooklyn Dodgers emerged from their slump tonight to nose out the Cincinnati Reds 5 to 4 and remain a tie with the St. Louis Cardinals for the National League leadership. Led Durocher's club played ragged ball, however, and was outhit by the Reds but managed to bunch their blows in the sixth and eight frames and win by a narrow margin.

Walt Higbe, Mace Brown and Curtis Davis, three of Brooklyn's best hurlers, were thrown into the fray in an effort to save the game.

Giants Win 5 to 4

The New York Giants forced the Cards to go 12 innings for their 5 to 4 victory. The game was close and hard fought throughout, with five St. Louis hurlers who allowed six hits seeing mound duty.

The Giants pushed over a pair of runs in the ninth to knot the score and Carl Hubbell managed to hold his foes scoreless until the winning run was pushed over in the last of the twelth. Ernest White was credited as the winning pitcher.

The Pittsburgh Pirates, though badly outhit, bunched their safe blows and came through with a 5 to 2 win over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Darrell Blanton and Harman worked on the mound for the Phillies and allowed only five hits but they were given erratic support by their mates who made three miscues.

Boston's Braves evened the count with the Chicago Cubs by pushing over a 6 to 1 win. Four of the runs were accounted for in a fifth inning rally.

Dick Errickson Turned in another fine game by limiting the Cubs to seven hits and hurling shutout ball every inning but the fifth.

Stanley Harris' Washington Club showed new signs of life as they downed the Detroit Tigers 6 to 1. The Senators led throughout and sewed up the game with a three run rally in the eighth.

Emil Leonard worked on the hill for Washington and yielded nine hits. He hurled shutout ball until the ninth inning.

Connie Mack's Philadelphians treated home town fans to a 5 to 4 win over the St. Louis Browns in a night game. Two of the as runs crossed the plate in the fifth and the other three in the sixth.

Dodgers Beaten Again

United Press

NEW YORK, July 21.—The faltering Brooklyn Dodgers tasted defeat again today at the hands of the Pittsburgh Pirates and saw their National League lead dwindle to a single game.

The Dodgers lost 8 to 3 as four Brooklyn hurlers failed to stop the slugging Pirates who piled up an early lead which was never seriously threatened.

Ken Heintzelmann was on the mound for the Pirates and though nicked for 10 hits the big southpaw managed to keep them well scattered.

All other clubs of the majors were idle today, following their weekend of double headers.

Tomorrow the Dodgers will take on the Cincinnati Reds while the second place St. Louis Cards will tangle with the New York Giant.

In the American circuit a good series looms between the New York Yanks and the Cleveland Indians.

WORLD CALIBER RUNNER DISCOVERED IN PARIS

Marcel Hansene, 24, Ex-Steel Worker, Wins 800 In 1:53 1/10

Transocean

VICHY, July 23.—France discovered it had a middle distance runner of world caliber during the national championships in Paris over the week end.

The runner is Marcel Hansene, 24 demobilized soldier and Parisian-born steel worker, who had no time off from his job to train for the race. He rode all night on a train to come to Paris but won the national 800 meters run in 1:53 1/10, which was good enough to beat Germany's Harbig.

The same day, in the German championships, Harbig ran the 800 in 1:54.

Hansene is a better miler but his ambition is to break La Doumegue's record of 2:23 for the one kilometer. Without special training Hansene has done 2:27. He never before ran against competition.

NEW YORK, July 28.—Joe McCarthy's Yanks walloped the Chicago White Sox to increase their lead to 12 games and the St. Louis Cards held onto first place in the senior circut by downing the Boston Braves during today's full major league schedule.

The New Yorkers led throughout with their big rallies coming in the third and sixth frames, while Marvin Breuer was limiting the Chi-Sox to a half dozen hits and three runs.

In collecting 11 runs the Yanks nicked John Rigney and Jack Hallett for 14 hits which included Tom Henrich's 19th homer of the season, Charlie Keller drove in three runs to bring his total for the year up to 89.

The Boston Red Sox handed Bob Feller his sixth loss of the season as they nosed out the faltering Cleveland Indians, 4 to 3.

Heber Newsome and Jim Tabor were the heroes of the Boston victory. Newsome held the Indians to nine scattered hits while Tabor drove in half of Boston's runs with a timely double.

Connie Mack's Athletics handed the Detroit Tigers a victory on a silver platter when in the seventh with the score tied and the bases loaded the winning run was walked in.

The A's played erratic ball and three pitchers were used in an effort to halt the Tigers. Detroit collected 11 hits as compared to 10 by the Mackmen.

The St. Louis Browns made it two straight over the Washington Senators when they rallied in the ninth to record a 6 to 5 win. Two Washington errors helped the Browns push over the necessary runs.

The Browns were badly out-hit but managed to bunch their blows in the first and last innings.

NEW YORK, July 25.—A strong contender for the National League pennant loomed today as the Pittsburgh Pirates twice knocked over the Brooklyn Dodgers to climb into third place.

The league leading St. Louis Cards held onto the top spot but through no fault of their own, as they were blanked 8 to 0 by the Boston Braves. The Cards looked like bush leaguers, committing five errors and collecting only three hits as their efforts for the day.

Pittsburgh took the opener 8 to 4 by pushing over a four run rally in the eighth frame and chasing John Wyatt to the Showers.

The Pirates had even less opposition in the night cap, which they took by an 8 to 2 decision. Three of the runs crossed the plate in the third and four in the sixth. Jim Wasedell led the batting attack by clouting out a pair of three baggers in the second game

The New York Giants downed the Chicago Cubs 5 to 2 after piling up a big lead in the opening inning. Don French took over the mound assignment in the second frame for the Cubs and hurled shutout ball until the eighth. French was then relieved by Vance Page who let in one more New York run in the ninth.

The best game of the day was at Cincinnati, where the Philadelphia Phillies nosed out the Reds 4 to 3. The game was errorless and both clubs collected eight hits. The Phillies were trailing when the seventh inning rolled around but started a rally which netted three runs and chased Johnny Vander Meer to the showers.

In the senior league, the St. Louis club turned 10 hits and four Boston errors into a 9 to 2 victory. The Cards led throughout and their big inning was the fifth when four runs were scored.

Four Boston hurlers were used in an effort to check the St. Louis club while Ernest White went the full route for the Cards and held his foes to seven hits.

The Brooklyn Dodgers snapped their losing streak and nosed out the Pittsburgh Pirates, 3 to 2. The Dodgers are now one game behind the league leaders.

Kenneth Heintzelman and Bob Klinger handled the mound duty for the pirates and allowed only five hits while Luke Hamlin and Walter Higbe were nicked for eight safeties.

The Cincinnati Reds replaced the Pirates in third place by downing the Philadelphia Phillies, 6 to 2. The Reds bunched their hits in the fourth and fifth innings and chased three Phillie hurlers from the mound.

Jim Turner hurled the full game for the Reds and though nicked for ten hits kept them well scattered and allowed single scores in only the first and fourth frames.

The Chicago Cubs evened their series with the New York Giants by pushing over a 5 to 3 victory. The Cubs won the game in the eighth with a two-run rally which chased Car Hubbell from the mound.

BOWLERS SCINTILLATE IN CRICKET CONTESTS

Interesting Games Played Between Army and Royal Air Force at Southend

Reuters

LONDON, July 27.—Bowlers had the advantage in the main cricketing games yesterday, which saw interesting play. The Army and Air Force met at Southend, where the Army were dismissed for 127 runs and then the airmen lost two wickets for 53 runs in a match left drawn.

The army lost half the side for 40 runs, and then seven for 97, but bright batting by Major S. C. Griffith, who made 59, retrieved the situation slightly.

The London Counties travelled to Tonbridge to meet the Old Tonbridgians, who however did not get a chance to bat after the visitors declared with 209 for eight wickets. Leslie Compton hit a grand 61 for the Counties, who promised a bigger score until R. Bousfield, legbreak bowler, dismissed five men in ten overs for 46 runs.

On the first day of a two-day game at Aldershot, an air force team, led by Arthur Gilligan, former England captain, dismissed an Aldershot area side for 71. P. F. Judge, Glamorgan speed bowler, claimed seven victims for 39, Denis Compton being among them when caught before scoring.

Opening today at the Shochikuza, a theater in Asakusa Park, is a new program, consisting of four plays, all of which will be staged by a group known as the Reishinza theatrical group headed by Ryutaro Aoyagi, Momonosuke Ichikawa, Kaiji Tanaka and Sumiko Fushimi, four popular players of samurai drama. The feature is "Hanakawado no Hitobito" (People at Hanakawado), a six-act drama by Kaoru Suyehiro, dealing with chivalrous people in Yedo during the Tokugawa days. Another theater in the same park, the Koen Gekijo, also will open today with a new bill of three plays, of which "Shusse Jizo" (Soka no Tokijiro, a man of chivalry), written by Eikichi Shima, is the highlight. Shu Kanai and his own group will play.

Michiko Oye, popular actress, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Tokyo Hospital, returned to her home recently where she will remain for recuperation until the end of August. She may be able to resume her stage activity in September.

Concluding his monthly engagement at the local Koen Gekijo yesterday, Noboru Umezawa, an actor of note, and his group of stage players, will visit several principal cities along the Tokaido in August. From tomorrow, they will play at the Okazaki Gekijo in Aichi Prefecture.

The Yoshimoto Entertainment Enterprises dispatched a company of vaudeville performers to Fukushima Prefecture where they will play in villages, towns and cities, including Wakamatsu, Nozawa, Nihashi, Ninomatsu and Fukushima until the early part of August.

The new bill, consisting of four comedies, will open the Shimbashi Embujo Friday. They are "Basha Uma" (A Wagon Horse), "Hariko no Tora" (A Papier-Mache Tiger), "Jiko Hon-i no Hitobito" (Self-Centered People), and "Yuto" (A host Lantern). Goro Suganoya, Japan's foremost comedian, and his own group called Goroichiza, will play. Goro will take four important rôles.

The Moulin Rouge, a company of modern-school actors and actresses will leave Tokyo today for Kyushu to visit several leading cities there until the end of August. Their local performance is promised to be given at the Shinjukuza Theater in the Shinjuku amusement district.

Takiko Mizunoe, who had been inactive on the local stage since last fall, will make her film debut in the Ofuna studio of the Shochiku Motion Picture Company in August and September. Mizunoe will probably be recalled by the Shochiku revue company, of which she was the prima donna several years ago, for a gala performance in October, now under contemplation by the Kokusai Gekijo, the largest theater in the Asakusa amusement center.

To entertain Japanese residents in South Sea Islands, a party of dancers and musicians of the Tokyo Takarazuko Company will sail from Yokohama on August 5. They will play at Saipan, Yap and Palao before returning to Tokyo on August 27. The leading members include Chizu Urata, Misako Sato, Midori Ono, Kimiko Okada and Shigeko Yamazaki.

CHICAGO SOX SNAP YANKS' WIN STREAK

McCarthy's Men Take Opener But Windy City Players Cop Second Game

United Press

NEW YORK, July 27.—The Chicago White Sox today broke the New York Yanks' winning streak of nine Games when they pushed over a 7 to 3 win before an excited crowd of 52,000 New York fans.

The Yanks took the first half of the double header by a 9 to 5 count but the Chicago White Sox piled up a big early lead to walk away with the night cap.

Ted Lyons hurled the opener for the White Sox but was off form and allowed 14 hits. Charles Ruffing handled the mound assignment for the Yanks and in limiting his foes to eight hits recorded his twelfth victory of the season.

Joe Gordon pounded out a homer for the Yanks in the second but the big inning for Joe McCarthy's club was the seventh when four scores were collected.

Thornton Lee was credited with snapping the Yanks winning streak. He allowed 10 hits but kept them well scattered as the game progressed.

Joe Heving limited the Boston Red Sox to six hits as Cleveland returned to old time form and scored a 4 to 0 win. Heving took great delight in blanking the club which traded him off.

Stanley Harris' Washington Senators swept their doubtle header with the St. Louis Browns, taking the opener 4 to 3 and the second game 5 to 3.

Jake Early won the opener by socking out a homer in the seventh inning.

The Browns made a determined effort to overcome the Senators lead in the opener but their ninth inning rally fell one run short.

The Senators piled up three runs in the first inning of the night cap and then brought their total to five with another rally in the sixth.

Roger Cramer, John Lewis and Jim Vernon produced singles in the big inning and Cecil Travis came through with a three bagger.

Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics treated home town fans to a doutle win as they trounced the Detroit Tigers 8 to 1 and 7 to 0.

Bob Johnson was the hero of the opener as he nicked Tommy Bridges for a homer with Ben McCoy aboard. On the mound for the A's was Jack Knott, who registered his ninth win of the season.

Lester McCrabb turned the Mackmen back with seven hits as he shut them out in the second game. Opposing him on the mound was Louis Newsom, who dropped his fourteenth game of the year.

Fred Chapman brought the A's total up to seven when he connected with a homer in the eight.

THE GREAT BOBBY JONES TO SHOW HIS STUFF AGAIN

Golf Idol to Select Team to Meet U.S. Ryder Cup Squad

CHICAGO, July 17.—There's still magic in the name and golfing exploits of the great Bobby Jones, the Associated Press reports.

Several days ago the professional Golfers' Association announced Jones, retired from competitive golf since his grand slam in 1930, would select a team of golfers to meet the U.S. Ryder Cup squad in a war relief charity battle.

Since then bids have trickled in from many cities asking for the match, which will give thousands another chance to see Jones' matchless swing in actual competition.

The association already has set the date of the match for August 22-23, but the course over which it will be played will not be designated yet.

Bids from groups seeking the match for their city were being taken by Fred Corcoran, the association's Tournament Bureau Manager, in Chicago.

German Signal Corps Busy

When an army covers vast stretches of enemy territory, there is more to be done than just to fight and repulse the enemy. One important job is to keep the advancing troops in continuous contact with headquarters by telephone and wireless. Photo shows a whole network of telephone lines newly laid out by the German Signal Corps at an important field command close behind the fighting lines.

Collegian, Waiting for Highest Offer As Many Ball Clubs Bidding for Him

CHICAGO, July 7.—Young Dick Wakefield is keeping his ears open and his mouth shut these days as the major league offers pour in.

This University of Michigan sophomore announced quite simply three weeks ago he was quitting school to play professional baseball. The scouts almost trampled each other in their rush toward Ann Arbor.

Now three weeks later he has had tryouts with five clubs and has talked terms with two others. The consensus is that Wakefield, willowy, six-foot-three outfielder, is a great prospect, according to Associated Press.

The Brooklyn Dodgers looked him over yesterday in pre-game practice at Cubs' park. Wakefield smacked several liners off southpaw Vito Tamulis and lashed two of Luke Hamlin's fast balls into the right field stands 400 feet away.

"Say, that kid really takes a good cut at the ball," enthused Manager Leo Durocher of the Dodgers.

The Chicago youngster put on a similar clouting exhibition for Detroit Cincinnati, Washington and Cleveland. The Boston Red Sox also are interested and the Tigers and Yanks reportedly have told him they would top any other offer.

Wakefield has divulged no offers, but one big league executive estimated it would take a bonus of close to $25,0 to sign the young slugger.

Wakefield's father, Howard Wakefield, was a catcher with Cleveland and Washington 35 years ago.

U.S. CINDER STARS TO VISIT S. AMERICA

To Mark First Time Uncle Sam's Tracksters Will Compete In Latin States

A team of United States track and field athletes will compete in South America in September, it was announced by Secretary-Treasurer Daniel J. Ferris of the A. A. U. upon receipt of a query from Stanislaw Petkiewicz, one-time Polish distance star who is now coaching at Buenos Aires. The bid calls for a six-man team to compete in Brazil, Uruguay and Argentina in September, the Christian Science Monitor reports.

The American group will be chosen on the basis of performances in the National A.A.U. track and field championships at Franklin Feld in Philadelphia on June 28 and 29. The probability is that one sprinter, one middle distance runner, one distance runner and three field event men will be sent although just how the personnel will shape up will not be known until further details and the formal invitation from the Argentine A.A.U. are received.

This will mark the first time that a track team from the United States has ever competed in South America. In the past the A. A. U. has sent basketball teams, boxers and swimmers to the republics to the South but footracers have not made the trip. However, with the approach of the Pan-American games at Buenos Aires in 1942, the South American countries are becoming more track conscious.

Not only will six National A. A. U. champions go to South America, but two others of them will compete in Jamaica in the British West Indies next month. A sprinter and a middle distance runner will make this trip for two international meets involving athletes from Colombia, Panama, Haiti, Cuba and Trinidad. Then will come the Jamaica championships in which they will run. The international meets will be in yards and the championships in meters.

N.E.I. Use Colored Gasoline

Reuters

BATAVIA, July 29.—Colored gasoline will soon be introduced into the Netherlands East Indies when oil companies will follow the example of American companies which started the practice several years ago. Colored gasoline has certain advantages mainly connected with storing and shipping. Countries which are importing gasoline from the Netherlands East Indies also will get the colored product.

U.S. TANK FACTORY DISPLAYS ITS TASKS

Work Done in American Car And Foundry Company Watched by Newspapermen

United Press

BERWICK, Pennsylvania, July 22.—One of America's first tank factories, that of the American Car and Foundry Company here, demonstrated its assembly line construction of those blitzkrieg weapons recently for a party of newspapermen touring United States industrial defense centers.

The plant, the peace-time business of which is building railroad cars and car wheels, now has 5,699 men busy turning out light tanks of 12 to 13 tons and armored plate in a hot, clanging building a quarter mile long.

Production is at the rate of 10 or more tanks a day and easily could be doubled in a matter of days should this become necessary. These tanks are armed with three 37 mm cannon and machine-guns, carry four men and cruise at 35 miles an hour with a maximum speed well over 60 miles on hour.

Seven Armored Divisions

Within the next 12 months the American Army is scheduled to have seven armored divisions, each having 287 of these light tanks, 110 medium tanks, 275 lightly armored scout cars and more than 1,000 other vehicles. The current order on which the Berwick plant is working is for 3,039 of these tanks costing $70,000,000 or over $22,600 each.

Each tank has 2,865 different kinds of parts and comprises 14,318 individual pieces exclusive of engines or accessory equipment. They are powered by a radical (aviation) type gasoline motor or a diesel motor.

During World War I the plant turned out railway gun mounts, submarine chasers, caissons, limbers and shells but made no tanks. But anticipating the current armament program, and with no financial help from the government, Americans took an Educational order for 329 tanks in 1939, made the necessary plant expansions and delivered the tanks ahead of schedule on December 30, 1940. The current order followed.

When a bottleneck in delivery of armor plate for the tanks developed; Americans promptly expanded the plant again and began making their own. Present armor plate capacity is 1,000 tons a month.

Correspondents See Plants

The correspondents, representing the three major press associations and newspapers in New York, Boston, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Atlanta and Los Angeles, also inspected the Hartford, Connecticut, plants of United Aircraft Corporation, the great Pratt and Whitney airplane engine plants and the nearby Hamilton Standard Propeller Corporation.

In the sprawling engine plant alone 25,000 men are working around the clock seven days a week producing four sizes of radial, air cooled motors—400, 600, 1,200 and 2,000 horsepower. The plant is abreast of schedule on the heavier combat motors and are 1,000 motors ahead of schedule on the 400 and 600 horsepower motor for training planes.

The one plant is now turning out 1,400 motors a month and this will be stepped up to 2,000 a month before Christmas when a new addition—the fourth plant expansion since November, 1939, is ready this fall.

The Hamilton plant is producing about 1,900 propellers a month, or more than three fourths of all the propellers being built in this country for combat and advanced training aircraft.

The powerful 2,000 horsepower double wasp 18 cylinder motor is draft and Whitney's pride. It is prized by Britain as well, where about half of the plant's production is going. It is used in the big four motored consolidated patrol bombers and on long range bombers capable of attacking far German cities, the type of which the British are in great need.

From Berwick the party of correspondents flew to Indianapolis to inspect the General Motors Allison liquid-cooled motor plant. The tour was sponsored by the National Association of Manufacturers and was being facilitated by the Army and Navy.

PARLIAMENT TOLD WAR EFFORT STRONG

But Government Must Not Rely Too Much on United Sates, Says Labor Leader

I.N.S.

LONDON, July 29.—The Labor member, Emmanuel Shinwell, who has shown himself one of the most independent critics of the Government, had some interesting comments to offer on Prime Minister Winston Churchill's speech on the current situation.

"We know the Prime Minister well enough", said Mr. Shinwell, "to say that he would wish to create substantial diversion on the western front and pour strength into the attack in order to help relieve the Russians on the eastern front. We know he would have done it if he could. If we ask why he has failed to do so the answer surely is that he has everything but the means."

Mr. Shinwell then went on to say:

"I hope the Government is not relying too much on the supply of munitions from the United States. For if America gets embroiled with Japan, it wou'd be doubtful if we could continue to expect the flow to continue on the present scale. It might become a mere trickle."

In the course of his speech Mr. Churchill had paid a great tribute to the value of American aid to Britain, and declared:

"The United States, the greatest single Power in the world, is advancing in rising wrath and conviction to the very verge of war."

Declaring his grounds for optimism in Britain's war effort, Mr. Churchill refused the demand to appoint a Miniter of Production, and branded as harmful the reports of "lurid chaos and convulsion within the various production departments which bear no relation to the actual facts."

He concluded by saying, "All our armed forces have been warned to reach a concert pitch by September 1. We still stand as the champion. If we fail, the others who are with us or depending on us will fail."

'Old School Tie' Hit

United Press

LONDON, July 23.—Captain Alec Cunningham-Reid, who has been in the Conservative Party's doghouse for the past 18 months, emerged yesterday to take a few bits out of the "old school tie group," declaring in the House of Commons that they and their "jolly good fellows" type in the Government were a greater menace to Britain than the Germans.

Captain Cunningham-Reid, speaking before a coldly silent house, alleged that the "greatest menace to this country is the continuance of the old school tie predominance in politics."

His attack failed to evoke any response from Government quarters.

Captain Cunningham-Reid alleged that 50 ministers who held office "when their ineptitude and complacency let us down so badly" were still in the Government today.

He said that the latest reshuffle led to only one old gang being removed and that the "old school tie" still was much together to an extent of 60 per cent in the present Government and that they held important positions.

"No man has worked harder or more successfully to keep the present Prime Minister out of office than Margesson (War Secretary) who was chief Government whip for many years," he said.

"Is it not time that the Baldwin-Chamberlain old boys reunion broke up and is replaced regardless of the color of their ties."

He said that strongwilled men with minds of their own, such as Winston Churchill, Lord Beaverbrook and Lord Rothermere were excluded from succeeding Governments because they refused to conform with the old school tie standard.

"One senior minister, by being in office with both Baldwin and Chamberlain, lost all his independence. He now agrees with everybody. He was held vital by the War Department. He became so complacent that even when matters were serious he used to go home to the seaside nearly every night and over the week-ends. That minister is still in the Government today," Captain Cunningham-Reid charged.

He failed to disclose which member of the Government he made a target for his attack.

ROCKEFELLER PRAISES AMERICAN SOLIDARITY

Large Increase in U.S. Purchases From Latin-America Said Proof of Sound Program

United Press

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Nelson Rockefeller, unofficial "trouble-shooter" and goodwill Ambassador to Latin-America, yesterday quoted Commerce Department statistics showing a large increase in United States purchases from Latin-America during the first five months of 1941 which "proved that the hemisphere defense program is progressing on a sound economic basis."

He declared that "it was particularly significant that trade with the republics on the east coast, which long have been dependent on European markets, had been increased greatly. During the first five months of 1941, our imports from Argentina, Uruguay and Brazil increased by $77,000,000 over the 1940 figures."

He quoted statements by the Nazi Assistant Food Administrator, Herbert Backa, and Dr. Walther Funk, Reich Economic Minister, to prove that the Nazis were seeking to create a self-contained Europe independent of Latin-American foodstuffs.

POLAND WILL FIGHT BY SIDE OF RUSSIA

General Sikorski Says Poles Reach Agreement Regarding Territorial Claims

I.N.S.

LONDON, July 29.—General Sikorski, the head of the Polish Government in London, has announced that the Poles and Russians have reached an agreement regarding those parts of Poland which Russia occupied after the German invasion.

This means that Poland will fight alongside Russia in accordance with the promise made conditionally on such an agreement being reached.

In the course of his statement to the foreign press wherein he reiterated Britain's intention to reject any offer Germany might make of a compromise peace, Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary, said:

"We are determined upon the destruction of Chancellor Hitler and his regime.

"Our conditions of peace will be designed to prevent any repetitions of Germany's misdeeds in the future, but it is not part of our purpose to cause Germany or any other country to suffer economic collapse."

NEW YORK, July 27.—National League leaders found it tough sledding today with the Braves defeating the St. Louis Cards and the up and coming Pittsburgh Pirates twice humbling the Brooklyn Dodgers. The Pirates rallied in the ninth to nose out Brocklyn 4 to 3 in the opener and then blanked their foes 8 to 0 in the night cap.

Maurice Van Robays sparkled in the first game by pounding out a double in the ninth with the bases full, which produced the tying and winning runs for Pittsburgh.

In the second game Truett Sewell turned the mighty Dodgers back with five scattered hits. His mates scored their eight runs in the sixth inning with five straight singles, a two bagger by Van Robays and a homer by Vincent DiMaggio.

The Braves pushed over four run rallies in the first and last innings as they defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 12 to 10 in a loosely played, free hitting game.

Phil Masi, Boston catcher, connected with a pair of homers and Enos Slaughter hit a circuit drive for the losers.

The Cubs had things their own way throughout as they trounced the New York Giants 9 to 2 and battered three hurlers for a dozen hit.

Catcher Clyde McCullough started the Chicago scoring with a homer in the second inning. The next inning four runs were pushed over, with Dominic Dallessandro getting a double, Bill Nicholson walking and Dahlgren and McCullough hitting singles.

The Cincinnati Reds dropped into fourth place by dividing their twin bill with the Philadelphia Phillies. The Reds took the opener 2 to 0 but dropped the second game 8 to 1. It was Paul Derringer day in Cincinnati and the veteran hurler observed it fittingly by blanking the Phillies and limiting them to five hits.

The Reds collected both of their runs in the fourth when Walt Beck made a wild pitch and let runners on second and third score.

Bucky Walters was chased from the mound when the Phillies ran wild in the second game. John Pogajny was on the hill for the winners and yielded but four hits. The Phillies led throughout but their big innings were the fourth and ninth. The Reds helped boost the score by making three errors.

NAZIS' RUSSIAN MOVES BLAMED ON SHORTAGES

College Professor Says Germans Need Manganese, Petrol Which Soviet Has

I.N.S.

STATE COLLEGE, Pennsylvania, July 15.—Lack of two mineral resources—manganese and petroleum—was undoubtedly an important motivating factor in Germany's invasion of Russia, according to Edward Steidle, dean of the School of Mineral Industries at the Pennsylvania State College.

"Germany is almost totally deficient in these materials," Dean Steidle said, "having practically no manganese and only a small petroleum production which has been conserved by the production of gasoline from coal."

He pointed out that perhaps the greatest significance of the sudden German invasion lay in the fact that Hitler is resigned to a long war and must supply his military machine with the vital resources.

"It is just one more example," Dean Steidle said, "of a fact which is becoming better understood as time passes—that the irregular distribution of mineral resources over the surface of the earth is one of the most powerful motivation forces in creating international conflicts."

The Penn State dean said that early in the war economic experts predicted that Hitler must win quickly or not at all since it was not believed that Germany owned metals which would permit her to wage war of any duration.

"Time has proved," he said, "that this opinion was partly in error. At least the metallic supplies in Germany were larger than anticipated and these supplies have been augmented by additions from conquered territories.

"But now the Germans are again at the economic crossroads and no other country is so easily accessible or promises so much as Russia. The soils of the Ukraine are fertile and of great grain producing capacity. Above all, Russia possesses mineral resources on a scale and of a diversity unparalleled by any other European country."

CRAIGIE AND AURELL IN SINGLES FINALS

Also Mixed Doubles Championships Slated in Y.C.A.C. Weekend

Sports enthusiasts at the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club have made up a program for this weekend at the club grounds, just in case it does not rain. Weather permitting, the events will include cricket, baseball, tennis, lawn bowls and softball.

This afternoon cricket and tennis will be the major items on the program. Another captain versus vice-captain cricket match is scheduled to get under way at 2 p.m. The teams have been changed somewhat to permit those players who have not yet been up against B. Kuskie's speedy deliveries to play against him, so that they will have an opportunity to get used to fast bowling.

Two championship finals in the club's tennis tournament are also to be played today. At 3 p.m., Per Aurell and Bill Craigie will meet in the finals of the men's singles championship, and at 3.45 p.m. Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Fachtmann will play against Miss M. Laffin and M. Jalenques in the finals of the mixed doubles championship event.

With the St. Maur's School and Tokyo S.K.F. ladies' softball teams unable to play this weekend, the Y.C and A.C. girls have issued a challenge to the elderly male members of the club for a game to get under way at 1:30 p.m. Sunday. The so-called weaker sex beat the "ojiisans" last Sunday, and it is expected the latter will accept the challenge in an effort to even the score.

The club's baseball team will play against Yokohama Old Stars at 3 p.m. Sunday. The latter's line-up includes a number of players whose names are familiar to bay city ball fans, and some of them are not so advanced in years as the name implies. The visiting team is rated a strong one, and the club nine will have to play well to have a chance to win this contest.

The lawn bowls tournament has made considerable progress despite the bad weather, but some of the events are behind schdule and it is expected that the club's six rinks will be in great demand on both Saturday and Sunday. With the leading players having advanced a couple of rounds in the various events, some of them are now scheduled to meet. A number of these will probably be played this weekend, and some keenly contested and well bowled matches are being looked forward to by the followers of Drake's famous pastime.

Probable line-ups for the various games this weekend are as follows:

Cricket

Captain's Team: G. E. Beatty, S. G. Bielous, W. R. Bull, R. W. Child, J. da Costa, F. R. Devin, G. W. Gorman, F. R. Harriss, C. Heseltine, B. Kuskie, P. H. Lord and S. Stephens (captain).

Vice-Captain's Team: A. H. Ballantyne, G. H. D. Bell, A. E. Bell, H. J. Bird (vice-captain), F. J. Bond, F. da Silva, H. T. Langstone, J. R. V. Mason, A. G. May, R. Meher, M. Parsram, M. L. Russell and E. V. Thomas.

Baseball

W. H. Blamey, S. G. Bielous, M. C. Cooke (coach), J. da Costa, F. R. Devin, E. Eastlake, C. Fernandes, H. Fernandes, L. A. M. Frank, F. R. Harriss (captan), L. N. Haum (manager), P. H. Kipp (vice-captain), J. Koch, R. Lewis, F. da Rosa and F. da Silva.

Ladies' Softball

Miss V. Albeck, Miss L. Andreis, Miss H. Darbier, Miss J. Darbier, Miss E. Papendieck, Miss T. Planas, Miss M. Proharka, Miss L. Salter, Miss G. Satchell and Miss M. Stevens.

Tennis

Men's championship singles finals between P. Aurell and W. T. Craigie at 3 p.m. today.

Mixed doubles championship finals between Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Fachtmann against Miss M. Laffin and M. Jalenques at 3:45 p.m. today.

ILLINOIS FARMER'S HOGS REFRAIN FROM ROOTING

Colleagues Astounded, but Convinced on Seeing Field Completely Untouched

I.N.S.

MACOMB, Illinois, July 15.—The rootless hogs of McMonough county took their place today along with other marvels of scientific farming, seedless grapes, whiskerless wheat, spineless cactus and hornless cattle.

The rootless hogs came to light at a recent county AAA meeting in Macomb when several farmers rose to complain that their hogs were churning up their feeding ground like erosion specialists.

After someone suggested the old remedy of putting rings in the hogs' noses to stop rooting, Roy Kemper, township committeeman, arose and said: "I'll bet anyone a $10 hat they can't find as much as six square feet of ground rooted up in my hog pasture."

As Kemper is the champion hog raiser in industry, Illinois he found no takers. Kemper's words caused amazement, but further doubt was dispelled when Charles Peck, Kemper's neighbor, arose to support the committeeman's statement.

"Yessir," Peck said. "His hogs hadn't rooted any since he cou'd remember."

Kemper went back to his rolling 100-acre farm declaring he would be at home to any Doubting Thomas who wanted to see his rootless hogs. In an alfalfa pasture north of his barns, nearly 200 unrung hogs continued to feed on corn, oats, pigmeal and grass with not so much as a divot to mar the field.

Kemper's hogs are medium sized Chester Whites of the short-faced, trim-jowled variety. Breeders asked about the genetic origin of his rootless hogs.

"My rule is just shut your eyes and feed," Kemper replied. "Just give 'em everything they want and plenty of it."

ITALIAN PRESS LASHES ROOSEVELT'S MESSAGE

President's Request to Extend Draftee's Period of Service Criticized

United Press

ROME, July 23.—Persident Roosevelt's message to Congress asking extension beyond one year of the period of service for draftees, yesterday resulted in a new outburst of criticism in the Italian press against the American Chief Executive.

"The United States Congress and public know well that there is no reason whatever for placing the United States on a war footing," Il Messaggero declared. "But there is at present no limit to President Roosevelt's war measures and he speaks of exceptional circumstances demanding exceptional measures. In reality, the only danger for America is created by President Roosevelt's measures."

The Popolo di Roma stated that "to obtain completion of his warlike campaign, President Roosevelt speaks of the dangers menacing America. In his message to Congress, President Roosevelt attempts to convince the public of the necessity for strengthening the Army while in reality, throughout the entire United States, Mr. Roosevelt alone sees the nation in danger. Until yesterday the public did not feel menaced at all," it concluded.

WOMEN TO REPLACE MEN

Army Minister of Australia Says Hundreds Will Be Enlisted

Reuters

MELBOURNE, July 26.—The Army Minister, Percy Spender, announced today that hundreds of women would be enlisted to release men now staffing Australian military hospitals abroad. Women would be employed as clerks, cooks, wash orderlies, operating room attendants, nurses, etc. Only single women without dependents would be accepted.

There are nearly 12,000 trained hospital volunteers available in Australia. In hospitals in theaters of war three women will replace two men, who will thus be released for other duties.

PHYSICIAN PRAISES AID TO ISLE LEPERS

Work in Philippines Since American Occupation Lauded by Medical Expert

I.N.S.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Pioneers in the modern-day fight against leprosy are the Filipinos, according to Perry Burgess, president of the Leonard Wood (American Leprosy) Foundation. Today, the work being done by Filipino and American scientists make the Philippine Islands a center for research and treatment of the disease.

The anti-leprosy campaign began in earnest in the Philippines when the American Government took over the islands during the Spanish-American war of 1898. By 1904, a leper colony had been established, and a year later effective segregation was instituted.

One of the worst problems that the Philippine authorities had to contend with, particularly at first, was the reluctance of lepers to submit to treatment. The vast majority of them, Burgess said, had to be taken by force, and many a discouraged and frightened sufferer committed suicide rather than submit to treatment.

This difficulty was met, and is now being met by the Philippine Health Service, in two ways. First, information about the kind of treatment to be furnished is widely disseminated, so that the leper need no longer fear entering Culion, which is the largest of the Calamian island group set aside as a reservation for the victims of the disease.

Then, the Health Service attempts to make life within the reservation as normal as possible. This is mainly done by setting up practical farm colonies near the homes of the patients.

Mute evidence of the new attitude toward lepers, and of the new attitude of the lepers toward treatment, according to Burgess, is the wall of a room of an old Spanish fort which serves as the provincial health center in the Philippine city of Cebu. The wall is completely covered by knives, taken from the lepers by the health inspectors who committed them to custody. Lepers, in almost every case, no longer resist attempts to segregate them. They no longer need their knives.

One unfortunate result of the work done to combat leprosy in the Philippines, said Burgess, is that people think of the Philippines whenever they think of leprosy. As a result, they incorrectly assume that there is a disproportionate incidence of leprosy in the islands. Actually, Burgess pointed out, the rate is the same as that in any other Malay or oriental country, and is just about equalled by Columbia and Brazil.

GOVERNMENT OF VICHY OPENS SEAT IN PARIS

New Offices Established at Ministry of Interior by Count de Brinon

United Press

VICHY, July 22.—Count Fernand de Brinon, Vichy Ambassador-at-Large in Paris, yesterday opened up the French Government's new seat in Paris at the Ministry of the Interior, coincident with arrival of the new Minister, Pierre Pucheu.

Simultaneously, the French police moved back into the former Surete Nationale general headquarters which the German gestapo had taken over.

Jacques Benoist-Mechin also arrived in Paris and called at the German Embassy to reestablish contact with Otto Abetz, German Ambassador-at-Large in Paris, in an effort to ascertain whether negotiations can profitably be resumed now or whether all diplomatic action must be postponed during the Russo-German war.

Molotov's Wife Said Arrested

United Press

ROME, July 27.—The Messaggero today claimed hearing Leningrad radio announce that the wife of Viacheslav Molotov, Soviet Foreign Commissar, had been arrested. The Messaggero said, "according to the radio, Molotov's wife, who is War Commissar for Food, no longer is the fine example of Bolshevik womanhood she once was."
